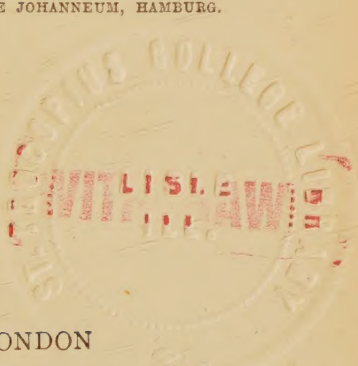
T. MACCI PLAVTI AVLVLARIA

WITH NOTES CRITICAL AND EXEGETICAL AND AN INTRODUCTION

BY THE LATE

WILHELM WAGNER, PH. D.

PROFESSOR AT THE JOHANNEUM, HAMBURG.



LONDON
GEORGE BELL AND SONS
CAMBRIDGE DEIGHTON BELL AND CO
1901

871
P5au.w

Cambridge:
PRINTED BY J. & C. F. CLAY, AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

17156

PREFACE

TO THE FIRST EDITION.

As the present work is intended to supply the wants of more than one class of readers, I think that on its completion a few words will not be superfluous in order to explain its origin and purpose.

In pursuance of my studies on the Aulularia, a first specimen of which I had given in my dissertation de Plauti Aulularia (Bonn, Marcus, 1864), I had as well as I could emended the text and collected much material towards an exegetical commentary. Easter 1865 I visited London to collate the MS. J in the British Museum. On my return to Manchester, I went over the text again, and in this way a critical commentary was at last produced which appeared to give a clearer idea of the textual history of this play than could be had from any former edition. In June, I went again to London, and there it was that Professor Key kindly encouraged me to publish my labours. Now, although I had at first planned nothing more than a critical edition of the Aulularia, I soon found that my book would be more useful and perhaps agreeable to a larger range of readers, if an exegetical commentary should be added. It may be that only a few scholars will care for the critical notes, but surely many students will desire to have explanatory notes, without which the edition would to them be quite useless. As it is my opinion that no Latin author can be advantageously explained in the same language, I have written my notes in English, though I am well aware that in so doing I must rely on the forbearance and kindness of my readers, who will, I hope, not be very strict in the case of a foreigner whose acquaintance with the English language is not of very long standing. I may say that I have read and studied all the commentaries ever written on the Aulularia, and there scarcely can be anything of importance in them which would not be found in my notes. But at the same time, I have tried to avoid all unnecessary and superfluous erudition which seemed to have no connexion with the explanation of the text. On the whole I venture to hope that a student will after the perusal of my notes be sufficiently prepared for a critical study of the Plautine comedies. I have not thought my commentary to be a place wherein to mention the names of former commentators whenever I am indebted to them for explanations or quotations; there is indeed a great deal of exegetical matter running through all commentaries, and well-known to every scholar; special mention has, however, been thought necessary in exceptional cases where peculiar honour seemed due to the discovery of difficult explanations or happy quotations. Whether the original additions and illustrations given in the present commentary will be thought an improvement or not, I must leave to my readers to decide.

In the Introduction I have chiefly endeavoured to give a brief, but clear and sufficient summary of the laws of Plautine prosody. This seemed the more necessary as the results of the investigations of Ritschl and other German scholars on this subject are either totally unknown or, at best, but partially known in this country, and are moreover not easily accessible to the English student, they being scattered through Ritschl's Plautus and prooemia, and many volumes of German philological periodicals.

In concluding this preface, it gives me great pleasure publicly to acknowledge the manifold obligations which I owe to Dr Ernest Adams, who has not only kindly touched my English style in many a sore part, but to whose hints and suggestions both the Introduction and notes are greatly indebted.

Thus I dismiss my book, though I feel that it stands in need of much indulgence and forbearance—I venture to say that it would be better if I could have written it at a place more favourable to philological studies than Manchester.

RUSHOLME, NEAR MANCHESTER,
May, 1866.

The present work will be found to differ from the first edition in not a few respects. In the first place I have omitted the critical commentary which will appear in an amended shape in a critical edition to be published shortly. I have, however, revised the text with much care and have endeavoured to keep pace with the progress of Plautine studies, though I have found it impossible to quote all the treatises and works I have consulted. Let me hope that the re-issue of my Aulularia (which has been out of print for some time) will meet with the same favour as was so largely accorded to the first edition. If the second edition proves to be superior to the first, this should be mainly attributed to the greater facility I enjoy at my present place of residence for procuring more philological works, indispensable to the author of a work like this, than were within my reach at Cottonopolis. By more than one of my countrymen I have been accused of ignoring some treatise or some passage of a grammarian bearing upon the matter I treated of, when in reality the fault lay with the impossibility of procuring certain works at that time. In conclusion I may be allowed to observe that I have endeavoured to preserve calmness of tone and impartiality of judgment in discussing the various theories of Plautine prosody and the multifarious problems of Plautine criticism.

HAMBURG,
Easter, 1876.

INTRODUCTION.

ON LATIN PRONUNCIATION AS SEEN IN THE VERSES OF THE COMIC WRITERS.

p. xiii first ed.

ANYONE who undertakes the reading of Plautus and Terence on the sole strength of his acquaintance with the rules of prosody and versification observed by Virgil and Horace, will be sorely puzzled to scan the verses of the two comic poets: he will indeed find it no less difficult than Horace himself whose metrical principles are implied in the line legitimumque sonum digitis callemus et aure (A. P. 274). But the ears of those Romans for whom Plautus wrote his plays, were by no means the same as those of the contemporaries of Horace, and it would be more than an anachronism, it would be the greatest injustice to the old poets, if we were to measure their versification by the standard of the refined laws of the Augustan period, or to blame them for not having adapted their prosody to rules unknown to them. The principle which should guide us in our judgment of the verses of the comic poets, is pointed out by Cicero, Orator 55, 184 'comicorum senarii propter similitudinem sermonis sic saepe sunt abiecti[1], ut non numquam vix in eis numerus et versus intellegi possit[2],' and in another passage,

[1] This adjective involves no blame at all, being simply an equivalent to humilis, see Or. 57, 192 'ita neque humilem et abiectam orationem nec nimis altam et exaggeratam probat.'

[2] Priscian, who lived in the sixth century of our era, states in the commencement of his treatise de metris fabularum Terentii that some of his contemporaries vel abnegant esse in

Or. 20, 67 'apud quos [i.e. comicos poëtas], nisi quod versiculi sunt, nihil est aliud quotidiani dissimile sermonis[1].' These two passages should teach us how to deal with Plautine verses and language. Nevertheless, the truth was not found out for nearly two centuries after
p. xiv the publication of the first edition of Plautus, and the earlier editors did not hesitate to recognise Greek forms and imitations of Greek constructions in the style of Plautus; and as to metre and prosody, they either had no idea at all of their laws and did not greatly trouble themselves about them, or, at best, their notions were very vague and rather like presentiment than the full possession of truth itself. François Guyet, a French scholar of the 17th century, was the first to study the versification of the comic poets, and though his results were intermixed with a great many errors (as, indeed, it could not be otherwise), his works seem to have given the first impulse to Bentley, if we may argue from the fact that many of Bentley's emendations in Terence are already to be met with in Guyet's Commentarii, and that even some of his caprices occur there[2]. It is difficult to Terentii comoediis metra vel ea quasi arcana quaedam et ab omnibus semota sibi solis esse cognita confirmant (p. 418 Hertz). Priscian's own conceptions of the Terentian metres and prosody are, however, far from correct, thus bearing out Cicero's words that even the ancients themselves found it difficult to understand the metrical laws of archaic versification.

[1] Comp. Schuchardt, vokalismus des vulgärlateins I 50: in der komischen poësie spiegeln sich alle freiheiten der vulgären aussprache ab.—ibid. p. 57: das alterthümliche latein ist weiter nichts als vulgäres.

[2] It would seem that Bentley had read Guyet's work and noted down most of his emendations; years afterwards, when he published his own Terence, he appears to have forgotten the real author of a great many of the conjectures he found scattered over the margin of his copy, and as he approved of them, he imagined them to be his own. It would be interesting to possess Guyet's treatise de prosodia versuum Terentii et Plauti, which his sudden death did not allow him to finish. Guyet died in April 1655. His Commentarii in P. Terentii Comoedias VI were published at Strasburg, a. 1657; the text of his Plautus appeared at Paris 1658, in 4 vols., with the French translation of M. de Marolles.

speak too highly of Bentley's merits with regard to Plautus and Terence; but like most of his works, even his Terence was merely an extempore performance and bears the traces of haste: though for all this, it will continue to be one of the foremost works of classical philology. It would, however, be totally preposterous to think that Bentley's famous Schediasma furnishes the real key to the full understanding of Plautine prosody and metres. Gottfried Hermann, whom his excellent teacher Reiz[1] had early made familiar with Bentley's Terence, adopted and refined his views both in his editions of the Trinummus and the Bacchides, and in his Elementa doctrinae metricae (1816), where he has often occasion to speak of Plautine passages and to emend p. xv them. F. Ritschl, whose name will always be connected with that of Plautus, declares in his dedication of the Prolegomena to the Trinummus, that, next to the great Bentley, he considers Gottfried Hermann (whose pupil he was at Leipzig) as his sole guide in the criticism of Plautus. This admits, however, of many restrictions. Ritschl does not adhere to the same principles throughout his edition of Plautus. Many facts which he did not acknowledge in his Prolegomena, were admitted in the prefaces to the different parts of the second and third volumes, some even were tacitly given up. After the appearance of the Mercator (the ninth of the plays edited by Ritschl), his views underwent so radical a change that he was obliged to discontinue his work until further materials had been collected towards the history of archaic Latin. What he now holds as to Plautine prosody, etc. is developed in an excellent paper in the Rheinisches Museum vol. XIV p. 400 ss., and most of the proofs of his views are contained in the numerous prooemia, which it was his duty to write twice every year while professor at Bonn[1]. In the following sketch, Ritschl's theories have been duly weighed, though not adopted to the exclusion of all others, and proper regard has been paid to the discussions of Corssen, whose elaborate work on Latin pronunciation we have always quoted from the second edition.

[1] Reiz himself edited the Rudens in accordance with Bentley's principles, Lipsiae 1789; this was reprinted with a critical commentary by C. E. Schneider, Breslau 1824.—Gottfried Hermann edited the Trinummus, Lipsiae 1800, and the Bacchides, ibid. 1845.

But to return to the two passages quoted from Cicero,—we need not dwell upon the fact that for a full appreciation of Plautine metres and prosody it is indispensable to obtain a just idea of the earliest pronunciation of Latin. A search after this will not fail to throw much light on the earliest history of the Latin language; it will, at the same time, show that many forms now found in the so-called Romance languages were already anticipated in the popular speech of the epoch of Plautus and Terence. This accounts for the otherwise surprising fact that many of the latest forms of the Latin language are either perfectly identical with the earliest forms or must at least be traced back to the working of the same laws. This point is of great importance, but it has been greatly overvalued in the late Prof. Key's paper 'On the metres of Plautus and Terence' appended to his treatise on the Alphabet[2].

[1] In 1865, Ritschl accepted a professorship at the University of Leipzig. His views on Plautine prosody underwent some further change in 1869, when he published his Neue Plautinische Excurse, in which he attempts to remove many cases of hiatus in the verses of Plautus by means of the assumption that an ablatival D was still employed in the Latin language at the time of the second Punic war. See, for this, Corssen's work on Latin Pronunciation II p. 1005 sqq. and the Preface to my second edition of the Trinummus. In 1871, Ritschl published a second edition of the Trinummus, but without the Prolegomena of the first, which are now out of print and have become rather a scarce book.—C. F. W. Müller's work on Plautine Prosody (Berlin 1869, with an appendix —Nachträge—1871) is valuable on account of the materials collected with great industry: but Ritschl himself (in his new ed. of the Trinummus) speaks rather contemptuously of the author's critical sagacity, though Müller adheres mainly to the views set forth in Ritschl's own Prolegomena. See my pref. to the Trin., p. IV.

[2] Prof. Key's system of pro-

A. ARCHAIC LONG VOWELS.

In its most remote period, the Latin language abounded p. xvi in long and heavy vowels, while at a later period many of the endings which were originally long became weakened and were shortened. Some of these endings or suffixes are occasionally found long even in later writers, but a great many of these long quantities are still met with in Plautus and his contemporaries. They are, however, of rare occurrence in Terence, nay, some of them seem to have been shortened in the period dividing Plautus from Terence. In the following pages instances are given of those suffixes which are used by Plautus in their original long quantity: but the reader should bear in mind that Plautus is by no means consistent in attaching to these suffixes always the same (and no other) quantity; on the contrary, he allows himself considerable licence in treating them just as it suits his verse. This is, of course, very con-nouncing Latin verse may be called a contractive one, since he makes use of a contracted pronunciation of certain words even where metrical reasons (at least those generally accepted) would well admit of the uncontracted forms. E. g. Prof. Key tells us to read poēta cūmprim ām adscrībend āppulit' ('Alphabet' p. 146), there being no metrical reason at all, why we should not admit a dactyl – ◡ ◡ (prim āni) instead of the spondee prim ām. I am afraid that a general application of this system would reduce Plautine lines to a monotony quite detrimental to the charm of conversational vivacity we find in the comic writers. In his work on 'Language: its Origin and Development,' Prof. Key has stated his views at greater length, and we have occasionally referred to some of his arguments, though we have found it impossible to enter into a full discussion of his views, which do not seem to be shared by any other scholar.—It is scarcely necessary to add that Prof. Key's theories of 'scansion' are quite at variance with the precepts of the ancient grammarians, whose authority is unduly set aside by him. We may here quote the locus classicus in Marius Victorinus II p. 80 sq. ed. Keil: similiter apud comicos laxius spatium versibus datum est...ita dum cotidianum sermonem imitari nituntur, metra vitiant studio, non imperitia, quod frequentius apud nostros quam Graecos invenies. See also the extracts from Juba in Rufinus de metris comicis p. 2711 P. = p. 562 Keil.

venient to the poet himself, but often proves a source of embarrassment to his reader. But then again, Plautus composed his dramas for oral recitation, and not for perusal in the student's closet.

1. In declension we find the following deviations from the common usage of the Augustan period:

a in the nom. and voc. sing. of the first declension was originally long in old Latin, as it is indeed in Sanskrit and in many cases in Greek. That it must have been so, might, even in default of other proofs, have been concluded from the simple fact that the genitive āi would be left unaccounted for, but for the length of the nom. a (Ritschl, Rhein. Mus. XIV 400). But we actually find it long in three lines of the old inscriptions on the sepulchres of the Scipios.

honós famá virtúsque glória átque ingénium terrá Públi prognátum Públió Cornéli.
quoiei vitá defécit, nón honós honóre[1].

(Ritschl, ibid.) Nay, Bücheler shows (jahrbücher für classische philologie 1863 p. 336 s.) that in all the Saturnians which have come down to us, the nom. and voc. a is constantly long. We find it long again in some lines of Livius Andronicus, Naevius and Ennius (Ann. 148. 484. 319. 433. 305 ed. Vahlen), and in a hexameter in the sepulchral inscription which Plautus is said to have composed for himself: xvii scaénast désertá: dein Risus Ludu' Iocusque.

It is therefore by no means surprising to find that Plautus uses the same quantity in several passages of his comedies. This fact had already been acknowledged by Lindemann in Trin. 251[2], and in about a dozen passages by [1] See also Corssen II 449. The fourth instance of a long a in the nom. sing. quoted by Corssen from the epitaphs of the Scipios is very doubtful. I should scan it mors pérfecít tua ut éssent | ómniā brévia.

See also Wordsworth, 'Spec. of Early Latin,' p. 31.

[2] De prosodia Plauti p. X in his second edition of the Captivi, Miles gloriosus and Trinummus, Lipsiae 1844. The last editor of the Trinummus, Prof. J. Brix, gives the passage

Weise[1], but it was again rejected by Ritschl. Nevertheless, Prof. Key was right not to be daunted in stating the fact, Lat. Gram. § 88 p. 13 (5th ed). Corssen gives three instances of it in Plautus in the first edition of his work on Pronunciation I p. 330: Fleckeisen has as many as eighteen in his excellent paper on this subject, but there probably remain more to be discovered[2].

us in the nom. of the second declension is occasionally found long in Naevius:

dein pólléns sagíttis íncluta*ús* arquítenens sanctús Delphís prognátus Pútiú*s* Apóllo[3].

There are, however, no trustworthy instances of this quantity to be met with in Plautus; but he uses sometimes būs (dat. and abl. plur.) as a long syllable: see Merc. 900. 919. Most. (842?) 1118. Men. 842. Rud. 975.[4] in question in accordance with Lindemann, though he seems unaware of this precedence. The instance which Prof. J. Brix quotes from Ter. Hec. prol. 2 is very doubtful.

[1] See his index in his edition of Plautus, Quedlinburg 1838.

[2] See Fleckeisen, Krit. Misc. (Leipzig 1864) p. 11—23 and Corssen II 451—454. The results of Fleckeisen's and Bücheler's investigations have been attacked by C. F. W. Müller, Prosody p. 3—10; see also Ussing's Prolegomena to Plautus (Havniae, 1875), p. 195: 'A casus recti primae declinationis et neutri pluralis ceterarum nisi vitiose a Plauto produci non potuisse Müllero credo; unum exceperim; nam in masculinis nominibus primae declinationis a finale interdum productum videtur, ut Sosiā Amph. 434, 435, Antidamā Poen. 958: nam Antidamas (quod codices praebent) Plautina forma non videtur. Leonidā Asin. 733 vocativus est.' The most trustworthy instances of the long quantity of the a of the nom. sing. are as follows—ne epístulā quidem úlla sit in aédibus Asin. 762.

potuít: plus iam sum líberā quinquénnium Epid. III 4, 62.
inéptiā stultítiaque adeo et témeritas Merc. 26.
haec mi hóspitalis tésserā cum illó fuit Poen. V 2, 92.

and Palaestrāne Rud. 237 (comp. Lachm. on Lucr. p. 406), Cantharā Epid. IV 1, 40.—It would be perverse to change the text in these passages, though Müller does so.—The passages in which a of the neuter plural would seem to be used long, are less clear: see Müller, Pros. p. 11—13.

[3] See Naevi de bello punico reliquiae, ed. Vahlen, p. 14.

[4] It should be understood that the above references al-

This quantity admits of an easy explanation. The Latin suffix bus corresponds to the Sanskr. bhyas, and would appear to have been long by way of contraction; and indeed the long quantity remained for ever in nobīs and vobīs, in which bīs is the same suffix as bus (Corssen I 169. II 49, and chiefly p. 498 sq., where the Plautine instances are discussed). Virgil, Aen. IV 64, has pectoribūs inhians, in seeming imitation of the archaic prosody: see Nettleship in Conington's Virgil III p. 468.

The ending or in nouns of the third declension is frequently long. That it was originally long, might readily be concluded from the genitive ōris and from a comparison with the Greek ωρ. Thus we have sorōr Poen. I 2, 29. 151. 194. IV 2, 73. Epid. V 1, 50. Bacch.
p. xviii 1140. uxōr Stich. 140. As. 927. The same is the case with the comparatives stultiōr Bacch. 123, auctiōr Capt. 782, longiōr Amph. 548, vorsutiōr Epid. III 2, 35[1]. It seems, therefore, but natural that we should find the neuter longiūs Men. 327, on which passages Brix's note may be compared. C. F. W. Müller, Pros. p. 55—57, alters the passage quoted in support of this quantity: wrongly, as we think. Comp. also Bücheler's treatise on Latin Declension, p. 4. Corssen II 500. 507.

er would seem to be long in pater Aul. 772. Trin. 645[2]. Poen. V 5, 15. It has the same quantity in three passages in Virgil, Aen. V 521. XI 469. XII 14. (Nettleship ap. Conington, III 467.) The fact is accounted for by Prof. Key, Lat. Gram. p. 437. Phil. Essays p. 86. But I have now yielded to Corssen's objections II 502 sq. and corrected these two passages.

ēi. Originally the e in the gen. and dat. sing. of the fifth declension was always long[3]. Thus we have fidēi Aul. 575. It may be added that the datives mihi tibi ways apply to the readings of the mss., which are however generally altered by Ritschl.

[1] Ritschl, Proll. Trin. CLXXV. Müller, Pros. p. 42—44. This peculiarity of archaic prosody was likewise imitated by Virgil; see Nettleship, as quoted before, p. 466 sq.

[2] According to the reading of the Ambrosian ms.

[3] See Key, L. G. § 147, and Lachmann on Lucr. p. 151.

sibi are used both as iambs (which is their original quantity) and pyrrhichs. Ritschl had originally doubted the possibility of employing them as iambs in iambic and trochaic metre, but his theories have been refuted by A. Spengel, Plautus p. 55 sqq.

2. I will now proceed to enumerate those terminations in conjugation which sometimes preserve their original long quantity contrary to the general usage of the Augustan period.

In Plautus' prosody all those endings may be long in which an original vowel is contracted with the root-vowel of the verb. Thus Plautus has not only

ās ēs īs = ais eis iis which even later times did not deviate from, but we find in his verses the third persons analogously long:

āt ēt īt = ait eit iit.

This is admitted on all sides; see Key, Lat. Gram. p. 428, who quotes Ritschl's Proll. Trin. CLXXXIII. Prof. Key justly adds: 'There are not wanting similar examples in Virgil and Horace; but editors and teachers complacently get over the difficulty by attributing the unusual length to the so-called principle of caesura, or to poetical licence.' We may notice the same error in Parry's Introduction to Terence p. LV, where the subjunctive augeāt (Ter. Ad. prol. 25) is attributed to the influence of 'ictus:' but the ending at, just as well as bāt in the imperf., was originally long, as will be seen from the second persons ās bās and the plural āmus ātis, and appears therefore in its real p. xix quantity in the passage alluded to. Thus we have fuāt and sciāt in Plautus, and soleāt in Horace (Serm. I 5, 90). It is the same with the imperfects ponēbāt (Enn. Ann. 314), amittebāt (Virg. Aen. v 853)[1], and erāt (Hor. Serm. II 2, 47). It is the same with the ending et of the subjunctive (both present and imperfect)[1]. The ending et of the future belongs, of course, to the same series[2].

[1] Lucian Müller thinks that the passages from Virgil should be corrected according to the authority of some mss. See his observations on the whole subject of lengthened endings, de re metr. p. 326—333. See also Nettleship, l. c. p. 468.

Nay, even the suffix it in the present of the so-called third conjugation was originally long, e. g. Plautus has percipīt Men. 921, and Ennius ponīt (Ann. 484). Hence we should not be surprised to find similar unusual long vowels in Horace (agīt Serm. II 3, 260. fugīt Od. III 24, 5. defendīt Serm. I 4, 82) and in Virgil (sinīt Aen. X 433. facīt Ecl. VII 23. petīt Aen. IX 9). An explanation of this quantity is given by Corssen, II 492: it will at once be understood by comparing the Latin and Greek forms of λέγω and lego:

λέγω legō
λέγεις legīs or legeis [ei = ī][3] λέγει(τ) legīt or legeit.

We find the same quantity again in the third pers. sing. perf. Once, it is even expressed by the spelling ei = ī[4] Merc. 530, where the ms. A gives redicit, and it is well established by many instances in Plautus and Terence[5], to which we have to add about eight different examples from Virgil[6], Horace and Ovid.—The same remark app. xx plies to the subjunctive ending erīt, the fut. perf., īt in [1] I may quote an instance of this quantity from the Pseudulus, v. 58:

cum eó simul me mítterēt. ei reí dies.
In this line, Ritschl and Fleckeisen insert leno after me and consider simul to be monosyllabic. This word seems however not indispensably necessary, and I am inclined to read the words in accordance with the mss. Prof. Sauppe proposes to read: cum eó simitu mitterer (ind. schol., Gott. 18$\frac{5}{5}\frac{5}{5}$ p. 4).

[2] Most of these originally long syllables were first pointed out by Fleckeisen, neue jahrbücher LXI 18 ss.

[3] Compare scribīs Hor. Serm. II 3, 1.

[4] For inscriptions see E. Hübner's Index in the C.I.L. I p. 601.

[5] Corssen II 493 sq. gives a sufficient number.

[6] See Nettleship, l. c., p. 469. Wherever archaic quantities occur in the later poets, they should be considered as the result of imitation of the earlier writers. We may add that the original long quantities are admitted by the later poets quite exclusively in arsi, i. e. when the metrical accent falls upon the ending in question.

sīt velīt mavelīt, nay even to the simple future erīt ('he will be') Capt. 208 and bit in vaenibīt Most. 1160[1].

In the passive, the shortening propensities of the Latin language displayed themselves chiefly in the first person of the singular. In Plautus we find sometimes the original quantities ōr ār[2], nay ferār is met with as late as Ovid (Met. VII 61). Analogously, the endings er and rer in the subj. were originally long.

It may finally be remarked that es ('thou art') is invariably long in the prosody of the comic poets.

B. IRREGULAR SHORTENING OF LONG FINAL VOWELS.

All these long vowels are, however, of but occasional occurrence in Plautus and Terence—they are, indeed, nothing more than a few scattered remnants of a period of the language, which was rapidly waning and dying away. The general character of the language in the time of Plautus was quite different. A destructive element had already commenced its powerful influence upon the language, and had already deeply affected and altered the original quantity of many endings and even of many root-vowels of Latin words.

The accent in Latin never falls on the last syllable, and its tendency was to destroy the length of this last syllable[3], especially in case the word was disyllabic and had a short penult.

[1] See Corssen, I 496. C. F. W. Müller, Pros. p. 705, is against Corssen, whose work he styles 'the most impure source of Plautine prosody.'

[2] Corssen, I 501. See Aul. 214, 230.

[3] 'The latter part of a word is naturally liable to a less careful pronunciation.' Key, Trans. of the Phil. Soc. 1857 p. 295. Benary (Röm. Lautl. p. 1) considers as one of the most characteristic features of the Latin language 'die schwächung des auslautes, dem consonantismus wie dem vocalismus nach.' Comp. Quintilian, Inst. Or. XI 3, 33: dilucida vero erit pronuntiatio, si verba tota exierint, quorum pars devorari, pars destitui solet, plerisque extremas syllabas non perferentibus, dum priorum sono indulgent. We need not remind the reader that the same cause has by its powerful opera-

We find, therefore, in Plautus a greater number of instances in which the above-mentioned archaic long vowels have been shortened than where they still retain their original quantity—and of this phenomenon we should attribute the main cause to the influence of the accent. But the development, having once commenced, did not stop there; on the contrary, many short quantities are to be found in the comic poets which were either entirely rejected or but exceptionally admitted by later poets.

p. xxi I shall first speak of the final vowels occasionally shortened in the rapid pronunciation of the times between the second and third Punic wars.

It will be observed that all the instances which we are about to produce represent disyllabic words which are used as pyrrhichs, instead of their original iambic prosody. This could never have taken place, had they been pronounced with the accent on the last syllable.

The long a of the first declension was not only shortened in the nom. and voc. (as it remained indeed ever afterwards), but even in the ablative, e.g.

> pró mală víta fámam extolles, pró bonă partam glóriam.
> Ennius ed. Vahlen p. 94.

The same happened to the o of the dat. and abl. sing. of the second declension, e.g. the abl. domo stands as a pyrrhich in the following two instances:

> unde éxit? :: unde nísi domō :: domŏ? :: mé vide :: etsi vídeo.
> Mil. gl. 376[1].

> domŏ quém profugiens dóminum apstulerat, véndidit.
> Capt. prol. 18.

In the abl. ioco the final o is shortened Bacch. 75, where the reading of the mss. is as follows:

> símulato me amáre :: utrum ego istuc iócŏn adsimulem an sério?

tion destroyed the inflexional endings of the English language, which shares the peculiarity of the Latin with regard to the slurred pronunciation of unaccented last syllables.

[1] See Ritschl, praef. Stich. XVII. But see also Brix's note in his recent edition of the Miles gl., p. 138.

and so Fleckeisen gives the line, while Ritschl writes utrum ego iocón id simulem an sério.

ero (dat. of erus, master) stands as a pyrrhich Aul. 584 and Most. 948. bonŏ is another example of the same kind:

haéc erít bonŏ génere nata, níl scit nisi verúm loqui.
Persa 645[1].

malŏ falls under the same head:

malŏ máxumo suo hercle ílico, ubi tántulum peccássit.
Cas. IV 4, 6.

sét etiam unum hoc éx ingenio málŏ malum inveniúnt suo.
Bacch. 546.

cavĕ sís malŏ. quíd tu málum nam mé [anapæstic].
Rud. IV 3, 12.

In the last passage, Fleckeisen alters the metre by inserting nunc after nam.

The abl. modŏ (which should not be confounded with the particle) stands as a pyrrhich Aul. 589: p. xxii eŏdem módŏ servóm ratem esse amánti ero aequom cénseo, and Pseud. 569, where the mss. read as follows[2]:

novŏ módŏ, novom aliquid ínventum adferre áddecet.

In this case, the words novo modo should be taken as a proceleusmatic, a foot which is very frequent in the first place of a senarius (see Ritschl, Proll. Trin. CCLXXXIX). With the same quantity we have in the Trinummus 602 quó modŏ tu istuc, Stásime, dixti, nóstrum erilem fílium.

Lachmann (on Lucretius p. 116) calls the short quantity of this o 'mirabile:' Prof. Key, to avoid recognising a fact like this, proposes the monosyllabic pronunciation

[1] In this passage, Ritschl gives bono without the mark of ecthlipsis (Proll. CXLIV), i.e. he considers the final o to be shortened.

[2] Ritschl omits inventum and thus restores modo to its usual measure. I am glad to see that Fleckeisen does not follow his example.

mo, and to corroborate this conjecture, he appeals to the Roman way of abbreviating the word: mō ('Alphabet' p. 141). But I may observe, that by abbreviating the orthographical representation of a word, nothing is prima facie insinuated as to its pronunciation[1]. Prof. Key's other argument is drawn from the Romance languages, where quomodo appears in the shape of como come comme: it would, no doubt, prove that quomodo really sounded like quomo (como) in the latest period of the Latin language, but would it explain the real nature of the general law whose slow but steady working at last degraded full words and endings to poor cripples? We recognise in Plautine prosody the beginnings and the first germs of a depravation of the Latin language, which attained its final development in the Romance languages. We need not, therefore, hesitate to explain Romance forms from such shortened endings as are found in Plautus, but great caution should be used in remodelling the pronunciation of Plautine forms upon the analogy of Romance corruptions. The spirit of modern philology requires that the order of time should be observed and forbids us to blend the peculiarities of the different
p. xxiii periods of any language[2]. If, however, any further proof

[1] If e. g. we were to take the copy-books of German students as the indication of their pronunciation, we should arrive at a great many surprising discoveries in German pronunciation; but unfortunately, they would all be repudiated by the actual pronunciation of those students themselves.

[2] The sense of these words is borrowed from Prof. Key himself ('On the so-called A privatiuum' p. 8).—The list of contracted words, given by Prof. Key ('Alphabet' p. 146—148), would require a great many additional observations, if the present writer really intended to examine each separate instance. But he has no intention to criticise all his predecessors, nor does he think it necessary always to state when he deviates from the views of other scholars. He would, however, ask his readers not to think him unacquainted with really excellent labours in the same field, even when he does not expressly quote them; but taking notice of everything would too much increase this Introduction, which the author first thought he could entirely dispense with. He may, however, state that almost the same views as those given here, will should be required that in modo the final o was actually shortened, the word not being contracted to a monosyllable, it suffices to quote Horace, Serm. I 9, 43:

cúm victóre sequór. Maecénas quó modŏ técum?

In this case, the monosyllabic pronunciation quômo would violate the metre. And if we find the o shortened by so nice a judge of Latin prosody as Horace, we shall certainly not hesitate to acknowledge the same fact in the conversational language of Plautus[1].

A whole class of words belongs to the same category as the ablatives just mentioned: viz. prepositions and adverbs, in which the final a and o were originally ablative-endings. Thus we have contra, which is read with be found in Brix's Introduction to his edition of the Trinummus (Leipzig, 1864), and that he is frequently indebted to Prof. Brix for the instances quoted, though the order and arrangement in Brix's book differ totally from the present sketch. The chapters of Ritschl's Prolegomena which deal with the same matters, are still very useful for furnishing examples of all kinds, but as to the doctrine itself propounded in them, there is not one page where Ritschl himself could now dispense with many alterations. We should not, however, forget that it is due to Ritschl himself that we now possess sounder theories than in the year 1848.

[1] In his work on 'Language: its Origin and Development' (published 1874), Prof. Key has repeated his theory of the pronunciation of quomodo as quomo, 'notwithstanding the dissent of Dr Wagner' (p. 131), but without replying anything to the argument I had deduced from Horace. I may, therefore, be excused for maintaining my own theory, as my arguments would seem to be no less valid now than they appeared to me ten years ago. I may add that Schuchardt has dealt with the Romance forms in his work on Vulgar Latin, II 393; but while Prof. Key treats mo as 'an instance of a silent d,' Schuchardt proves from the Corsican cumed and the Lombard comðd (which is also contracted into cmðd), that mo owes its origin not to contraction (modo moo mo) but to apocope (mod mo). The disappearance of the final syllable (o) is in agreement with the general law, according to which a long vowel first becomes short, being attacked as it were by a kind of consumption, which terminates in death, when it falls off altogether. The final stage is that of the Romance languages, the middle stage is traceable in Plautus and the Augustan poets.

a short a in Prudentius and Ausonius[1], though it preserves its legitimate quantity in Plautus and the classic poets. In frustra the a is shortened by Prudentius and Martial[2], and the same quantity has been established for Plautus by Brix[3] in five instances, where Ritschl and Fleckeisen had, however, removed it by somewhat violent alterations.—All adverbs in e were originally ablatives[4], and their final e was therefore long; it became, however, short in many cases; it remained so ever afterwards
p. xxiv in bene and male[5], while it was common in fere; but in Plautus we find probĕ with the same short quantity (Poen. v 5, 1. Pseud. 603. Persa 650)[6]. The adverb cito had its final o common in all periods of Latin poetry[7].

The ablative-ending e of the third declension was originally long, e. g. in the following line from the sepulchral inscription of Scipio Barbatus:

Gnaivód patrẽ prognátus, fórtis vír sapiénsque.

[1] See Luc. Müller, de re metr. p. 341.

[2] L. Müller, ibid.

[3] See his Introduction to the Trinummus, p. 18. Müller, Pros. p. 13 sq. Corssen II 454.

[4] See Corssen, I 200.

[5] See Key, L. G. § 770.

[6] M. Crain, Plaut. Stud. p. 10. In the line from the Persa Ritschl expressly acknowledges the short final e. See also Corssen II 470.

[7] For Plautus see Ritschl, Proll. Trin. p. CLXIX; for later poets L. Müller, de re metr. p. 335, and on the whole point Key, L. G. § 772 with note. Corssen II 480.

Ritschl and Fleckeisen admit even prospere in an anapaestic line, Pseud. 574. It is, however, highly probable that this line should be read as a trochaic octonarius:

pró Iovis, ut mihi quídquid ago lepide ómnia prosperéque eveniunt.

The mss. give Iuppiter: I have followed Bücheler's emendation (Rhein. Mus. XV p. 445).—In another anapaestic line, Mil. gl. 1024, Ritschl reads with the mss.

age, age, út tibi máxumĕ cóncinnumst,

M. Haupt proposes to transpose the words as follows age máxume utí tibi cóncinnumst.

It is difficult to decide how far a licence would extend in the so-called 'free' metres; yet in the first instance we are entitled to remove it because trochaic metre follows; in the second I should not admit Haupt's conjecture.

In the comic poets, however, this ending is, generally speaking, short[1].

i in the ablative of the third declension appears shortened in the anapaestic line from Plautus' Bacchides 1108 igitŭr parī fortuna, aétate ut sumus, útimŭr :: sic est. séd tu.

This is the reading of the mss. adopted by Fleckeisen.

The i of the dative is shortened in canĭ:

cánĭ quoque etiam adémptumst nomen...
Epid. II 2, 50.

The i of the nom. plur. appears short in merĭ:

merĭ béllatores gignuntur, quas híc praegnatis fécit.
Mil. gl. 1077.

u of the fourth is shortened in manŭ Trin. 288. It is the same with the e of the fifth, which is occasionally found short, e.g. Poen. IV 2, 68 Fídĕ non melius créditur. So also Mil. gl. 1369, fídĕ nulla ésse te.

In the datives mihi tibi sibi the final i was originally long and is still found so in Plautus and Terence, though both have it also short. Even the usage of the later poets was never constant, and the i in these words was always common[2]. We have noticed this point in a previous place. p. XXV

In the same way we find the genitive-ending i of the second declension shortened in the words eri (=domini) Mil. gl. 362. virĭ Ter. Phorm. v 3, 4. bonĭ Truc. II 4, 78 (= 428 G.), and novĭ ibid. II 4, 32 (= 382 G.). pretĭ Mil. gl. 1061. modĭ Poen. v 4, 103.—malĭ (nom. plur.) occurs Pseud. 142 (Fleck.)—the i of the locative appears short-

[1] See Corssen, II 462, who has reproduced the instances of a long ē in the ablative sing. collected by Bücheler and myself (Rh. Mus. XXII 114 sq.), some of which are, however, extremely doubtful. See also Ussing, Proll. p. 195, who says 'his in locis si quis editor constantiae causa aut i aut ei [the old termination of the abl.] scribat, vituperari vix possit.' This is pretty much in agreement with C. F. W. Müller, Pros. p. 15—18.

[2] See L. Müller, de re metr. p. l. p. 334.

ened in domĭ (Mil. gl. 194. Most. 281. Trin. 841. Aul. 73. Pompon. Ribb. com. p. 201)[1]. It may finally be added that in many cases homo and in most cases ego stand as pyrrhichs[2] (Ritschl, Proll. CLXVI. CLXIX).

I shall now enumerate the verbal endings in which the prosody of the comic poets allows short final vowels contrary to the general usage of the Augustan period. Here again we may notice that the short quantities are limited to disyllabic words of original iambic prosody.

The final a of the imperative of the first conjugation[3] appears short in rogă:

quándo vir bonus és, responde, quód rogó. :: rogă quód lubet.
Curc. v 3, 30.

úbi lubĕt, rogă : réspondebo, níl reticebo quód sciam.
Men. 1106.

p. xxvi satis sí futurumst :: rógă me vigintí minas.
Pseud. 114.

rógă velitne an nón uxórem...
Ter. Hec. IV 1, 43 (=558 Fl.).

rogă círcumducat : heús tu :: at hic sunt múlieres.
Most. 680.

rogă, númquid opus sit :: tú qui zonam nón habes.
Poen. v 2, 48.

amă stands with this quantity Curc. I 1, 38 iuvĕntúte et pueris líberis, amă quód lubet.

The same short quantities are found in the following imperatives of the second conjugation:

cavĕ[4]:

Hégio, fit quod tíbi ego dixi : glíscit rabies : cávĕ tibi.
Capt. III 4, 26.

[1] Even the nom. plur. ae is shortened in a line of the Bacchides (1139), if we credit Ritschl's text. The line is however better divided into two separate parts, and the words stultae ac malae videntur are to be considered as an iambic dim. catal. See Spengel, de vers. cret. usu Plautino p. 24.

[2] egō Aul. 454. 562 (?).

[3] Faërnus observes on Ter. Hec. IV 1, 43 that Martial has pută: see L. Müller, de re metr. p. 340.

[4] See Hor. Serm. II 3, 38. 177. 5, 75. Ep. I 13, 19. Prop. I 10, 21.

atque aúdin :: quid vis? :: cávĕ siris cum fília.
Epid. III 3, 19.

cavĕ praéterbitas úllas aedis quín roges.
Epid. III 4, 1.

omítte, Lude, ac cávĕ malo :: quid, cávĕ malo?
Bacch. 147.

The same quantity will be found in the Aulularia (v. 90. 600. 610. 652). It is, however, very probable that the final e of cave was at a very early time entirely dropped, au being pronounced as a diphthong. This view rests on Cicero de div. II 40 : cum M. Crassus exercitum Brundisi imponeret, quidam in portu caricas Cauno advectas vendens 'cauneas' clamitabat, dicamus, si placet, monitum ab eo Crassum, 'caveret ne iret.' (The same anecdote is related by Pliny, N. H. XV 19.) But even the entire dropping of the final e presupposes a former shortening of the vowel, at least if we may trust the laws laid down by the science of comparative philology. We find the same process in other forms derived from cave-, e. g. cau(i)tum cau(i)tor cau(i)tio: it is the same with fau(i)tum fau(i)tor: but in all these words there is reason[1] to assume that Plautus still used the full forms p. xxvii cavitum cavitor etc., as shown by Fleckeisen, ep. crit. XXI[2]. In Plautus' time, we find the shortening process in its full vigour and working; in later times (and we should not forget that there are more than 100 years between Plautus and Cicero) the dropping of those shortened vowels seems to have set in already. The conjecture that after a consonantal u vowels first began to [1] cavitum occurs twice in the lex agraria a. 643 : C. I. L. I 200, 6. 7.

[2] We may add that even caveto would seem to follow this analogy in two lines in Plautus:

móx quom Saureám imitabor, cávĕto ne suscénseas.
Asin. II 2 105.

átque horunc verbórum causa cávĕto mi iratús fuas.
Capt. II 3, 71.

These passages are, however, very doubtful and have justly been altered by Fleckeisen, who writes cave tu instead of caveto.

be dropped, the ambiguous nature of this u giving rise to a diphthong, does not seem without foundation[1].

Another instance of a shortened e in an imperative of the second conjugation is tacĕ Aul. 325. Similarly we find tenĕ:

ádimit animam mi aégritudo : Stásime, ténĕ me :: vísne aquam?
Trin. 1091.

sín secus, patiémur animis aéquis. ténĕ sortém tibi.
Cas. II 6, 25.

v. 412 of the Aulularia furnishes us with a good example of the variable quantity of such imperatives, since we should there pronounce the first tene as a pyrrhich, but the second as an iamb. A somewhat analogous instance occurs in Ovid's line 'valē valĕ inquit et Echo' (see L. Müller, de re m. p. 308)[2]. We may further enumerate docĕ Aul. 431. vidĕ Trin. 763. Cas. II 6, 26, and iubĕ (see Ritschl, Proll. CLXV). It may be useful to add that the same quantity of the imperative -e of the sec. conj. occasionally reappears in the Augustan period, e.g. Ovid has favĕ (am. II 13, 21) and havĕ (am. II 6, 62), Persius (I 108) and Phaedrus (III 6, 3) have vidĕ. We may also p.xxviii quote Luc. Müller's words (de re m. p. 340) 'etiam hanc licentiam intendere christiani, apud quos inveniuntur attenuata finali time dimove praecave arce extorque percense.'

The imperatives of the fourth conjugation show the same shortening propensity. Thus we have venĭ (Persa 30) abĭ (Most. 66) redĭ (Aul. 81. 441. Truc. I 2, 106 = 210 Geppert).

It is not difficult to collect more instances of all the cases mentioned, but I think those given will suffice to convince even the most incredulous of the existence of [1] Compare Juvenal IX 120, where the ms. reading causis has been changed to cavĕ sis by Lachmann.

[2] A hexameter in a late sepulchral inscription in Burmann's Anthology gives the same prosody (II p. 154):
semper perpetuo valĕ, mi carissime coniux.
See Jo. Schrader's Emendationes, p. 218.

shortened final vowels in the prosody of the comic poets. I have not quoted any instances from Terence, but may be allowed to refer the reader to my Introduction to the Cambridge edition of 1869, p. 15 sq. I may also add that Prof. Key accounts for the apparent shortening of the imperatives and other suffixes by treating these words as monosyllables by way of contraction; see his 'Language, etc.' p. 470—473.

We shall now briefly enumerate other verbal endings which appear short in Plautine prosody contrary to the usage of the Augustan period.

An originally long i was shortened in the passive infinitive[1], e.g. darĭ (Plaut. Rud. 960. Ter. Ad. 311. Phorm. 261), patĭ (Aul. 719), loquĭ (Bacch. 1104): see Ritschl, Proll. CLXVIII. So also emĭ Epid. II 2, 116—a line which is read in Geppert's edition in a sadly corrupted state[2]. The same took place in the perf. act. dedĭ bibĭ stetĭ, and even in adtulĭ (Aul. 430) and occidĭ (ib. 705)[3].—o was shortened in the first persons eŏ agŏ volŏ sciŏ[4] sinŏ negŏ dabŏ erŏ cedŏ: in the same way we have iusserŏ Aul. 439, which may be compared to dixerŏ Hor. Serm. I 4, 104. oderŏ Ov. am. III 11, 35. Other instances of a shortened final o from later poets are given by

[1] Comp. fruĭ Anth. Lat. Mey. 1164, 2.

[2] Thus we have vehĭ and sequĭ in the 'sortes Praenestinae,' a number of hexameters composed in the popular prosody: see Ritschl, Rh. Mus. xv p. 396. As the i (or ei) became short, it could easily pass into a simple e: thus we have fiere in Ennius Ann. 15, a form also given by the cod. Put. of Livy XXVI 3, 13 in a solemn interrogation of the plebs: see H. A. Koch, Rh. Mus. XVI 120.

[3] These are examples derived from the so-called 'free' metres. Compare vicĭ Anth. Lat. Mey. 1157, 7. fecĭ ibid. 9. It is curious that the editor of the Anthology denies the short quantity of the final i in the perf. in another instance, 1165, 5 finibus Ítaliaé monuméntum vídi Vobérnae. A pentameter ends vixĭ dies 1203, 13. But shortenings like vicĭ fecĭ vixĭ would be inadmissible in Plautine prosody, as the original prosody of these words is not iambic.

[4] The ancient grammarians pronounced sco ('elisa i littera') in Virgil's line nunc scio quid sit amor: see Marius Vict. I p. 2472 P.

L. Müller, de re metr. p. 336. The imperative dato stands as a pyrrhich Bacch. 84, and it seems to have the
p. xxix same quantity in a line of Lucilius, if Lachmann's conjecture be right (L. Müller, l. c.). In Juvenal we have estŏ (VII 79) and in Martial respondetŏ (III 4, 7).

C. DROPPING OF FINAL CONSONANTS.

A careful reader of the Plautine comedies will soon find out that, for scanning these verses, he must very often free himself from the observance of the rules commonly taught under the head of positio. But at the same time he cannot fail to observe that an absolute negation of the laws of position in Plautus would render the case even worse, for then we should be at a loss how to explain many instances of naturally short vowels lengthened by position. Most of the cases in question will be explained by the following remarks.

The metres of Plautus and Terence testify a general tendency of the Latin language of their time to drop the final consonants of many words. This tendency was not, however, confined to Latin; on the contrary, we trace it in most of the dialects of ancient Italy. Thus, to give a few examples, we have vestikatu = vestigium, frehtu = frictum, facia = faciat in Umbrian[1].

[1] I may add that the same process has taken place in many modern languages. E. g. a modern Greek is at liberty to say πόδι or πόδιν (= πόδιον, foot), χέριν or χέρι, χάρι or χάρις, etc., nay in modern Greek popular poetry final consonants are very often cut off where they ought to stand, and even added where they have no grammatical title to appear.—The history of the English language furnishes abundant instances of all the same processes enumerated in this sketch of Plautine prosody: viz. the shortening of originally long vowels, the dropping of final consonants, the entire loss of whole inflexions. The English language is, in this respect, more instructive than many others, because, though flowing from a richly inflected language, it has now lost almost all its inflexions. It will, in general, be found that all the laws detailed in our Introduction are by no means arbitrarily assumed for a certain stage of the Latin language, but are in reality only special applications of the

It may be useful to premise that in many cases the Latin language, when first employed for literary purposes, had already lost many final consonants: e.g. from the original genitives p. xxx

mensa-is	servo-is	re-is we have after the loss of the final s

mensai	servoi	rei
mensae	servi	(rē)

The formation of the abl. sing. gives us another instance. Originally this case ended in d: mensad servod patred manud red: this d was however dropped there as well as in the adverbs faciled etc., which were originally ablatives. These losses are previous to Plautus' time, and in his language we find but obscure traces of them left[1]. We read in a few instances a nom. plur. of the sec. decl. in is[2], and the forms med and ted are still used by Plautus, not by Terence. (See note on v. 120.) We may now proceed to enumerate those instances where final consonants are dropped (i.e. do not count with regard to versification) in Plautus and Terence, contrary to the usage of the later or classical language.

m. We learn from Priscian I 38 (Hertz) 'm obscurum in extremitate dictionum sonat,' and Quintilian states the same IX 4, 40 '(m) parum exprimitur...neque enim eximitur, sed obscuratur.' On account of its weak sound, a final m was often neglected in writing both in nouns and verbs, as will be seen in numerous instances collected from the oldest inscriptions by Corssen I 267 sqq. This disregard of a final m seems to have been quite familiar to all the popular dialects of Latin throughout its different periods, and hence we should explain hexameters ending ardéntĕm lŭcérnam, iuvenílĕm fígúram (quoted from Meyer's Anthology 1223, 1. and 1171, 4 by Ritschl, Rhein.

general laws which govern the growth and decay of all forms of human speech.

[1] See also above, p. 10.

[2] See Ritschl, Rheinisches Museum IX 158 = Opusc. II 646—652.

Mus. XIV 379)[1]. We shall not therefore be surprised to find numerous instances in which a final m is entirely discarded in Plautine prosody, e.g. domum is to be pronounced as domu Aul. 148 etc. We shall not here give any special instances of this fact, but it will be useful to
p. xxxi draw the particular attention of our readers to the two words quidem and enim, which should frequently be pronounced as quide and eni[2] (Aul. 209. 496 etc.).

Even in later poetry, a final m was entirely disregarded in all cases where the next word began with a vowel, this being the last trace of a licence which had formerly extended over a larger territory.

As to s, we have a very memorable passage in Cicero's Orator 48, 161 'quin etiam quod iam subrusticum videtur, olim autem politius, eorum verborum quorum eaedem erant postremae duae litterae quae sunt in 'optumus' postremam litteram detrahebant, nisi vocalis insequebatur. ita non erat ea offensio in versibus quam nunc fugiunt poëtae novi. ita enim loquebamur 'qui est omnibu' princeps,' non 'omnibus princeps' et 'vita illa dignu' locoque,' non 'dignus[3].'

[1] A pentameter ends with the words úndecĭm post Anthol. 1203, 12: the final m should of course be dropt. As Ritschl observes, we need not assume the construction of post with an ablative in such a line as cunctorum haec soboli sedem post morte reliquit (Anthol. IV 394 Burm.). On Plaut. Bacch. 404 Pátrĕm sodălis ét magistrum hinc aúscultabo quám rem agat Ritschl observes—'Plautus sprach ohne zweifel und schrieb sehr möglicher weise pátre sodalis' (ib. p. 398).

[2] Prof. Key ('Alphabet' p. 142), Ritschl (Proll. p. CXL. CLIII) and Bergk (zeitschrift für die alterthumswissenschaft 1848 p. 1130) assume a monosyllabic pronunciation of quidem and enim. It would be preposterous to deny the possibility of such a fact,—and indeed some arguments, especially one alleged for enim by Bergk, seem strongly to point to it. But as it cannot be concluded on the evidence of the Plautine metres, we think it safer to follow a general theory which affords an equally satisfactory explanation, instead of assuming an exceptional pronunciation which would after all not be supported by entirely undoubted arguments. See also Key's 'Language' p. 132. 139.

[3] The truth of Cicero's observation 'quam nunc fugiunt poëtae novi' may be exemplified

This licence is known to every reader of Lucretius, and its extension may be shown by a line from Ennius' Annales (601 Vahlen)

tum lateralis dolor, certissimus nuntius mortis.

Corssen (I 286. 599) gives lengthy lists of names from inscriptions, many of which are as old as the Punic wars, and in which a final s is entirely omitted, and the same fact occurs again in inscriptions of the decline of the Roman empire[1]. It would, therefore, be very surprising if no traces of it were found in the prosody of the comic writers. As instances of it will be frequently met with in Plautus, we shall confine ourselves to some examples from the Aulularia. Thus we should pronounce minus = minu prol. 18. 19.

nimisque = nimique 61.
nimis = nimi 493.
prius = priu 206. p. xxxii latus = latu 415.
magis = magi 419.
ullus = ullu 419.
venimus = venimu 426.
moribus = moribu 500.

We shall now easily understand such endings of iambics as the following, all of which are taken from Terence's Hecyra: aúctŭs sit 334. deféssŭs sum 443. incértŭs sum 450. expértus sum 489. núllŭs sum 653. úsŭs sit 878. Comp. occidístĭs me Bacch. 313.

r was, in many instances, merely a substitute for an earlier s, and we should therefore be prepared to find that by comparing two lines of Ennius and Virgil. Aen. XII 115 we read Solis equi lucemque elatis naribus efflant, on which words Servius has the following note 'Ennianus versus est ordine commutato: funduntque elatis naribu' lucem.' (See Ennius ed. Vahlen p. 85 and the passage quoted there from Marius Victorinus.) The reason which induced Virgil to change the order of the words appears at once.

[1] See Schuchardt, on Vulgar Latin, II p. 445.

occasionally a final r is dropped. Thus we should pronounce soro (=soror) in a line from the Poenulus (1 2, 84) and in two short anapaestic lines from the Stichus (18 and 20):

Sátis nunc lepide ornátam credo, sóror, te tibi vidérier.

haec rés | vitae | me, sóror, | saturant—
ne lácru|ma, sóror, | neu túo id | animo—

Another line in the same play furnishes a fourth example of the same pronunciation (v. 68):

quíd agimús, soror, si óffirmabit páter advorsum nós :: pati—

In Terence we have the same, Eun. 1 2, 77

soror díctast : cupio abdúcere ut reddám suis.

This is the reading of the Bembine ms., and the prosody of -soro dict- is rightly explained by Faërnus in his note on the passage[1].

p.xxxiii The word color should be pronounced colo in the following line:

color vérus, corpus sólidum et suci plénum.
Ter. Eun. II 3, 27.

and amor loses its final r in Ter. Andr. 1 5, 26

amor, mísericordia huíus, nuptiárum sollicitátio.

pater follows the same analogy, e.g.

né tibi aegritúdinem, pater, párerem, parsi sédulo.
Trin. 316.

[1] Liber Bembinus quocum hic consentiunt omnes fere libri recentes—nec versus repugnat, si abicias r ex soror, ut primus pes sit anapaestus. Faernvs. —If we adopt Corssen's views (krit. beitr. zur lat. formenlehre, p. 399 s.), we should have to acknowledge the possible dropping of a final r only in those words where it had supplanted an original s. The sole exception to this law would be pater, and this instance has been neglected by Corssen.—Comp. also the Italian suora frate moglie. Schuchardt 1 p. 35 shows that the popular pronunciation dolo instead of dolor gave rise to a confusion between dolor and dolus in the later stages of Latin.

quid ego agam? pater iam hic me offendet miserum adveniens ebrium.
Most. 378 (according to the mss.)

pater venit. sed quid pertimui autem, belua.
Ter. Phorm. 601.

In these cases Prof. Key adopts a monosyllabic pronunciation = Fr. père. The possibility of such a pronunciation is questioned by Ritschl (Proll. Trin. CLV) whose words are as follows: 'In quibus (i.e. monosyllabis) si etiam pater habitum est, eius rei et rationem et documenta desidero. et omnium minime ex eo argumentandum esse quod, ut e soror monosyllabum soeur, ita e pater similiter factum esse père dicunt, vel hinc intelligitur quod, etsi frère quoque et mère e frater et mater contracta sunt, tamen haec latina nec contendit quisquam nec poterit contendere unquam monosyllaba fuisse.' This is, indeed, the best argument[1] which can be alleged against Prof. Key's way of pronouncing and contracting Latin words according to the analogy of the corresponding French forms; but has it been understood and appreciated by Mr Parry? This [1] I have left this passage exactly as it was written ten years ago. In his work on 'Language,' p. 133, Mr Key alludes to the above as follows—'In parricida for patricida we see already that change which led to the Fr. père from pater; and here again when pater appears in Latin comedy, as it sometimes does, to need a shortened pronunciation, it seems simpler to drop the t than to drop the r, as Dr Wagner proposes. Of course māter and frāter, with their long penults, were better able for a time to resist such compression, so that Ritschl's contention has I think little weight.' This is a remarkable instance of perverse argumentation. Mr Key apparently assumes a form somewhat resembling paer, to be pronounced like the Fr. père. But père is not, as he thinks, descended from pater, but from patrem, comp. the Italian padre, and see e. g. Brachet, Dict. étym. de la langue franç. p. 404. It is evident that père = patre(m) cannot represent pater. But what weight shall we attribute to the assertion of a modern writer of the 19th century that he considers this or that pronunciation to be 'simpler,' when this is quite contrary to the very evidence of the inscriptions and earliest mss.? See the instances collected by Schuchardt, On Vulgar Latin II 390 sq., where both pate and soro are quoted from ancient testimony.—See also Corssen II 656.

scholar accuses Ritschl of 'losing sight of the difference in quantity' between frater mater and pater[1]. But Ritschl's argument is entirely based on this very same difference. He means that, if we once begin to remodel the old pronunciation of Latin upon that of the French of the nineteenth century, we must be prepared to find a contracted pronunciation of mater and frater just as well as of pater, all these words being treated alike in French as mère frère père. But we never meet in Plautus and Terence with mater or frater as monosyllables, on account of their different quantity, and this fact proves that, as we cannot draw a correct inference from mère and frère as to mater and frater, we cannot
p. xxxiv. consequently rely upon the comparison of père and pater. And indeed in Plautus or other poets, we never find mate and frate = mater and frater, though in a Faliscan inscription we actually read MATEHECUPA, i.e. mater hic cubat[2]. But this is of course a low dialectic corruption[3].

The same theory accounts for the loss of a final t and d. An old form hau (instead of haud) owes its existence to this process (see note on v. 170): it remained in use until the time of Tacitus, if we may trust the authority of the Mediccan ms. In the Aulularia we have apu (= aput or apud)[4] in several instances (v. 83. 340. 736.), in the same we should pronounce caput = capu 422. 423.

erat = era 421.
ut = u 320.
decet = dece 136. (See M. Crain, Plaut. Stud. p. 10)[5].

[1] Parry's Introd. to Terence, XLVI.

[2] See Ritschl, Corp. Inscr. Lat. I 89, or Rh. Mus. XVI 603.

[3] We need not add how dangerous, nay how fallacious, it is to draw inferences from French with regard to the pronunciation of Latin. I do not hesitate to accede to Ritschl's assertion 'omnino tam esse lubricum hoc genus comparationis arbitror, nihil ut inde proficias.' (Proll., l. l.)

[4] For ape = apud see Schuchardt, On Vulgar Latin I p. 123.

[5] See also the instances given by Corssen II 650.

Thus we find dedit written as dede in three very old inscriptions, C. I. L. I 62^b. 169. 180.

The preposition ad is thus often degraded to a simple ă, e.g.

séd ăd postrémum. Poen. IV 2, 22.
quís ăd forés est? Amph. IV 2, 1.
et ăd pórtitóres. Phorm. I 2, 100.
ut ăd paúca rédeam. Phorm. IV 3, 43.

But it would be superfluous to accumulate more instances of this fact: we shall only add that even nt was entirely dispensed with in the rapid pronunciation of the time of Plautus. Bentley has quoted in his Schediasma (p. xv ed. Lips.) the following instances:

solent ésse = solĕt ésse.
student fácere = studĕ fácere.
habent déspicatu = habĕ déspicatu.

To these we might easily add other instances from Plautus, but to prove the existence of such forms as we assume here in the metres of the comic poets, we mention the p. xxxv.
form dedro, which in an inscription from Pesaro (C. I. L. I 177) stands as an equivalent to dederunt. This form is an unmistakable precursor of the corresponding Italian form diedero[1].

But precisely the same kind of form as is assumed exists in emeru = emerunt C. I. L. I 1148, in an inscription later than the second Punic war, but earlier than the Lex Julia de civitate sociis danda. This emeru forms the stepping-stone from emerunt to the secondary form emere.

The final letters m s r t d are more frequently dropped than two others which we have yet to mention. The first is l, which is sometimes cut off in the word semol (simul), e.g. Aul. 617. Mil. gl. 1137. Ter. Eun. II 2, 10. Haut. tim. IV 5, 55[2]: the second n, which is dropped in the word

[1] See Corssen, I 186 sqq., where further materials are produced from the Inscriptions.

[2] These instances are taken from Corssen II^1, 96 (II 643). Corssen contends (I^1, 79) that a final l was never dropped on account of its marked pronuntamen in such passages as Mil. gl. 585. Ter. Hec. v 4, 32. Ad. I 2, 65. Eun. v 2, 50. These two cases are, however, not generally acknowledged[1]. Sometimes the final n is dropped in such forms as rogan viden iuben etc., which stand in the place of the original forms rogasne etc.

It may finally be observed that all monosyllabic prepositions occasionally drop their final letters, e. g. in should be pronounced as ĭ Capt. IV 2, 97. Poen. IV 2, 82. 2, 13. 5, and oftener; ab as ă, and in the same way we might explain the short quantity of ex (e. g. Stich. 716. Merc. 176), though in many cases it suffices to assume the soft pronunciation of $x = s$[2]. This would explain the short quantity of senĕx in such lines as Aul. 293:

senĕx óbsonari fíliaï núptiis, ciation (I 219). He assumes therefore what he calls an 'irrational' pronunciation of the vowel of the first syllable. I do not hesitate to adopt Guyet's view as given in his note on Ter. Eun. II 2, 10 'tŏ l in simul eliditur, ut ultima syllaba corripiatur. idem factum Hecyrae IV 1.....idem et in senario illo Turpilii apud Nonium Marcellum [Ribb. Com. p. 94, v. 194] simul círcum spectat: ûbi praeter senéminem. apud Plautum Capt. III 4, 19 [551 Fl.] ibidem tŏ l in procul eadem causa elisum est in septenario: proîn tu ab istoc prócul recedas....' This is the reading in BJ, which Fleckeisen would certainly keep now, if he were to revise his first volume. At present he gives apscedas instead of recedas. Surely, Corssen would not say that the o in procul was 'irrational.' [He maintains that the u was 'irrational,' II 666: he would, therefore, pronounce procl.]

[1] The dropping of the final n in tamen may be inferred from the passages given above (we are indebted for them to Corssen, II 642) and receives an important support from the various readings in Stich. 44, where all our mss. read tamen with the sole exception of the Ambrosian palimpsest, in which we find tam; but not from Festus p. 360 'antiqui tam etiam pro tamen usi sunt,' since Corssen shows (krit. beitr. zur lat. formenl. p. 273—279) that the passages quoted by Festus do not prove that tam was ever used as an equivalent for tamen.—In the Umbrian dialect we find nome for nomen (Aufrecht u. Kirchhoff, umbrische sprachdenkmäler, II 407). Compare the Italian forms lume nome nume volume, etc.

[2] See Corssen, I 276. Schuchardt, I 132. See also Corssen, II 665, whose explanation is in agreement with the one adopted above. For curiosity's sake, I may quote Mr Key, 'Language,' p. 473, who says 'the pronunciation s'nex has been erroneously ascribed to myself, for I but we should entirely drop the x in such lines as Rud. prol. 35:

senĕ*x* qui hŭc Athenis éxsul venit, haŭ malus.

D. SHORTENING OF OTHER LONG ENDINGS. p. xxxvi.

We have hitherto always observed that final syllables in which the vowel was long by nature were not shortened by the sole influence of the accent, unless the words to which they belonged were originally iambs[1]. We have yet to mention that the same shortening process affected even such endings as would seem to oppose the strongest resistance to every attempt to shorten them: ās ōs ēs īs ūs; nay, sometimes not only the vowels of these endings are shortened, but even the final consonants dropped. Some instances will serve to exemplify this observation.

1. Thus the ending ās appears shortened in bonas foras[2] negas:

have long held that it would be better to read it as sēn, i.e. as representing that old lost nominative whence the oblique cases were deduced, in other words the simpler noun of which the sen-ec is a diminutive.' It is the pervading tendency of Mr Key's theories on Latin versification to reduce Latin disyllables and trisyllables to monosyllables. Such a proceeding is indeed very much in the style of that language which has succeeded in contracting the noble ἐλεημοσύνη into a convenient monosyllabic alms, but it may be doubted whether these violent contractions suit the genius of the Latin language.

[1] Exceptions to this rule would be adtulĭ occidĭ and iusserŏ. But the first may be explained from tulĭ, and iusserŏ follows the analogy of the short o of the present. occidĭ occurs in an anapaestic line, i.e. in so-called 'free' metre. frustră (p. 22) is quite isolated.—With regard to the dropping of final consonants, we have to modify our statement. s and m were indeed so frequently dropped that the prosody of the antepenult cannot be considered to limit the extension of this license. But in all other cases the law given above would apply to the dropping of final consonants just as well. See our remarks on pater and mater p. 33 sq.

[2] Comp. the same shortening in the Doric dialect, e.g. Theocr. I 83 πάσᾰς ἀνὰ κράναις, IV 3 πάσᾰς ἀμέλγες, I 134 ὄχνᾰς ἐνείκαι — though we find also the original prosody in θύρας bónăs ut aecumst fácere, facitis.

Stich. 99.

fórăs, forās, lumbrice...
Aul. 620[1].

quíd, forās? forăs hércle uero.
Stich. 597.

ípse abiít forăs, me reliquit.
Poen. v 5, 4.

tén negăs Tyndarum ésse? : : nego ĭnquam : : tún te Philocratem ésse ais?
Capt. III 4, 39.

síc sine igitur, sí tuom negăs me ésse, abire líberum.
Men. 1028.

In the last two instances, we give the reading of the mss., which has been altered by Ritschl, Proll. Trin. CXLVIII. In the line from the Captivi the accentuation
p. xxxvii. Tyndárum, which in accordance with Ritschl is adopted in Fleckeisen's edition, seems to be against the general habit of Plautus, the metre running much smoother, if read according to the accentuation given by us[2].

2. In the same way we find ŏs in novos viros dolos[3]:

vírŏs nostros quibus tú nos voluisti.
Stich. 98.

mágnificé volo mé summŏs virŏs áccipere...
Pseud. 167 (according to the mss.).

dúplicis triplicis dólŏs perfidias, út ubi cum hostibús congrediar.
Pseud. 580 (according to the mss.).

sempér datores nóvŏs oportet quaérere.
Truc. II 1, 33 (=245 G.)[4].

II 6, alongside of περὶ τὰς θύρᾱς ὅσσος ὅμιλος XV 65.

[1] I quote Taubmann's note on this passage, simply to show that his view of the fact in question was quite correct. 'Critici posteriores non admisere, quod ignorarent foras utranque syllabam habere brevem: ut liquet vel ex Poen. v 5, 4. Stich. IV 2, 1 & IV 4, 55.'

[2] For the reappearance of such quantities as vidĕs putăs, etc. in later Latin see also Corssen II 941.

[3] Comp. in Doric τὰς παρθένος, Theocr. I 90.

[4] novos may possibly have been one of the first words to admit a monosyllabic (or connovŏs ómnis mores hábeo, veteres pérdidi.

Truc. III 2, 9 (=665 G.).

Another example (Trin. 78) does not belong to this head, and will be mentioned hereafter.

3. Analogously we have ŭs (acc. plur.):

mánŭs ferát ăd papíllas, aut labra á labris numquam aúferat.
Bacch. 480.

This is the reading of the mss. adopted by Ritschl, while Fleckeisen follows Brix's transposition: ád papillas mánŭs ferat and considers manus to be a monosyllable (mnus).

Another instance of the same prosody occurs Mil. gl. 325.

túm mihi sunt manŭs ínquinatae—

a reading justly maintained in Brix's recent edition[1].

4. It is the same with ĕs (ĭs):

ovĭs ín crumina hac húc in urbem détuli.
Truc. III 1, 11 (=644 G.).

ovĕs and bovĕs are commonly explained by admitting a monosyllabic pronunciation, see Ritschl's Proll. L. For bovĕs see Aul. 232. Pseud. 812.

avĕs falls under the same head, Asin. 216 (according to the mss.).

fórĭs pultabo. ad nóstras aedis.
Trin. 868.

somnóne operam datis? éxperiar, forĕs áu cubiti ac pedĕs plús valeant.
Stich. 311.

te hás emisse. nón tu vidĕs hunc vóltu ut tristi sít senex?
Most. 811.

non vídĕs referre me úvidum reté sine squamosó pecu?
Rud. 942.

tracted) pronunciation, owing to the ambiguous nature of the semivowel u. But see also Corssen II 654, note **.

[1] See also Bücheler, On Latin Declension, p. 15.

Archínam : : mala tu fémina's : : olĕs únde es disciplínam.
Truc. I 2, 29 (=133 G.).

intús produci iúbĕs : haec ergo est fídicina.
Epid. III 4, 41 (according to Geppert).

aut té piari iúbĕs, homo insanissume?
Men. 517 (according to the mss.).

p. xxxviii. sí tu ad legionem bellator clúĕs, at in culína ego.
Truc. II 7, 54 (=604 G.).

Another instance of the same kind is habĕs Aul. 185 and Pseud. 161, which prosody will also be found in the ms. reading of a passage greatly altered by Ritschl, Persa 227.

5. In the same way the ending ĭs in the dative and ablative plural of nouns and in the present of verbs is occasionally shortened :

ex graécis bónĭs latínas fecit nón bonas.
Ter. Eun. prol. 9.

quós penes mei fuít potestas, bónĭs meis quíd foret ét meae vitae.
Trin. 822[1].

bonĭs ésse oportet déntibus lenám probam : adridére.
Truc. I, 14 (=226 G.).

satĭn sí quis amat, nequit quín nili sit àtque ímprobĭs ártibus se éxpoliat.
Truc. II 7, 2 (=549 G.) [anapæstic].

vírĭs cum summis, ínclutae amicae—Pseud. 174.

múltis súm modĭs círcumventus . . . .
Ennius (ed. Vahlen p. 96. Ribb. Trag. p. 15).

is mé scelus auro usque áttondit dolĭs dóctis indoctum út lubitumst.
Bacch. 1095[2].

at pól ego abs te concéssero : : iamne ábĭs? bene ambuláto.
Persa 50.

peregré quoniam advenĭs, céna datur.
Truc. I 2, 28 (=129 G.) [anapæstic].

[1] meis and meae should be pronounced as monosyllables.

[2] This is the reading of the mss. restored in Fleckeisen's edition.

The last instance should be explained from the analogy of the simple form venis, which would, of course, fall under the general rule.

A very strong instance of a shortened final syllable occurs in the Bacchides (48):

póteris agere : atque ís dum veniat, sédĕns ibi opperíbere.

For even if we readily grant that an n before an s disappears in many instances, the long quantity of the e would still remain unaltered: but for all that we must here admit a short pronunciation of the syllable ens. Ritschl changes the reading of the mss. by transposing atque ibi sedens, dum is veniat, opperibere. Fleckeisen adheres to the authority of the mss.

All these short quantities are, of course, of but occasional occurrence; but they suffice to prove the large extension of a very dangerous propensity of the Latin language in Plautus' time, which was fast making its p. xxxix. way and has left permanent traces. I do not forget that such strong violations of natural prosody as those given above, cannot be otherwise than shocking to an ear accustomed to Augustan prosody, and I am fully aware that many scholars will therefore treat them with obstinate incredulity: but an impartial consideration of the matter would show that there is at least no rational difference between the shortening of āt ēt ĭt and of ās ēs īs ōs: only the first we accept, because we imbibed the notion of the short quantity of the suffixes of the third pers. sing. at the time of our first acquaintance with Latin prosody; the latter appears strange to us, because the literary language of the so-called classical epoch preserved the original long quantity. To be brief, most people readily acknowledge the fait accompli, while they obstinately close their eyes to the traces left by a destructive and revolutionary power in the popular speech of a certain period, because the same tendencies were afterwards theoretically checked and resisted and could not, therefore, manifest themselves in the literary dialect of a more cultivated period. But for such as are determined not to acknowledge any difference between literary and popular dialects, these pages are not destined[1].

The shortened quantities of these syllables were once doubted by Ritschl, who in his edition of Plautus gets rid of them partly by very extravagant alterations of the ms. readings, partly by assuming the extrusion of the radical vowels of the words in question. I propose to give a brief criticism of the latter point, in translating a passage from M. Crain's excellent paper 'Plautinische Studien,' p. 12:

"G. Hermann (el. d. m. p. 65) considers domi boni mali malum as monosyllables in many passages, though he has never produced his arguments for the possibility of putting together such thoroughly different cases. In accordance with G. Hermann's views Ritschl assumes monosyllabic pronunciation for enim aput quidem fores manus senex simul, on which he remarks 'quae quis tam pravo iudicio est ut correptis potius ultimis syllabis quam pronuntiando elisis primis dicta esse contendat?' (Proll. Trin. CXL. s.) But where are the proofs for the possibility of extruding a radical vowel [in Iambic words], p. xl. to preserve which in its integrity must always be considered to be the tendency of language? It is true, Ritschl says 'quid? quod ne usu recepta quidem monosyllaba scriptura alius vocis cuiusdam de vera ratione admonuit? nam quid est quo a monosyllaba bonas vel senem forma mnas differat pro minas scribi solitum?' (p. CXLIV). I intentionally give this passage without the least omission, as it would otherwise be incredible that Ritschl could have written such things. It is easy to understand that Ritschl actually compares matters of a very different character. We want the proofs for the extrusion of a radical vowel in Latin

[1] It may be of interest to add a passage relating to the pronunciation of the comic stage at Rome. Quintilian says II 10, 13: quod faciunt actores comici, qui nec ita prorsus, ut nos vulgo loquimur, pronuntiant, quod esset sine arte, nec procul tamen a natura recedunt, quo vitio periret imitatio, sed morem communis huius sermonis decore quodam scenico exornant. See also Corssen II 619 sq.

[Iambic] words, and Ritschl alleges the Greek μνᾶ, which the Romans (to whom the joint consonants mn in the beginning of a syllable are unfamiliar) transformed into mina by inserting a short i: but of course the Greek form could equally well remain in use. That a Roman could not say snex instead of senex, mnus for manus, qu'dem for quidem, seems, in the absence of any satisfactory evidence to the contrary, pretty clear; and indeed such forms as am'r and en'm (Proll. Trin. CLXVII) may be good enough for Etruscan or Polish, but they are not Latin."

The same arguments as those alleged in this extract, are brought forward by Corssen II 623[1]. Ritschl has now himself entirely altered his theories, and I should not even have mentioned his former views, had it not been for the presumption that most of the current information about Plautine prosody in this country is derived from Ritschl's Prolegomena, which, it must be repeated, are in this respect entirely antiquated.

I may add that, in accordance with the short quantities of vidĕs abĭs etc. we find vidĕn rogăn iubĕn adĭn redĭn etc., forms which stand for videsne rogasne iubesne adisne redisne: see Corssen, II 642.

E. FURTHER INFLUENCE OF THE ACCENT. p. xli.

In all the instances which we considered in the preceding pages, we confined ourselves to the quantity of the final syllable, and it appeared that all the changes in question were limited to a certain number of iambic words. We may express this rule in the formula—

[1] 'Qui primam particularum enim et quidem vocalem syncope haustam putarunt ('nim q'dem), ii mihi videntur pronuntiandi rationem nimis obscuram minimeque credibilem statuisse.' Ussing, Proll. p. 195. —'Vt s'mul pronuntiatum esse credam, non adducor.' Id. p. 202. —'Talia qui per syncopen prioris syllabae explicare student, miram necesse est habeant linguae facilitatem, quid autem faciant, ubi vox a vocali incipiat, ut, "erus," omnino non intelligo.' Id. p. 207.

⏑ – = ⏑ ⏑. We shall now consider the accent in its influence on the un-accented syllables of polysyllabic words.

It was the general tendency of the Latin language of these times to hurry over the un-accented parts of longer words, or of metrical complexes of words, in order to lay all the stress on that syllable which was rendered prominent by the accent. But even here a long syllable could not be shortened unless preceded by another short syllable, i. e. only original iambs were changed into pyrrhichs.

In a formula this may be expressed as follows ⏑ ⏑ ⏑ = ⏑ ⏑ ⏑. This will be examined in detail and exemplified in the following remarks.

We first propose to consider such cases as actually fall under this head, though the shortening process was probably assisted by some secondary circumstances.

Many seeming violations of prosody will be explained by the fact that doubled consonants were unknown in Plautus' time, they being first introduced into the Latin language by Ennius[1]. Thus we find that in many instances ll does not affect the quantity of the preceding vowel, e. g.

supelléctile opus est : ópus est sumptu ad núptias.
Ter. Phorm. 666.

tace átque parce múliebri supĕlléctili.
Poen. v 3, 26.

íd conexum in úmero laevo, éxpapillato brácchio.
Mil. gl. 1180[2].

According to a passage of Pliny, preserved by Priscian I 38 'l exilem sonum habet, quando geminatur secundo loco posita, ut ille, Metellus.' This was the reason why in many names ending in lius the l was frequently doubled[1], there being almost no difference between the pronunciation of a single or a double l[2], Plautus, who wrote ile, had therefore unlimited license to lengthen the i (i. e. to assume a slower and weightier pronunciation of the l as ll) wherever sense or metre seemed to require it, or to shorten it, whenever the word did not appear to be of much importance. In fact, the short pronunciation of the i in ille occurs in Plautus in more passages[3] than that quantity which this word retained ever since the prosody of the Latin language was entirely reformed and fixed by Ennius' dactylic poetry. p. xlii.

[1] Festus v. solitaurilia p. 293. — 'Geminatio consonantium nulla ante Ennium, ferme ex aequo fluctuans ab a. circiter 580 ad 620, praevalens ab a. 620 ad 640, fere constans ab a. circiter 670.' Ritschl, priscae lat. mon. epigr. p. 123.

[2] See Brix's note in his recent edition. Corssen II 664 would seem to agree with Ritschl and C. F. W. Müller (Pros. p. 264) in considering the word expapillato as a corruption.

The superlative simillumae has a startling quantity in a line in the Asinaria (241), pórtitorum símĭllumae sunt iánuae lenóniae.

But when seen under this point of view, we understand this seeming irregularity at once. Plautus himself who wrote similumae was at entire liberty either to say simíllumae, or in drawing the accent back on the first syllable to shorten the second, which was the less objectionable, because ll (according to the latter spelling) had indeed a very weak sound[4].

[1] See the instances collected by Corssen, I 227. For Polio Pollio, Popilius Popillius, see Ritschl's note on the life of Terence by Suetonius, in Reifferscheid's edition of the fragments of Suetonius, p. 512.

[2] In the name Achilles the i appears short in the first line of the prologue to the Poenulus:

Achílem Aristárchi míhi commentarí lubet.

The spelling Achilem stands thus in BC and the short quantity of the i may be defended by a line from Plautus' Mercator (488) 'Achĭllem orabo, ut aŭrum mihi det, Héctor qui expensús fuit. For this line see Bücheler, Rhein. Mus. XV 435, and on the whole question M. Crain, Plaut. Stud. p. 13. We may add the line Mil. gl. 1219, in which the mss. warrant the following reading mittó iam ut occidi 'Achĭlles civis pássus est.

Bothe justly wrote Achĭles. Plautus himself spelt this name Aciles, a spelling actually found in an ancient inscription on a cista discovered at Praeneste: C. I. L. I 1500 (p. 553). We may compare the two forms 'Αχιλλεύς and 'Αχιλεύς as found in Homer.

[3] Abundant examples will be found in Corssen, II 624 sq.

[4] For this, and the following

In the same way, the word satellites should be read sátĕlites in a line of the Trinummus (833).

p. xliii. mm does not lengthen the first syllable in the word immo, which Plautus himself would have spelt imo: see Merc. 737, Caec. Ribb. com. p. 47, Ter. Phorm. 936, Hec. 437. 726. 877[1].

mn fall under the same rule, as the following instance shows:

per ănnónam caram díxit me natúm pater.
Stich. 179.

This is the reading of all the mss., including the old Ambrosian; Ritschl has per caram annonam, in accordance with a conjecture of Bothe[2].—As there was in the original pronunciation of the Romans no difference between mn and nn[3], we find the first syllable in omnis treated as short in several passages in Plautus[4].

pp does not differ prosodiacally from a single p in the word Philippus, which in Plautus almost invariably appears with the Greek accentuation Φίλιππος Philĭpus[5].

instance, see Corssen, II 663 sq. —Brix compares (ed. of the Trin. nachtr. p. 113) the spelling facilumed in the SC. de Bacanalibus.—All those scholars who believe in an entire harmony between the natural and metrical accent in the versification of the comic poets cannot of course credit the short quantity of the second syllable in simillumae. They will consequently save the long quantity by pronouncing smillumae. We believe, on the contrary, that in this one passage the syllable in question was rhythmically shortened, and we may compare the analogous case of ságĭta, which will be mentioned hereafter.

[1] See O. Ribbeck, Com. fragm. Coroll. ed. sec. p. XXIV. So far as our mss. are concerned, the spelling immo is generally supported by better authorities than imo.

[2] See also Müller, Pros. p. 289.

[3] Comp. solennis and sollemnis, and the Italian forms alunno colonna dannare = alumnus columna damnare; in Italian ogni stands for onni.

[4] See Aul. 598. Trin. 78. Other examples are found in Ritschl's Proll. CXXXII. ss.

[5] Ritschl, Proll. LXXXIX. CXXIII. Scaliger's statement on the quantity of Philippus 'et numquam aliter invenies apud Plautum quin mediam corripuerit' is not accurate. The Plautine spelling of this name was Pilipus, just as we find it on a coin of the year 620: see C. I. L. I 354.

Probably, the short quantity of the second syllable is to be attributed to the influence of the Greek accentuation: see Scaliger, Auson. Lect. lib. II 21 (p. 147 ed. 1588). See also my note on Aul. 86.

ss has the metrical value of a single s in the verb esse, which must often be read ĕse[1]. The same reason explains the prosody of dĕdĭsse Amph. II 2, 130[2], and vĭcĭssatim Stich. 532[3].

tt has the metrical value of a single t in sagita = sa- p. xliv.
gitta, Persa 25 and Aul. 393[4]. This prosody was first pointed out by Kampmann, and after having been rejected by Ritschl (Proll. Trin. CXXIII), has lately been revived by Fleckeisen (Krit. Miscellen, p. 39—42).

cc = c in ŏccasio (Persa 268) ŏcculto (e.g. Trin. 712) ăccumbe (Most. 308) and ăccepisti (e.g. Trin. 964[5]). In the words eccum eccam eccos eccas the first syllable is frequently shortened.

dd would seem to be equal to a single d in ădde (Trin. 385) and rĕdde (Stich. 786)[6].

[1] For instances see Corssen II 646.

[2] Corssen II 647. The same prosody occurs Cist. I 3, 24. Pseud. 893. Ritschl corrects the passage of the Amphitruo in his Prolegomena p. CXXV. The line of the Pseudulus should be read: nómen est : : scio iám tibi me rĕcte dedisse epistulam, for this is the reading of the mss., the Ambrosian palimpsest not being trustworthy in this passage. I am glad to see that Fleckeisen does not adopt Ritschl's conjectures in these two passages.

[3] nós potius onerémus nosmet vĭcĭssatim volŭptátibus.
'This is the reading of the mss., recommended by the alliteration; it will no doubt be acknowledged by Ritschl in a second edition; Fleckeisen has it in the text.' BÜCHELER, jahrb. für class. phil. 1863 p. 336. See also Corssen II 665.

[4] 'Anapaestum ars vetuit binorum vocabulorum consociatione fieri, quorum prius in media anacrusi finiretur: eaque elegantiae observatio, quantum intellexi, constans est apud hunc poëtam.' RITSCHL, praef. Mil. glor. XXII. We cannot therefore read confi | ge sagĭt | tis.

[5] oculto (with only one c) is the spelling of the Decurtatus Trin. 712. The famous SC. de Bacanalibus gives INOQVOLTOD, i.e. inocultod (qu=c). Ritschl, Proll. Trin. CCXXIV. Comp. also OQVPATVM C. I. L. I 200, 25.— ăcceptrĭci occurs Truc. II 7, 18 (=566 G.).

[6] These two instances have been corrected by Ritschl and

An n before another consonant was, in Latin, very weakly sounded and was, therefore, apt to fall out entirely[1]. We find it thus at times quite neglected in the hurried pronunciation of the days of Plautus, i. e. n followed by another consonant does not influence the quantity of the preceding vowel. Thus Plautus has the quantities ferĕntárium esse amícum. Trin. 456.

sedĕntárii sutóres. Aul. 508.
qui ovís Tarĕntínas. Truc. III 1, 5 (=638 G.).
talĕntúm Philippum huic opus aúrist. Mil. gl. 1061 [anapæstic].
quo némo adaeque iúvĕntute. Most. 30.
iuvĕntúte et pueris líberis. Curc. I 1, 38.
cólere iúvĕntutem átticam. Pseud. 202.
si íd mea volŭntate fáctumst. Trin. 1166.
néc volŭntate id fácere meminit. Stich. 59.
tuá volŭntáte. Pseud. 537.
quód ĭntellexi. Eun. IV 5, 11.
p. xlv. égo ĭnterim. Most. 1094.
séd ĭnterim. Haut. tim. 882.
tibi ĭntérpellatio. Trin. 709.
neque ĭntélleges. Phorm. 806.
ego ĭntérea. Hec. prol. II 34.
quíd ĭnterest. Eun. 233.
ut ĭncédit. Aul. 47.
sine invídia. Andr. 66.
et ĭnvídia. Aul. 478.
fore ĭnvíto. Poen. V 4, 35.
bonum ĭngénium. Andr. 466.
tíbi ĭnde. Persa III 1, 96.
quíd ĭnde. Rud. IV 3, 20[2].

Fleckeisen, and it is indeed very difficult to accept them as authentic.

[1] See Schuchardt, On Vulgar Latin I 104 sqq.; he says that 'verdunkelung des N vor dentalen und gutturalen' is one of the characteristic features of the first period of vulgar Latin.

Bücheler, jahrb. für class. phil. 1863 p. 342. toties and totiens, decies and deciens, vicesimus and vicensimus are equivalent forms generally known. commostraret (as γ has, Aul. 12) would be a perfectly correct form (comp. Mostellaria).

[2] There neither exists a form

Brix has collected the following instances of ĭnde: Amph. I 1, 4. Capt. I 2, 19. Aul. II 7, 4. Poen. prol. 2. IV 2, 80. V 3, 39. ŭnde occurs as a pyrrhich in the following passages which we likewise borrow from Brix: Trin. 218. Capt. I 1, 41. Cist. II 3, 19. Persa IV 3, 23. Mil. gl. III 1, 93. Eun. II 3, 14. For intro see my note on Aul. 448.

Even the first syllable in inquam is shortened Capt. III 4, 39 (see p. 38), a passage where Ritschl boldly substitutes ego for inquam.

To these examples we may add the short quantity of the first syllable in ĭgnave Eun. IV 7, 7[1]. So also ĭgnorabitur Men. 468 according to the mss.

As it is our intention to consider all such instances as admit of a different explanation from that afforded by the sole influence of the accent, before mentioning those examples which compel us to find the ultimate cause of the change of quantity in the power of the accent, we may add here some examples of words in which x does not lengthen a preceding vowel, e. g.

sed ŭxór scelesta. Rud. IV 1, 4. sibi ŭxórem. Aul. prol. 32.
ad ŭxorem. Merc. II 1, 20.
in ĕxércitum. Amph. prol. 101, 125.
ab ĕxércitu. Amph. prol. 140.
ad ĕxércitum. Amph. I 3, 6.
mage ĕxígere. Trin. 1052[2].

In these cases we might explain the violation of quantity by assuming the soft pronunciation of the x as s; but this would not help us to explain such instances as the following:

ego ĕxclúdor. Eun. I 1, 79. p. xlvi.
ibi ĕxtémplo. Poen. III 4, 23.

ti instead of tibi, nor is it possible to pronounce qu' inde. See Ritschl, Proll. Trin. CLIX.

[1] Comp. the spelling inavia found in the Medicean ms. of Virgil, Aen. XI 733. See my Introduction to Terence, p. 20. Add also Corssen II 938.

[2] See also Corssen II 665.

But a host of other instances still remains unexplained and will be unaccounted for, unless we really admit the truth of the general law laid down at the head of the present section. We cannot of course promise to give all, or nearly all, the instances which should hence be explained, but it will be useful to mention some prominent examples, were it only as a brief exemplification of our law. By carefully studying the Plautine plays, a rhythmical ear will soon become familiar with these licenses of prosody, and when once accustomed to them, no reader can fail to discover the wonderful vivacity and elasticity of the comic versification of the Romans, a fact which would have been perfectly impossible, had the Latin language always been bound by the prosodiacal fetters which, since Ennius' time, restrained its youthful agility and turned it into a slow, but majestic and pompous array. These words are not, however, intended to depreciate Ennius' merits: for it was he who preserved the language from premature decay and dilapidation.

We may first draw the reader's particular attention to two little pronouns which, on account of their frequent occurrence, were liable to an uncertain mode of pronunciation. We mean ipse and iste: and both occasionally being enclitics, it was, of course, left to the free choice of the speaker, which place to assign to them in his sentence, i.e. either to run over them by connecting them with the preceding word, or to give them more importance by fully pronouncing their first syllable. In the first case these pronouns would be pyrrhichs[1], in the latter trochees, and accordingly they appear in Plautus and Terence in both shapes: iste has even a secondary form ste, which was first discovered by Lachmann, on Lucr. p. 197[2]: in the same way we may fairly presume the existence of an analogous form pse, though there are no historical documents for it[1].

[1] 'Cum antiquitus ipse pyrrichium aequasset p littera sic ut in voluptate correpta, post adsimilantes isse pronuntiabant vulgo' Bücheler on Petron. p. 74, 20 (ed. mai.), whose entire note should be read as a specimen of a neat contribution to Latin philology. Comp. also Schuchardt, On Vulgar Latin 1 148.

[2] See note on Aul. 261.

The second class of our instances of violated quantity will be divided into two sections: 1, violation of quantity in vowels naturally long; 2, violation of quantity in vowels long by position. p. xlvii.

1. Under this head we have to mention some very strong cases; but it may be premised that, in almost every separate instance, some critic has attempted to remove such offensive violations of regular quantity either by transposition or some kind of alteration of the text, i.e. by admitting a kind of criticism which may have its justification if the case in question should be quite isolated, but which must be entirely discarded if the multitude of analogous instances defies correction. We simply put some instances together and let them plead for themselves.

The e in an imperfect of the second conjugation is shortened in the following line:

quid ád me ibatis? rídiculum verĕbámini.
Ter. Phorm. 902[2].

Bentley might well call this an indigna et turpis licentia, because he was not aware of the general law which accounts for the shortened e.

In Plautus the word Acheruns generally occurs with a long a, and therefore, as Ritschl observes, non produci brevis syllaba dicenda est in Acheruns per Plautinas fabulas novem, sed longa corripi in Poenulo (Proll. Trin. CLXXI). The passages alluded to by Ritschl are:

ipse ábiit ád Ăcherúntem sine viático. Poen. prol. 71.

[1] We may add to these two pronouns some particles which share their ambiguous prosody. ĕrgo occurs frequently (Poen. IV 2, 59. Pers. II 2, 3. Mil. gl. IV 2, 17. Haut. tim. V 2, 40. Merc. V 4, 10. Poen. IV 2, 71 etc.). hĕrcle stands Trin. 58. 559. Most. I 3, 72, and nĕmpe is found in an overpowering multitude of passages (e.g. Aul. 292); see, above all, Trin. 328 with our note.

[2] veremini Bentley, see M. Crain, Plaut. Stud. p. 13. Luc. Müller, de re metr. p. l. p. 365.

quó die Orcus áb Ăcherunte mórtuos amíserit.
Ibid. I 2, 131.

quódvis genus ibi hóminum videas, quási Ăcheruntem véneris. Ibid. IV 2, 9.

to which Crain (Plaut. Stud. p. 16) adds a line from the Mostellaria (509):

vivóm me accersunt ád Ăcheruntem mórtui.

We have here four instances of a rhythmical shortening of a vowel which is in all other instances long. That this same vowel is always short in the usage of later poets, is no doubt due to the adoption of the quantity of the Greek word[1].

p. xlviii. The two genitives eius and huius are occasionally shortened in their first syllable, when standing after a short accented syllable[2]:

ut síbi ĕius faciat cópiam. illa enim sé negat.
Ter. Phorm. 113.

si quíd hŭius simile fórte aliquando evénerit.
Ter. Haut. tim. 551.

Mr Parry gives in the first instance sibi ut eius, while he preserves the reading of the mss. in the second passage, where it would have been just as easy to transpose si huius quid. But there is no note on either passage to enlighten the reader about such a surprising inconsistency.

To this shortened quantity in the genitive we may add an instance in which the dative huic has the metrical value of a short syllable: Ter. Ad. IV 5, 4 (= 638 Fl.):

quid huic híc negotist? túne has pepulistí foris?

This is, as far as I can see, the reading of all mss. and editions, but no editor has a note on the shortened quantity of huic. Guyet alone (Comm. p. 244) proposes to write quid hic huic.

[1] The above passages are corrected by A. Spengel, T. Maccius Plautus, p. 69 s.

[2] See Lachmann on Lucr. p. 161.

The word aut appears shortened Bacch. 491, where Fleckeisen reads in accordance with all the mss. as follows:

sátin ut quem tu habeás fidelem tíbi aŭt quoi credas néscias?

Ritschl admits a hiatus, omits tu and transposes tibi fidelem.

Even the shortening of the first syllable in audivi would have to be assumed, if the reading of a line in the Truculentus (I 2, 92 = 126 G.) were safely established. In this passage the mss. give peperísse eam aŭdívi :: ah, óbsecro, tacĕ Díniarche :: quid iam.

But, according to Geppert's and Studemund's testimony, the Ambrosian palimpsest omits eam, so that the line would be unobjectionable. It is, however, not impossible that the omission of eam is due to the metrical correction of some ancient grammarian whose authority was followed by the scribe of the ms.

Another instance is Epid. v 1, 15 according to the Ambrosian palimpsest—híc danista, haec íllast autem quam égo ĕmi de praeda :: haécinest.

Comp. also the quantity of Surăcúsas Men. 37.

2. We shall now mention some instances where the usual rules of position have to yield to the rhythmical influence of the accent. Thus we find the following p. xliv. combinations of letters without any influence on the prosodiacal value of the preceding vowels:

a. pt.

mércimonium. aéqua dicis. séd ŏptume eccum ipse ádvenit. Persa 544.

nunc ádeo ibo illuc, séd ŏptume gnatúm meum. Merc. 329.

This is the reading of the mss. in both passages which Ritschl alters somewhat arbitrarily; it is, however, defended by M. Crain, Plaut. Stud. p. 16. Geppert adds a third instance of the same quantity, Most. 410:

nam cuívis homini, vél ŏptumo vel péssumo, but this line is considered spurious by Ritschl and A. O. F. Lorenz.

néque dum exarui éx amoenis rébus et volŭptáriis.
Mil. gl. 642.

volŭptábilem mihi núntium tuo ádventu adtulísti.
Epid. I 1, 19.

volŭptátem inesse tántam....Rud. 459.

The same quantity volŭptatem in the beginning of a line occurs Ter. Haut. tim. I 2, 10 and Afran. Ribb. Com. p. 179. In the same way we have volŭptati Ter. Haut. tim. I 1, 19. Andr. V 4, 41. volŭptatis [acc. plur.] Plaut. Stich. 657. The short pronunciation of volŭptas itself is very frequent, e. g. Truc. II 4, 75. II 6, 59. 65. IV 4, 7. Most. I 3, 92. 136. In all these cases mea follows and the two words conclude the line[1].

p. l. β. st.

quasi mágĭstratum sibi álterive ambíverint.
Amph. prol. 74.

iámiam hercle apud omnís magĭstratus fáxo erit nomén tuom. Truc. IV 2, 48 (=749 G.).

magĭstrátus quóm ibi adésset, occeptást agi.
Ter. Eun. prol. 22.

ubi sínt magĭstratus quós curare opórteat.
Persa 76.

[1] Perhaps we should also acknowledge a short vowel before pt in the following line from the Pseudulus (597), sĕptumás esse aedis á porta...

This is the reading of the mss. kept by Fleckeisen. Ritschl gives trochees from v. 595 to 603, but not without the most violent alterations and deviations from the mss. Fleckeisen gives anapaests and is thus enabled to be more conservative. In this one instance Ritschl reads séptumas esse á porta aedis. We venture to ask whether it would not be better to read septūmas, the last syllable being shortened in consequence of the accent being thrown on the penult.—See also Corssen I 657.

magĭstrātus, si quis me hánc habere víderit.
Rud. 477.

atque út magĭstratus públice quando aúspicant.
Caecilius Ribb. com. p. 56[1].

parvís magnisque mĭnĭsteriis praefúlcior.
Pseud. 772[2].

nósmet inter nós minĭstremus...
Stich. 689.

túte tabulas cónsignato : híc minĭstrabit, dúm ego edam.
Curc. 369.

quae hic ádminĭstraret ád rem divinám tibi.
Epid. III 3, 37[3].

In the Oscan dialect, the i disappeared entirely, and we therefore find in it the forms minstreis and even mistreis : see Corssen, II 659.

vetŭstáte vino edéntulo aetatem ínriges.
Poen. III 3, 97.

hic ómnes volŭptátes, omnés venŭstatés sunt.
Pseud. 1257.

quís me est fortunátior, venŭstátisque adeo plénior?
Ter. Hec. 848.

neque fénĕstra nisi clatráta...
Mil. gl. 379.

inlústriores fécit, fenĕstrasque índidit.
Rud. 88.

A contracted form festra is mentioned by Festus, p. 91[4].

quam huc scélĕstus leno véniat nosque hic ópprimat. p. li.
Rud. II 4, 35.

scelĕstae haé sunt aedes, ímpiast habitátio.
Most. 504.

[1] See also Key, 'Language, etc.' p. 130 sq.

[2] In a Saturnian line of Naevius (32) we have éxta mĭnĭstratores (not ministratores, as Vahlen's edition has it, see Bücheler, jahrb. für class. phil. 1863 p. 335).

[3] See Key, l. c., p. 135.

[4] Fleckeisen gives fenstras in both passages, and analogously has minstrabit and minstremus Curc. 369. Stich. 689. See also Corssen II 659. Bentley on Ter. Haut. III 1, 72.

Both instances have been altered by Fleckeisen and Ritschl, but the reading of the mss. is defended by Geppert, lat. ausspr. p. 93 (Corssen, II 660).

ego ŏsténderem :: certó scio :: quo pácto :: parce sódes.
Ter. Phorm. 793.

dedĭstíne hoc facto ei gládium qui se occíderet.
Trin. 129[1].

Prof. Key, in his 'Miscellaneous Remarks on Ritschl's Plautus,' p. 195, justly observes that this pronunciation of dedisti (dedsti, desti), dedistis and other derivations gave rise to the contracted forms of this verb which we find in Italian (desti deste diero), Spanish (diste distes dièron dièra dièsse), and Portuguese (déste déstes déra désse). Still, I must differ from Prof. Key when he applies the same contracted pronunciation to the verses of the ancient comic poets themselves: it may here be repeated for the last time that the application of late and modern forms to an entirely distant period seems to violate the laws of historical philology; we are, therefore, entitled to recognise the working power and the first germs of Romance forms in the shortened forms of Plautine prosody, but we should not use the final stage of any historical development as an explanation of the remote cause which first originated it. What would be the result if we were to explain Anglo-Saxon forms from modern English corruptions[2]?

γ. rn.

cum nóvo ŏrnatu speciéque simul.
Trin. 840.

[1] Fleckeisen gives Stich. 731 in accordance with the mss. as follows:

ágo tibicen, quándo bíbĭsti, réfer ad labeas tíbias.

Ritschl has in his text quóm bibisti. The ms. reading is also found in Nonius, p. 210. Ritschl adds 'fortasse igitur fuit quando biberis.'

[2] See now also Key, 'Language, etc.' p. 157. I may well leave others to judge between Mr Key's views and my own.

Hílurica faciés videtur hóminis, éo ŏrnatu ádvenit.
Trin. 852.

male pérditus péssume ŏrnátus eo. p. lii.
Aul. 713.

mé despoliat, méa ŏrnamenta clam ád meretrices dégerit.
Men. 804.

lepidé factumst : iam ex sérmone hoc guběrnábunt doctius pórro. Mil. gl. 1091.

cássidem in capút—dormibo pérplacide in taběrnáculo.
Trin. 726.

So also guběrnabunt Mil. gl. 1091 and guběrnátor Caecil. 110 in Ribbeck's second edition.

δ. bs (ps)[1]:

égo ŏpsonabo. nám id flagitium sít mea te grátia.
Bacch. 972[2].

scio ăbsúrde dictum hoc dérisores dícere.
Capt. 1 1, 3 (=71 Fl.)[3].

and even in such a word as abstulisti the first syllable appears shortened Aul. 637[4]. (Comp. also abscessi Epid. II 2 53 = 229 G.) It is very difficult now to find these instances in Ritschl's text[5], since most have been eliminated

[1] Comp. also Schuchardt, I 148.

[2] This is the reading of all the mss., and Fleckeisen's edition gives the line in accordance with it. Ritschl however transposes ópsonabo ego.

[3] Fleckeisen (ep. crit. XXI) was inclined to transpose dictum apsurde. He would not do so now.

[4] A Saturnian line of Livius Andronicus seems to attest the short quantity of the syllable -ups- in Calupsonem :

apúd númfam Atlántis fíliám Calŭpsónem.

This is at least Bücheler's opinion, jahrb. für class. phil. 1863 p. 322.

[5] As regards Fleckeisen's text, we must draw the reader's attention to the great difference between his first and second volumes. In the first he is almost entirely guided by Ritschl's principles, while in the second he is more conservative in consequence of the metrical and rhythmical discoveries made by him in his article on Ritschl's Plautus. In his first volume he did not admit ŏbsecras (Mil. gl. 542): but in his second he kept ŏpsonabo (Bacch. 97).

by means of conjectures sometimes very arbitrary, e.g. Mil. gl. 542 s.; the mss. (ABC) would give us the following text:

perqué tua genua : quíd ŏbsecras me? :: inscítiae meae ét stultitiae ignóscas. nunc demúm scio.

In this case quid obsecras me would be a very natural and convenient question, the slave having said two lines before te obsecro. Ritschl gives, however, as follows:

perqué tua genua :: quíd iam? :: meae ut inscítiae et meaé stultitiae ignóscas. nunc demúm scio.

p. liii. Every student of the Plautine plays cannot but agree with the opinion of Prof. Key, who calls Ritschl's text 'in not a few instances untrustworthy,' because it differs 'what with omissions, insertions, changes and transpositions of words, and not unfrequently of lines, from what the mss. sanction, by a very considerable percentage.' But then again, the mss. are not our sole and exclusive guides, and it would be even more strange to be ruled by them in all instances.

ĕ. rg.

quŏd ărgentum, quas tú mihi tricas nárras?...
Curc. v 2, 15 (613 Fl.).

néc pueri suppósitio, nec ărgénti circumdúctio.
Capt. v 5, 3 (1031 Fl.).

séd sine ărgénto frustra 's...
Pseud. 378.

(This is the reading of the mss. given by Fleckeisen, while Ritschl has sine nummo. In the Prolegomena, p. CXLVIII, he thinks of pronouncing s'n'argento. In the passage from the Captivi Fleckeisen writes aut argenti against the authority of the mss.)

éum ărgentúm sumpsísse apud Thebas...
Epid. II 2, 67 (according to the mss.).

áge iam cupio, sí modo ărgentum réddat.
Ter. Ad. 202.

(This is the reading of the mss.; Guyet, Bentley and Fleckeisen modo si[1].)

But we shall stop here, though it would be easy to accumulate more examples of similar 'violations of prosody.' We use this expression, although it is quite erroneous when applied to Plautus or other comic writers. For them that prosody which prevails in Horace and Virgil did not exist, and they could not therefore 'violate' it. Their sole guide in prosodiacal matters was their ear, and in many cases, they obeyed the dictates of the rhythmical, rather than of the quantitative, laws of the language. This proves the influence which the accent exercised on the quantity of many syllables; but this should not be confounded with another question: did the ancient Roman poets purposely attempt to make the metrical stress of their verses agree with the prosaic accentuation of every-day life?

The theory that the natural accent of the Latin was, p. liv.
in the earliest period of Latin poetry, an important factor in versification, which decided its whole character, was first established by Bentley in his 'Schediasma.' Nevertheless, Bentley could not carry out his theory without allowing a difference between natural and metrical accent in the first and last dipodies, because without this liberty it would have been a mere impossibility to adapt Greek metres and versification to the Latin language. Bentley was, of course, obliged to correct a great many passages in Terence which were at variance with his theory, and correct them he did undauntedly. His theory was adopted by G. Hermann (el. d. m. p. 141), though with the admission, that the poets to whom it applied did not seem to follow it consistently[2]; and the same theory is the groundwork of Ritschl's views as developed in the XVth and XVIth chapters of the Prolegomena. In the versification of the comic writers, Ritschl discovers a struggle between a

[1] See also Corssen II 662.

[2] 'Non enim amant Latini voces in ultima syllaba ictu notare, nisi in primis et postremis senarii pedibus, etsi ne in hac quidem re ubique sibi constant.' merely quantitative metrical accentuation and the real accent of everyday life. According to his theory, the natural accent of the language still exercised great influence upon the versification of Plautus and his contemporaries, while it was entirely disregarded in the Augustan period, when a merely quantitative system of versification became dominant.

An accurate examination of this theory is due to the joint labours of Franz Ritter, A. Böckh, Weil and Benloew, and Corssen.

In the first place it may be observed that the Latin language is, on the whole, of a trochaic and iambic character with regard to its usual accentuation, and that accent and quantity coincide in Latin to a far greater extent than in Greek. We may, therefore, be prepared to find a general coincidence between the prosaic accent and the metrical ictus in the metres of the dramatists, without being at once obliged to assume that this agreement was something studiously contrived and sought after by the poets themselves.

This observation is fully borne out by the facts of the case. If the earlier poets had purposely endeavoured to reconcile the metrical ictus of their verses with the prose-accentuation of the words employed in them, it would seem a fair inference to expect that in them the proportion of agreement would be greater than in the later poets, for whom such an attempt has not been assumed. But precisely the reverse proves to be the case, and there is indeed, as has been statistically proved by Corssen[1], a far greater proportion of this coincidence in the later than in the earlier poets. This fact harmonizes with the general development of Latin poetry, which ended by becoming entirely accentual (i.e. the accent determined the quantity, as is the case in most modern languages), while it had originally been quantitative.

[1] See II 957 sqq. We cannot therefore agree with those critics who continue to correct all those passages in which the metrical ictus appears to be at variance with the usual accentuation. Corssen II 990—1000.

It may readily be granted that in the prosody of the comic poets many syllables had not yet received a fixed and settled quantity, and that this fact was due to the influence of the prose-accent or to the musical (rhythmical) pronunciation of that early time. Ennius, who was the first to employ dactylic hexameters in Latin poetry, was obliged to settle the prosodiacal value of most of these syllables; the reason of this was the very nature of his metre, in which the arsis must invariably consist in one long syllable, while the arsis of iambic and trochaic verses may just as well consist of two short syllables—there being moreover considerable liberty permitted as to the treatment of the thesis.

The Latin differs from the Greek only in so far as the p. lv.
prosaic accent had already commenced to exercise an important influence upon the quantitative value of many syllables, when the language was first employed for literary purposes; many traces of this we have endeavoured to point out in the metres of Plautus and Terence. The vacillating and fluctuating system of Latin prosody was p. lvi.
afterwards entirely reformed by Ennius. He could not violently alter what had already become the acknowledged usage of the language, but in all those cases which were not yet finally settled, the quantity preferred by him was adopted by the subsequent poets. A full discussion of this point would, however, lead us beyond the limits of this Introduction: at present we think it sufficient to refer to L. Müller, de re metr. p. 69 and 70.

F. SYNIZESIS.

The notion of synizesis rests on the ambiguous nature of the two letters u and i, which may be used both as vowels and consonants, and are in the latter quality frequently expressed by v and j[1]. To these two we have to add the letter e, which sometimes assumes the consonantal sound of i (y). This is the case in the word deus, where we have dei = di even in common Latin[1], but in the comic writers we find deo (Plaut. Cist. I 3, 2. Liv. Andr. trag. Ribb. v. 9) and deos (Naev. com. Ribb. 95. Plaut. Amph. I 1, 128. II 2, 86. V 1, 38. 41. Aul. IV 10, 12. 13. Capt. III 5, 69. Curc. I 1, 70. II 2, 13. V 2, 58. Cas. II 5, 28. 38. II 6, 37. 44. Cist. II 3, 52. IV 1, 12. Epid. II 2, 117. V 1, 4 and in many other passages) as monosyllables[2]. The genitive dei occurs with a monosyllabic pronunciation only once, Ribb. Trag. p. 202; deae follows this analogy (Aul. 778. Cas. II 4, 1. Cist. II 1, 35. Epid. III 3, 15. Most. I 3, 35. Pseud. I 1, 35. I 3, 36. Poen. III 3, 54. IV 2, 37. V 4, 102. Persa II 4, 21. 25. 27. V 2, 50). In the same way deorum is disyllabic in many instances (Amph. prol. 45. Epid. V 2, 10. Bacch. 124. Men. 217. Rud. II 2, 13). This fact may be compared with the similar contracted pronunciation of θεὸς and θεά, which is not unfrequently met with in the tragic poets. p. lvii.

[1] On the genuine pronunciation of this j see Key, L. G. § 9.

The word meus was treated much in the same way as deus: we have therefore mei meae meo meos meas meis sometimes as monosyllables, and meorum mearum meapte (Truc. II 5, 18) as disyllables[3]. The real pronunciation of these forms in such cases may be ascertained from the spelling mieis (= meis) which occurs in the dactylic inscription on the sepulchre of one of the Scipios: this enables us to guess that it was probably very much like the modern Greek pronunciation of θεὸς (= θεός), i.e. myîs dyô, etc.

Many forms of the pronouns is and idem fall under the same head; thus we have eo ei eidem eidem eās eāsdem eāpse (Curc. I 3, 4) eōs eōsdem eae eaedem eā eādem (abl.) eorum. The subjunctives eāmus eātis appear as disyllables according to the same rule, and in exeundum (Aul. 40) we notice the same pronunciation. We may add eunt Cist. I 1, 39. Poen. I 2, 117, and perhaps also queo Aul. 190.

[1] dii is not a genuine form.

[2] See, on the whole question, Spengel, 'Plautus,' p. 25.

[3] For the forms dius and mius see Ritschl, de decl. quadam lat. recond. I p. 22. Schuchardt I 433.

The forms eius ei huius (huic) quoius quoi deserve particular notice. Of these quoi and huic are always monosyllables, while the others admit of a threefold triple pronunciation:

trochee,	pyrrhich,	monosyllable,
ēius[1]	ĕius[2]	eīus = eis
hūius	hŭius[2]	huius = huis[3]
quoīus	cŭius	quoius = quois[4]
cuīus[1]		cuius = cuis
ēi	ĕi	eī[5]

All these forms occur in the metres of the comic writers: we must, however, leave it to the industry of our readers to collect as many examples of each separate measure as they find sufficient for their own conviction. Many instances of the varied metrical character of ei are collected by Ritschl, Opusc. II 418 sq. p. lviii.

We shall now briefly enumerate some of the most frequent cases in which i and u display their variable nature. Thus we have dies = dyes, die = dye,

[1] I purposely do not mention the oldest forms e-ī-us ho-ī-us quo-ī-us (tit. Scip. Barb. Ritschl. pr. l. m. ep. t. 37), since they are not found in Plautus and Terence.

[2] To this head we may refer the examples quoted above p. 52. See Lachmann, comm. Lucr. p. 27, and espcially p. 160 s. See also Corssen II 672.

[3] The spelling huis occurs in an inscription in Gruter's collection 44, 3: see Corssen, krit. beitr. zur lat. formenl. p. 545, and Schuchardt II 503. In Guyet's edition of Plautus the forms eis huis and quois are several times found in the text.

[4] This pronunciation must be assumed for a line of Lucilius: quoius voltu ac facie, ludo ac sermonibus nostris. (Lachmann, l. l.) Lachmann shows that this form left its traces in cuicuimodi, i. e. quois-quoismodi, the dropping of the final s taking place as explained above p. 30 s. The u disappeared much in the same way as magis presupposes an original maqius. The oldest ms. gives cuicuiusmodi in Cic. Verr. v 41, 107 which Halm is inclined to believe genuine.

[5] The same theory applies to such forms as rēi, rĕi, rē (= rēi); *spēi spĕi spē (= spēi) &c. See note on Aul. 607.

diu = dyu,
scio = scyo,
ais ain ait as monosyllables, aibam etc. as disyllables, trium = tryum, otio filio gaudiis omnia tertiust as disyllables (in the so-called 'free metres,' but nesciō is common throughout).

On the other hand it should be observed that in Plautus and Terence gratiis and ingratiis are always fully pronounced[1]; in later times we find gratis and ingratis as the predominant forms.

In tuos and suos[2] and their various forms the u assumes in many instances the consonantal sound of a v. The same is the case with many words where a u follows an initial consonant, e.g. duo (duorum duarum duobus duabus) duellum[3] duellica puer puella, or in such an instance as quattor for quattuor[4].

The verbal forms fui fuisti fuistis fuisse, etc. undergo very often a synizesis of the two letters ui. fui and fuit may, however, be pronounced in three different ways, viz. fūi fŭi fuĭ (monosyll.). If we add the variable quantity of the perfect termination it (see p. 16), we arrive at the following possible pronunciations of fuit.

fūit fūit fŭit fŭit fuĭt (monos.).

lix. This instance may serve as another palpable illustration of the truth of the observation made p. 50 with regard to the elasticity of Plautine prosody.

[1] See Bentley on Ter. Ad. IV 7, 26.

[2] tuus and suus are not only not Plautine, but not even good Latin forms. Even Cicero knows no uu. (In fluuius the first u is the root vowel, the second a modification of the guttural g). See however, Munro's Introduction to Lucretius.

[3] The pronunciation dvellum was the next step to the secondary form bellum. In the same way we have duonum (dvonum) bonum.

[4] For this instance see Ritschl, Rhein. Mus. VIII 309. Lachm. Lucr. p. 192. Enn. ann. (ed. Vahlen) 96. 580, and the somewhat different statement of Corssen II 751.

We may finally draw the reader's attention to the general fact that compounds in which two vowels come together are always pronounced per synizesin in Plautus and Terence, e.g. dein deinde[1] proin proinde[2] dehinc deorsum (written dorsum in an inscription C. I. L. I 199, 20) seorsum praeoptare praeesse deosculari. See also Corssen II 712 sqq. 759 sq.

G. HIATUS.

In order to complete our sketch of the pronunciation of Latin as seen in the comic writers, we must also touch upon a subject which is, however, one of the most difficult points in Plautine criticism, viz. the hiatus. After the uncritical labours of Linge, Ritschl was the first to give some distinct and positive rules with regard to the admission of hiatus in the metres of the comic writers, in the XIVth chapter of his Prolegomena, though his views as given there were afterwards in many respects corrected and enlarged by himself.

There is, at least, one point on which no doubt can possibly exist, and this discriminates Ritschl's views from those of former scholars. We shall quote his own words[3]: 'impeditior est de hiatu quaestio. non dicam autem contra eos qui quovis et loco et modo admissum hiatum concocunt concoctisque bonos versus concacant: quis enim lavare laterem animum inducat? verum qui in ipsa caesura senariorum admissum tutantur atque defensitant, eos certe aliqua ratione agere concedendum est. Nec ego hoc numquam factum contendam: sed tamen ut vel id genus longe artioribus, quam vulgo creditur, finibus esse circumscriptum putem. Et tantum quidem non potest non haberi

[1] The contradictory passage in Ter. Andr. 483 has been happily corrected by Fleckeisen. See L. Müller, de re metr. p. 265.

[2] Geppert (Ausspr. p. 21) says that in Amph. III 3, 27 Plautus uses proinde as trisyllabic; but it is easy to remove this exception by correcting fac sis proinde adeo uti me velle intéllegis, instead of ut given by the mss.

[3] Opusc II 414.

certissimum, non elegantiam quandam interpretandum omnem hiatum esse, quam sint sectati poëtae, sed licentiam potius quam sibi indulserint.' The truth of this assertion
p. lx. appears from Cicero's words (Or. § 150) 'nemo tam rusticus est qui vocales nolit coniungere.' The only question which is still sub iudice is therefore, how far the comic poets indulged in a license which we must admit they used in their metres.

Parry, in his Introduction to Terence, p. LVII, sets down three rules which would serve to explain the admissibility of hiatus, viz.: hiatus, he says, is justified,

(1) by the sense of the passage,

(2) by the punctuation,

(3) in exclamations, such as heia hercle eho heus.

Setting aside the third rule, which has indeed a general value for all Latin poets, we confine ourselves to a more detailed discussion of the first two rules. We may define the matter more accurately in the following manner :—

Hiatus is justified :

(a) where the line is divided among two or more speakers,

(b) by caesura and diaeresis.

The latter point in its full extent was long disputed by Ritschl, but at last he began to allow a greater freedom and to relax the severity of his original views, as will be seen in the instance of the hiatus in the caesura of the trochaic septenarius (praef. Men. p. X ss.) This occurs in the Aulularia v. 174. 250. 638. But he does not allow a hiatus in the caesura of an iambic senarius 'ut quae in medium ordinem rhythmicum incidat' (Proll. p. CXCVI). Still he deviates from this law in such an instance as Trin. 342, tempúst adeundi :: éstne hic Philto qui ádvenit?

because in this case the line is divided among two speakers. In the Aulularia we have two instances of the same kind of hiatus, viz. 305 and 530:

immo équidem credo :: át scin etiam quómodo?
ain aúdivisti? :: úsque a principio ómnia.

In both instances it would not be very difficult to avoid the hiatus by writing set instead of at in the first, and inserting aio before usque in the second line. But as a hiatus of this kind is by no means very rare, we shall adhere to the authority of our mss.

To proceed, Ritschl allows no such hiatus as we have p. lxi.
Trin. 185,

em meá malefacta, ém meam avaritiám tibi, according to the reading of all our mss. He writes therefore en meá malefacta, meam én avaritiám tibi, to which Fleckeisen justly prefers Hermann's reading en meá tibi malefacta, én meam avaritiám tibi[1].

Or, to give another instance, Trin. 776, the reading of all our mss. is as follows:

det álteramílli. álteram dicát tibi, which Ritschl changes into illí det álteram, álteram dicát tibi.

In both cases Brix has kept the reading of the mss., and we think him the more entitled to do so, as it requires a great deal of arbitrary criticism to correct all other instances of the same kind. It is therefore possible to maintain the reading of the mss. in the following lines in the Aulularia:

695. memoráre nolo, hóminum[2] mendicábula.

561. potáre ego hodie, Eúclio[3], tecúm uolo.

704. atát, eccum ipsum. íbo, ut hoc condám, domum.

[1] See also the critical note on this passage in my edition.

[2] Bergk would in all such cases avoid the hiatus by writing homōnum. See his arguments in the Philol. XVII p. 54 sqq. jahrb. 1861 p. 633. Brix on Men. 82.

[3] It would be possible to read hodié potare ego, Euelio, tecúm volo. (See, however, below, where I have adopted another índeque óbservabo, aúrum ubi abstrudát senex.

Nor would I correct the ms. reading in v. 671

We have the same hiatus v. 69 :

queo cónminisci : ita me miseram ad húnc modum,

p. lxii. as the line stands not only in $J\gamma$ and the recent mss., but in B itself.

Another instance which may be alleged, is somewhat doubtful. It is v. 504, stat fúllo phrugio aúrifex linárius.

In this case we may notice that B gives phyrgio, a reading which might be supported by a great many analogous examples of other words[1], though it is true that this form of the word seems to occur nowhere else. If therefore we could confidently say that a hiatus was in this line an impossibility, we should have to give phurgio in our text.

But there is a general law which protects a great many passages in Plautus, in which a hiatus occurs, from the corrections of modern scholars. We owe its discovery to Fleckeisen. It is as follows :

Monosyllables terminating in a long vowel or m need not coalesce with a following short vowel.

Illustrations of this law may be found in such passages as Stich. 321. Aul. 707. 708. Mil. gl. 1330[2].

reading.) A hiatus of the same kind (i.e. before a proper name) occurs Poen. v 3, 8 :

o mí ere salve, Hánno insperatíssume.

This is the reading in BC, and though A gives the scene in which this line stands, I cannot say what the reading in it is. But to show how easy it is to get rid of such a hiatus as this, if we are only determined to do so, we will remove it for the benefit of the hiatus-haters among our readers :

o mi ére, salvē : salve Hánno insperatíssume.

And this reading would be recommended by the 'variatio accentus' in salve (see my note on v. 258).

[1] Compare corcodilus tarpessita bardus θάρσος Cortona corcota (see my dissertation de Aulularia p. 14).

[2] See Corssen II 783 sq.

This kind of hiatus occurs most frequently when the p. lxiii.
long vowel (or a vowel together with m) forms the first syllable of an arsis resolved into two shorts. This may be exemplified by comparing the following passages in the Aulularia: arg. I 2. mé ut id 8. quoí ego 187. quó abis 201. iám ego 272. rém habere 458. sí ita 488. dém hodie 654. mé erus 673.

A few words in conclusion. Throughout this chapter, we have endeavoured to keep free from merely hypothetical theories which have been brought forward for the explanation of Plautine prosody. 'Difficile est et lubricum,' says Ritschl, Proll. Trin. p. CLXVII, 'quid vitae consuetudo veterum probare vel potuerit vel non potuerit, assequi ratiocinando et comminiscendo velle.' Unless we greatly mistake, Ritschl's own investigations—to follow which in their gradual development is one of the most instructive and interesting studies—prove the truth of this observation. Yet the history of his investigations appears to teach a lesson which will most likely be the basis for the labours of the coming time, viz. that we gain and learn more and arrive at more stable results by means of a critical and conservative observation of single facts than by specious but unsound emendations of seeming irregularities[1].

[1] See also Brix, jahrb. für class. phil. 1865 p. 58. I may also be allowed to refer to the preface of my edition of the Trinummus.

T. MACCI PLAVTI AVLVLARIA.

ARGVMENTVM I

Senéx avarus víx sibi credens Eúclio domí suae defóssam multis cúm opibus aulam ínvenit rursúmque penitus cónditam exsánguis amens sérvat. eius fíliam Lycónides vitiárat. intereá senex Megadórus a soróre suasus dúcere uxórem, avari gnátam deposcít sibi:
durús senex vix promíttit atque aulaé timens domó sublatam váriis abstrudít locis.
insídias servos fácit huius Lycónidis qui vírginem vitiárat: atque ipse óbsecrat avónculum Megadórum sibimet cédere uxórem amanti. pér dolum mox Eúclio quom pérdidisset aúlam, insperato ínvenit laetúsque natam cónlocat Lycónidi.

ARGVMENTVM II

Aulám repertam avárus plenam auri Eúclio vi súmma servat, míseris adfectús modis.
Lycónides istíus vitiat fíliam.
volt hánc Megadorus índotatam dúcere, lubénsque ut faciat dát coquos cum obsónio.
auró formidat Eúclio, abstrudít foris, re*que* ómni inspecta cómpressoris sérvolus id súrpit, illic Eúclioni rém refert, ab eó donatur aúro, uxore, et fílio.

PERSONAE

LAR FAMILIARIS PROLOGVS
EVCLIO SENEX
STAPHYLA ANVS
EVNOMIA MVLIER
MEGADORVS SENEX
STROBILVS MEGARONIDIS SERVOS
STROBILVS (?) LYCONIDIS SERVOS
ANTHRAX COCVS
CONGRIO COCVS
PHRVGIA TIBICINA
ELEVSIVM TIBICINA
PYTHODICVS SERVOS
LYCONIDES ADVLESCENS.

PROLOGVS.

LAR FAMILIARIS.

Nequís miretur quí sim, paucis éloquar.
ego Lár sum familiáris, ex hac fámilia

The greater part of the prologues to the Plautine plays being spurious and prefixed to the comedies of the poet long after his death, it is very doubtful whether the prologue to the Aulularia can be held to have been written by the poet himself. It is true, none of the arguments alleged against the rest of the prologues by Ritschl (Par. I 209—226) can be applied to this: on the contrary, this prologue is remarkably distinguished for its simple grace and unaffected language. As regards the question of its being required or not, we agree entirely with Thornton, who justly observes: 'There seems to be no reason, why any account at all need be given for how many generations the treasure had remained undiscovered in the old miser's family,' though at the same time it is obvious that for the purpose of giving such information no fitter person could be selected than the Lar familiaris. Moreover, the introduction of this deity is quite conformable to the habit of the writers of the so-called New Comedy (see Meineke, Men. et Philem. rell. 1823 p. 284) which Plautus seems to have followed here as well as in the prologues to the Rudens and the Trinummus. On these grounds, I was originally inclined to attribute this prologue to Plautus himself (de Aulul. p. 29), but without taking into consideration a metrical reason subsequently suggested by Brix, viz. that the writer uses the word avónculus v. 34 as quadrisyllabic, while Plautus himself has it as trisyllabic aúnculus (v. 677. 772. 792), in accordance with a popular pronunciation which we find confirmed by several inscriptions. It seems therefore safer to return to Bernhardy's opinion (Römische Litteraturgeschichte, 1865, p. 442) who ascribes this prologue to an older hand than the others, though we may allow the universal character and even the whole idea of it to be taken from Plautus' original prologue.

v. 2. Lar familiaris, the tutelar deity of the house and family. "The Roman Lases, at a later time called Lares, are subordinate deities of a kind and helpful disposition; their unde éxeuntem me áspexistis. hánc domum iam múltos annos ést quom possideo ét colo patríque avoque iam huíus qui nunc híc habet.

sed míhi avos huius óbsecrans concrédidit thensaúrum auri ~~olim~~ clam ómnis: in medió foco defódit, venerans mé, ut id servarém sibi.
is quóniam moritur, íta avido ingenió fuit, activity is displayed in field and garden, on roads and in pathways, in town and hamlet, on the vault of heaven and in the deep of the sea, as is proved by the epithets given to them; but above all they are held to be the benevolent and helpful spirits of the dear homestead and house, the genial blessing of whom pervades the whole family, and makes it thrive (Preller, Röm. Mythol. p. 71 sq. 486 sq. 2nd ed.). The name is in Etruscan Las-a, in Latin Las-es, Lar-es, (Lar-a, Larunda 'the mother of the Lares') and has been justly derived from the root las 'to desire or wish,' whence we have in Latin las-c-ivu-s, in Gothic lus-tu-s, Old High Germ. lus-ti, 'lust.' Las-a, Las-es, Lar-es would thus mean 'well-wishing, benevolent' spirits like the Holden in German mythology." Corssen, Etrusker, 1 p. 246. See also our note on Trin. 39.

4. The construction of this line is somewhat negligent, though used by Plautus himself in another passage: Persa 137, sicut istic leno haudum sex mensis Megaribus huc est quom commigravit. Hence may have arisen the French way of expressing the same thought; il y a beaucoup d'années que—. For quom 'since' see also Public School Latin Grammar, § 182, 9, and for the explanation of the present tenses possideo and colo see Key, L. G. § 1455 e, note†, and § 458.—colo = incolo, as v. 693. Here the notion of guarding the house is involved, in the same way as in Virgil's expression nemorum cultrix Latonia virgo (Aen. XI 557) not only 'inhabitant,' but protectress too is meant.

5. patrique avoque 'for the advantage of—:' see Key, L. G. § 977.—habet = habitat (cf. v. 21) according to an idiom which is pretty frequent in Plautus.

7. thensaurus is the genuine Plautine form which, in consequence of the thin pronunciation of the letter n, afterwards became thesaurus. In the same way we have Megalensia = Megalesia, comp. Corssen 1 251 sqq.—omnis is acc. plur. 'unknown to all:' see Dräger, Histor. Syntax 1 § 304 (p. 621). It is very natural that clam should govern the accusative in early Latin, as it is an adverb formed from the root cal seen in Greek καλ-ύπτω and Καλ-υψώ, and was originally calam (comp. palam).

8. The syllables ans mĕ ut form a dactyl, according to a metrical law explained Introd. p. 69.

9. Donatus (on Ter. Ad.

nunquam índicare id fílio voluít suo, inopémque optavit pótius eum relínquere quam eúm thensaurum cómmonstraret. fílio agrí reliquit éi non magnúm modum, quo cúm labore mágno et misere víveret.
ubi is óbiit mortem quí mi id aurum crédidit, coepi óbservare, ecquí maiorem fílius mihi honórem haberet quam éius habuissét pater.
atque ílle vero mínus minusque impéndio curáre minusque me ímpertire honóribus.
item á me contra fáctumst: nam item obíit diem.
is húnc reliquit qui híc nunc habitat fílium paritér moratum, ut páter avosque ciús fuit.
huic fília unast: éa mihi cotídie

prol. 1) observes that quoniam is here used in its original sense of a temporal conjunction, being but a compound of quom and iam. Plautus has it so not unfrequently, e. g. Trin. 112 quoniam hinc iturust ipsus in Seleuciam. ibid. 149 quoniam hinc profectust ire peregre Charmides. We may observe the same change of the two notions of temporality and causality in the German conj. weil, which has now almost entirely lost its temporal sense, though this was the original one. Nevertheless, Schiller uses it as an equivalent to the English while, Wilhelm Tell, act I sc. 2 'weil ich ferne bin, führe du mit klugem sinne das regiment des hauses.' See also my note on Trin. 14.—The words ita avido ingenio fuit might stand in brackets, at least they do not influence the construction of the sentence: 'when he was about to die, he did not—such was his avaricious disposition—reveal the secret to his son.'

10. id here and v. 8 denotes the secret in general, and should not be referred to thensaurus, though a gloss in a Vienna ms. suggests 'nota thesaurum neutro genere dici.' But in the present prologue it is doubtless masculine, see v. 12, and such it is indeed wherever it occurs in Plautus. For the indefinite and somewhat loose employment of the neuter pronoun the student may consult my note on Trin. 405.

13. Comp. Hor. Serm. II 6, 1 hoc erat in votis: modus agri non ita magnus.

18. impendio is here used as an adverb. Cicero has it so in his epistles, ad Att. x 4, 9 at ille impendio nunc magis odit senatum. See Afranius 351 in dies impéndio | ex désiderio mágis magisque máceror, and Ter. Eun. 587 impendio magis animus gaudebat mihi. In later latinity, e. g. in Appuleius and Ammianus Marcellinus, we meet with the same adverbial use of impendio.

23. For mihī see Introd. p. 23.—cotidie, instead of quo- aut túre aut vino aut áliqui semper súpplicat, dat míhi coronas. eíus honoris grátia fecí, thensaurum ut híc reperiret Eúclio.

nam eám compressit dé summo adulescéns loco:
is scít adulescens quaé sit quam comprésserit, illa íllum nescit, néque compressam autém pater.
eam ego hódie faciam ut híc senex de próxumo sibi uxórem poscat: íd ea faciam grátia quo ille eám facilius dúcat qui comprésserat.
et híc qui poscet eám sibi uxorém senex, is ádulescentis ílliust avónculus, qui illám stupravit nóctu, Cereris vígiliis.
sed híc senex iam clámat intus, út solet.

tidie, is a form well supported by the best mss. and expressly recommended by Marius Victorinus I p. 2460 (Putsch).

24. tus vinum coronae were the usual honours offered to the household-gods: see v. 383 and the commentators upon Hor. Od. III 23, 3. Iuv. IX 137 ss.

25. Comp. huius honoris gratia Amph. I 2, 24.

27. After having given the general reason of his action, the Lar is now going to inform his hearers of the detailed circumstances. This is the true explanation of nam, a particle which never gives up its character entirely, though it may seem simply connective in some passages. The Greek γάρ is often used in exactly the same way. See note on v. 595.

29. neque autem ('nor on the other hand') is used by Cicero Fam. v 12 and Lucretius I 857, and VI 779.

30. hic senex de proxumo (ex prox. 169. 288) 'the old man, our neighbour.' He means Megadorus.

31. For sĭbi ŭxŏ—see Introd. p. 49. In 33 the word uxor has its original quantity.

35. Cereris vigiliis] Lyconides himself confesses this fact to Euclio v. 787 s. 'The nocturnal festival of Ceres, θεσμοφόρια, vigiliae Cereris, used to be celebrated by married and unmarried women strolling about in the dark without lights, whence this opportunity could easily be misused by young men desirous to encounter romantic adventures. The comic poets are therefore quite true to reality in founding the plots of some of their plays upon these festivals, as e. g. Plautus does here and in his Cistellaria (where see the prol. 8).' Köpke. Cicero has several chapters against such licentious festivals as these in his second book de legibus, where he especially mentions their frequent occurrence in the comic poets, II 14: quid autem mihi displi- anúm foras extrúdit, ne sit cónscia.

credo, aúrum inspicere vólt, ne subruptúm siet.

ceat in sacris nocturnis, poëtae indicant comici. See Davies' and Turnebus' notes on de leg. II 9 and 14.

38. conscia. In prose the dependent genitive is rarely omitted (see, however, Cic. de Fin. II 16, 53), but in poetry the adjective is occasionally used absolutely, e.g. Cistell. II 3, 46 fac me consciam ('tell me'). Hor. Serm. I 2, 130 miseram se conscia clamet.

39. subruptum and V. 347 subrupias are the archaic forms for subreptum and subripias, which are frequently given by the best mss. of Plautus and should no doubt be uniformly introduced into the text. The ă of rapere capere quatere calcare salire became originally ŭ in compounds, comp. occupo, concutio, inculco, insulto. These forms occur even in those later writers who affect an archaic style, and even Martial has surrupuit XIII 38. Comp. also contubernium and taberna, and see Schuchardt, on Vulgar Latin I 173 sq.

ACTVS I.

EVCLIO. STAPHYLA. I 1

Ev. Exi ínquam, age exi: exeúndum hercle tibi hinc ést foras, circúmspectatrix, cum óculis emissíciis.
St. nam cúr me miseram vérberas? Ev. ut mísera sis atque út te dignam mála malam aetatem éxigas.

40. For exeundum see Introd. p. 62. The accentuation of hercle on the final syllable is quite unobjectionable, as appears from another line Curc. I 3, 55 (261) siquidem hercle mihi regnum detur, though Fleckeisen transposes there mi hercle, which is however against the authority of the mss. Comp. also Mil. glor. 473, mágis hercle metuo.

41. circumspectatrix 'pry-about' THORNTON.—oculi emissicii 'inquisitive eyes,' a phrase imitated by Tertullian de pallio c. 3 circumspectu emissicii ocelli immo luminis puncta vertiginant. Cicero would have said emissarii; Plautus has a similar formation Poen. V 5, 24 tunicae demissiciae, which Horace calls tunicae demissae Serm. I 2, 25.

42. nam cur = curnam. Plautus and Terence frequently change the order of such compounds with nam, e.g. v. 44 we have nam qua = quanam, and Curc. I 1, 12 nam quo te dicam ego ire = quonam. Comp. however, such passages in Virgil as Ecl. IX 39, Georg. IV 445.—Euclio's answer is laconic enough, a way of speaking very natural with an angry man. He means 'you ask me why I beat you, poor wretch—well to give you some reason to call yourself wretched.' Much of the strength of the passage consists in the repetition of the word misera, just as in the next line mala malam are put close together. Comp. Trin. 68, malis te ut verbis multis multum obiurigem. In Greek e.g. καλὴ καλῶς Aristoph. Acharn. 253.

43. aetas (originally contracted from aevitas), is with the comic poets very frequently an equivalent to vita. Thus Plautus says sibi inimicus magis quam aetati tuae = vitae tuae, tibi, Men. 675. Both words

ST. nam quá me nunc causa éxtrusisti ex aédibus?
EV. tibi egón rationem réddam, stimulorúm seges?
illúc regredere ab óstio: illuc: sís vide, ut incédit. at scin, quó modo tibi rés se habet?
si hercle hódie fustem cépero aut stimulum ín manum, testúdineum istum tíbi ego grandibó gradum.
ST. utinám me divi adáxint ad suspéndium occur together Amph. II 2, 1 s. in vita atque in aetate agunda.

45. stimulorum seges 'harvest of whips,' a comical expression which may be paralleled with Cicero's seges gloriae (in pro Milone).

46. sis 'if you please.' This sis is an equivalent to si vis, conf. Cic. or. 45, 154, 'lubenter verba iungebant, ut sodes pro si audes, sis pro si vis.' An instance of sodes (=si audes), occurs Trin. 244, where see our note. It is, however, more common to say videsis, in one word.

47. For incédit see Introd. p. 48; incedit is more than 'she walks,' it is 'she creeps.' 'incedere est otiose et cum dignitate quadam ambulantium.' Westerhov on Ter. Eun. v 3, 9, who quotes Plaut. Pseud. 411 and Verg. Aen. I 46.

48. hercle logically belongs to the following line, but in consequence of a kind of hasty anticipation it is put into the protasis. We find it so very often, e.g. v. 56. 248. Pseud. 628. Stich. 610. Trin. 457. Epid. III 1, 10.

49. grandibo gradum: alliteration together with assonance. Epid. I 1, 11 ut tu es gradibus grandibus. Truc. II 2, 31 abire hinc ni properas grandi gradu. Fragm. Clitellariae ap. Festum v. Vegrande nimium es vegrandi gradu. Pacuvius v. 37 Ribb. has praegrandi gradu. The word itself is explained by Nonius by grandem facere, and examples are quoted from Varro, Plautus, Lucretius, Accius and Pacuvius. For the formation of the future in ibo and the imperfects in ibam instead of iebam, see Key, L. G. §§ 461 and 468. Comp. also the extensive collections of formations of this kind in Neue's Formenlehre II p. 448 sq. With testudineus gradus 'tortoise-pace' we may compare formicinus gradus Men. 888.

50. The nominative divi=di occurs only here in Plautus; but the formula divom atque hominum fidem is repeatedly found, Amph. v 1, 69. Aul. 297. Merc. 842. Rud. prol. 9 (divos =deos Mil. gl. 730).—adaxint is said by Nonius to stand instead of adigant, an explanation which renders only the general sense of the word, without accounting for its formation. This is explained by Festus' remark (v. axitiosi) 'axit antiquos dixisse pro egerit manifestum est.' axim is formed in the same way as potiús quidem, quam hoc pácto apud te sérviam.

Ev. at út scelesta sóla secum múrmurat.
oculós hercle ego istos, ímproba, ecfodiám tibi, ne me óbservare póssis, quid rerúm geram.
abscéde etiam nunc, étiam nunc. ST. etiámne?
Ev. ohe,
istíc astato. si hércle tu ex istóc loco digitúm transvorsum aut únguem latum excésseris, faxim, see Neue II pp. 539. 543—546. A third formation of the same kind is capsim capsis, which was misunderstood for cape sis (si vis) by Cicero Or. 45, 154 (an explanation rejected by Quintilian I 5, 66). The perfects axi (ag-si), faxi (fac-si), cap-si follow the analogy of duxi (duc-si) rep-si etc., while ēgi fēci cēpi lengthen the radical vowel. See Corssen, Krit. Beitr. zur lat. Formenl. p. 530.

52. Such alliterations as scelesta sola secum are very frequently found in the ancient Roman poets and merit our especial attention. We shall here point out only a few examples which occur in the next lines: dedam discipulam 59. metuo male 61. miserum modis 66. miseram modum 69. decies die 70. Alliteration was, it is true, never a necessary and organic element in Latin poetry, at least so far as our sources permit us to trace back its history; still, it was frequently employed by the earliest poets who kept close to the spoken language of the people, which is always fond of alliteration; and even in the so-called classical periods of Latin poetry it was often employed as an additional ornament. Horace e.g. uses it very judiciously in such passage. as dulce decus Od. I 1, 2. dulce et decorum I 1 2, 13. dulce docta III 9, 10. dulci distinet a domo IV 5, 12 etc. See a very good essay on this subject in Lucian Müller's book de re metr. poet. p. 450 ss. and Mr Munro's remarks in his edition of Lucretius II p. 106.

53. For examples of the phrase oculos ecfodere (ὀφθαλμοὺς ἐξορύσσειν) see Aul. 187. Capt. III 1, 4. Trin. 463. Ter. Eun. IV 6, 2, where Donatus observes 'femineae minae sunt.'

54. The phrase quid rerum geram is not unfrequently met with in Plautus; thus we have it again Aul. 117.

57. Gronovius Lect. Pl. p. 48 sq., quotes the expression digitus transversus from Cato de re rust. c. 45 and 48, and the equivalent patens digitus is quoted from Caes. b. c. II 10. unguis transversus occurs in two passages of Cicero's, ad Att. XIII 20 and Fam. VII 25. In the latter passage the addition of the words quod aiunt shows the proverbial character of the expression, which would however be perfectly evident even without this hint.

aut sí respexis, dónicum ego te iússero, contínuo hercle ego te dédam discipulám cruci.
sceléstiorem me hác anu certé scio vidísse numquam, nímisque ego hanc metuó male, ne mi éx insidiis vérba imprudentí duit neu pérsentiscat, aúrum ubi est abscónditum:
quae in óccipitio quóque habet oculos péssuma.
nunc íbo ut visam, sítne ita aurum ut cóndidi:
quod mé sollicitat plúrimis miserúm modis.
ST. noenúm mecastor, quíd ego ero dicám meo

58. respexis = respex(es)is = respexeris: Key, L. G. § 566.

59. 'I'll send you for a schooling to the gallows,' THORNTON. The cross shall teach you to shut your eyes for ever, if you cannot keep them shut for a few moments.

60. In the ms. B we find here the marginal note 'hoc secum loquitur,' which is perfectly adapted to the situation.

61. For the prosody of nimĭsque, see Introd. p. 31.

62. duim (compare v. 236 perduim v. 664) is an archaic subj. pres. See Neue II p. 441 sq. The ending im is the same as seen in edim velim nolim malim sim. Cicero has this form in the formulas di te perduint pro rege Deiot. 7, 21, and utinam tibi istam mentem di immortales duint Catil. I 9, 22. The expression verba dare which properly means 'to give mere words instead of deeds' commonly assumes the more general sense 'to deceive.'

63. persentiscat: 'smell the place out, where the gold is hidden.'

64. occipitium is the form more frequently found than occiput; comp. also sincipitium Men. 506, instead of sinciput, the latter being the only recognised form in good writers.

67. noenum = ne oenum (unum), according to the explanation first given by Jacob Grimm. The word corresponds therefore entirely with the Greek οὐδ-αμ-ῶς, and οὐδ-έν, the latter being frequently used as a simple negation in later Greek and constantly so in modern Greek, where we have moreover the shortened form δέν. As to the Latin word, we may observe that this passage seems the only one in which at least one good ms. has kept it. In Ennius we read it in three places: ann. 161 somnia vera aliquot, verum omnia noenu necessest (non nunc the mss., noenu H. Ilberg); ann. 314 noenum rumores ponebat ante salutem (non enim the mss., noenum Lachmann); and ann. 411 noenum sperando cupide rem prodere summam (non in the ms.). When judging from these examples, it is not without probability that in many passages in Plautus where we now read non enim, we should reintroduce the original reading noenum, e. g. in the Aulularia itself malaé rei evenísse quamve insániam, queo cónminisci: íta me miseram ad húnc modum deciéns die uno saépe extrudit aédibus.

nesció pol quae illunc hóminem intemperiaé tenent:
pervígilat noctis tótas, tum autem intérdius quasi claúdus sutor dómi sedet totós dies.
neque iám quo pacto célem erilis fíliae probrúm, propinqua pártitudo quoi áppetit, queo cónminisci: néque quicquam meliúst mihi, ut opínor, quam ex me ut únam faciam lítteram

v. 586 where non enim seems to have no clear meaning. See Bücheler, jahrb. für class. phil. 1863 p. 774.

69. For the hiatus in the caesura, see Introd. p. 68.

71. For the disyllabic pronunciation nescîo see Introd. 64.—intemperiae 'whimwhams' (Thornton), see v. 634. Epid. III 4, 39. Mil. gl. 434.

72. Interdius (ἀν' ἡμέραν) is read here and Most. 444; the simple dius occurs in opposition to noctu Merc. 862, and Charisius expressly states that Titinius used noctu diusque: see Ribb. Com. p. 116; from this an old acc. neutr. diu (as seen in the usual form interdiu) arose after the final s had been dropt (Introd. p. 30). From the Sanskr. divas we have in Latin both dies and dius (comp. diur-nus, where the original s is changed into an r). See Corssen, Krit. Beitr. zur Formenl. p. 499 s. 504. Lachmann on Lucr. p. 226 s.

73. claudus sutor: 'of course, lame people would be the most likely to take to such a sedentary employment as that of a cobbler.' Riley. Comp. v. 508.

—For dómi (not d'mi) see Introd. p. 23 s.

74. erus and its derivatives are better spelt without an initial h; see Ritschl, Proll. Trin. p. 98, praef. Stichi p. 23, and Opusc. II 409.

76. The repetition of the words queo conminisci may perhaps appear strange, but such repetitions are not inconsistent with the character of a garrulous old woman, and afford no ground for entertaining any suspicion of the genuineness of the reading. Such seeming negligence must be granted to a comic poet.

77 s. Famianus Strada has written a special paper on this littera longa, but the right explanation has been found out by Lipsius who compares an epigram of Ausonius (128, 10): Quid, imperite, P putas ibi scriptum, ubi locari iota convenit longum? This epigram is directed against Ennus, a man of very bad repute, who, as the poet insinuates, ought to be sent to the gallows. The figure of a long I is indeed somewhat like the appearance of a hanging body, especially longám, meum laqueo cóllum quando obstrínxero.

Ev. nunc défaecato démum animo egrediór domo, postquám perspexi, sálva esse intus ómnia. [I 2 redi núnciam intro atque íntus serva. ST. quíppini?
ego íntus servem? an né quis aedis aúferat?
nam hic ápud nos nihil est áliud quaesti fúribus:
ita iniániis sunt óppletae atque aráneis. 6

if that body should happen to be very thin and slender. longae litterae are also mentioned Rud. v 2, 7 and Poen. IV 2, 15, but without any special reference to the letter I: comp. littera pensilis Pseud. 17.—unam is not pleonastic, as Weise says (see note on v. 563); Staphyla intends making of herself one long letter; i.e. a letter exhibiting one long stroke.

79. animo defaecato is explained by Camerarius 'liquido minimeque turbido, i.e. hilari;' see Pseud. 760 nunc liquet, nunc defaecatumst cor mihi. The same meaning is expressed by animo liquido et tranquillo es Epid. v 1, 36 and liquido es animo Pseud. 232. In one passage (Most. 158) the word defaecatus is metaphorically used of a person cleaned by a bath.

81. For nunciam (which is always trisyllabic in Plautus and Terence) we may refer to our note on Trin. 3.—quippini, instead of quippeni, is very frequently given by the best mss. e.g. Most. 948. 1109. Pseud. 361. The final ĕ in quippe was changed into i before an n, in the same way as we have tutin = tutene. The right punctuation of this passage is first seen in Pareus' edition, and is here of much importance for the construction of the sentence. The sense is 'why should I not? Shall I really take care of all within? Perhaps you are afraid, somebody might run away with our house?'

83. quaesti: for this genitive see Key, L. G. § 141 and a valuable paper by Ritschl in the Rhein. Mus. VIII p. 494 [now Opusc. II]. Fleckeisen, Krit. Miscellen p. 42 ss. The following is an extract from Ritschl's prooemium de titulo Aletrinatium (1853) p. VIII 'longe longeque latius per sextum septimumque saeculum altera terminatio (i) patuit. qua et Plautus usus est constanter in quaesti tumulti victi senati sumpti gemiti, et Ennius strepiti tumulti declinans, Pacuvius flucti aesti parti soniti, Caecilius quaesti sumpti soniti, Terentius quaesti tumulti fructi ornati adventi, Turpilius quaesti tumulti fructi sumpti piscati parti, Titinius quaesti, Attius flucti tumulti exerciti aspecti lucti salti, Lucilius sumpti, Afranius tumulti, Pomponius quaesti tumulti piscati, bis Lucretius geli, Calpurnius Piso senati, Cato fructi, Sisenna senati soniti, Sallustius tumulti soniti.'

Ev. mirúm quin tua me caúsa faciat Iúppiter Philíppum regem aut Dárium, trivenéfica.
aráneas mihi ego íllas servarí volo.
paupér sum, fateor, pátior: quod di dánt, fero.
abi íntro, occlude iánuam: iam ego híc ero.
cave, quémquam alienum in aédis intro míseris.
quod quíspiam ignem quaérat, extinguí volo, ne caúsae quid sit quód te quisquam quaéritet.
nam si ígnis vivet, tu éxtinguere extémpulo.

84. The word inania, instead of inanitas, probably owes its origin to nothing more than the assonance of aranea. The ὀξύμωρον 'full of emptiness' can hardly be imitated in any modern language, so as to preserve its entire strength of expression. Plautus ventures on a similar phrase Capt. III 1, 6 where the parasite calls a fast-day dies ecfertus fame. Catullus uses a similar expression (8, 48) plenus sacculus est aranearum, and the same is found in a line of Afranius (Ribb. Com. p. 184) anne arcula tua plenast aranearum? Hence we may safely conclude that this simile was proverbially used in popular speech.

85. mirum quin: 'I wonder, Jove does not make me a wealthy king.' Comp. Persa 339 s. mirum quin regis Philippi causa aut Attali | te potius vendam quam mea, quae sis mea. See also our note on Trin. 495.

86. King Philippus and Darius are here mentioned as the most obvious and best-known instances of wealthy kings, the one as a European, the other as an Asiatic monarch. Comp. 696 ego sum ille rex Philippus. For the usual quantity of Philippus in Plautus see Introd. p. 46 s., but in both passages of the Aulularia the common quantity is well supported by the best mss.—The form trivenefica occurs only here; Bacch. 813, we read tervenefica, which is likewise unexampled in any other passage.

90. For cavĕ see Introd. p. 25.

91. quod 'if,' properly 'as regards the case that,' is always connected with the subjunctive, see the instances from Plautus given by Brix on Mil. gl. 162, and for the occurrence of this construction in Cicero and later writers C. F. W. Müller, Rhein. Mus. xx 480.

92. 'qui petit, vult obtinere: qui quaerit, vult scire aut invenire.' Lambinus.

93. ignis vivet, comp. πυρὸς φλὸξ ἔτι ζῶσα Eur. Bacch. 8. Lipsius compares Arist. Lys. 306 τουτὶ τὸ πῦρ ἐγρήγορεν θεῶν ἕκατι καὶ ζῇ. Hildyard appropriately quotes Shakespeare, Othello v 2, 7 'put out the light, and then put out the light,' i. e. of life. Comp. also Dickens, Old Curiosity Shop, chapt. 44 'The fire has been alive as long as I have.' In German we tum aquam aúfugisse dícito, si quís petet.

cultrúm securim pístillum mortárium, quae uténda vasa sémper viciní rogant, furés venisse atque ábstulisse dícito.
profécto in aedis meás me absente néminem volo íntro mitti. atque étiam hoc praedicó tibi: si Bóna Fortuna véniat, ne intro míseris.
ST. pol ea ípsa, credo, ne íntro mittatúr, cavet.
nam ad aédis nostras númquam adit quaquám prope.
EV. st, táce atque abi intro. ST. táceo atque abeo.
EV. occlúde sis
forís ambobus péssulis: iam ego híc ero.

have the phrase 'einem das lebenslicht ausblasen.'

95. As regards the accentuation pistillúm I may here repeat Ritschl's expression on árgentūm (Men. 930): 'accentus non insolentia at insuavitas,' Men. praef. XIII. See also my note on Trin. 410.

96 s. utendum rogare 'to borrow;' utendum dare 'to lend.' See v. 309 and Ov. ars am. I 433 multa rogant utenda dari, data reddere nolunt.—utendum petere occurs Aul. 397.

100. On Bona Fortuna see Preller Röm. Myth. p. 559. It appears from a passage of Diomedes, that the words Bona Fortuna te quaesivit were commonly used in the sense of nemo te quaesivit. In a fragment of Afranius first pointed out by L. Müller (Rhein. Mus. xx 374) we have an instance of this expression; it runs as follows: 'Adulescens. num quis me quaesiit? Servos. Bona Fortuna.' There is, however, no reason to suppose that Euclio alludes to this, as is the opinion of some commentators; it is, perhaps, more natural to understand the words simply such as they are 'Let nobody enter my house, not even Good Luck itself.'

102. We need not suppose that a temple of Bona Fortuna was close to Euclio's house. There is a temple of Fides in the vicinity, into which Euclio afterwards carries his treasure (v. 575), and as there is also Megadorus' house on the stage, we can hardly accommodate another temple. There occur, besides, no other allusions to such a temple of Fortuna, which would doubtless be the case, had it been a necessary part of the scenery. The adverb quaquam is commonly used in nequaquam and in haud quaquam (Sall. Catil. 3). numquam quaquam is a very strong negation 'never by any means.' Comp. numquam quicquam Amph. II 2, 40. numquam quisquam Ter. Eun. IV 4, 11. See moreover Ter. Andr. I 2, 3. Ad. I 2, 18. IV 1, 12. V 4, 1.

104. ambobus pessulis 'supero et infero.' See Guhl u.

discrúcior animi, quía ab domo abeundúmst mihi.
nimis hércle invitus ábeo. sed quid agám scio.
nam nóbis nostrae qui ést magister cúriae, divídere argenti díxit nummos ín viros. 30

Koner, Leben der Griechen u. Römer 1, 146. 2, 206 s.

105. For animi we may compare such expressions as discrucior animi Ter. Ad. IV 4, 1 (=640 Fl.) Antipho me excruciat animi Phorm. I 4, 10 (=187). excrucias animi Plaut. Mil. gl. 1068 and 1280. angas te animi Epid. III 1, 6. in spe pendebit animi Ter. Haut. tim. IV 4, 5 (=727), where the genitive should not be joined with spe, see Plaut. Merc. I 2, 18 (=127 R.) animi pendeo and my note on the passage. Cicero uses the same expression Tusc. disp. I 40, 96 pendemus animi, excruciamur, angimur: but there animi is due to an emendation by Ursinus, the mss. giving animis. In another passage, Tusc. IV 16, 35 the reading of the mss. is as follows is qui adpropinquans aliquod malum metuit, exanimatusque pendet animi. We have to range under the same head such instances as falsus animi est Ter. Eun. II 2, 43, where the reading animi is expressly mentioned by Donatus, though the mss. give animo: comp. me animi fallit Lucr. I 922. In the same way we have vagus animi Cat. 63, 4, and dubius animi Verg. Georg. III 289. See also Dræger I p. 443 sq., and my note on Trin. 454 satin tu's sanus mentis aut animi tui which passage seems to show that animi is in these constructions a real genitive (used of relation), and not a locative, as has been asserted by some scholars. Comp. also Epid. I 2, 35 desipiebam mentis and ibid. II 2, 55 sermonis fallebar.

106. sed is necessary on account of nam in the following line. Euclio says that, although he does not like to go out, he has nevertheless his reason for doing so. This reason is given by nam.

107. Vtrum legitimos habent omnes tribus divisores suos, quos Plautus magistros curiarum in Aululari vocat? is the question raised by Asconius on Cic. Verr. I 8, 23, although there is no serious foundation for it, the divisores being no legally authorised persons, but distributors of bribery money. See Long's note and Cic. pro Plancio 19, 48. We may however remark that the expression magister curiae is a ἅπαξ λεγόμενον, and was doubtless meant as a translation of the τριττυάρχης of the Greek original (see de Aul. p. 15). The whole passage treats of Athenian life: distributions of money among the citizens were very frequent at Athens, but almost unknown at Rome before the time of the emperors. —Observe the fulsomeness of expression in nobis nostrae, instead of which O. Seyffert has ingeniously conjectured Nestor nostrae.

108. dividere instead of se divisurum esse, in accordance with the loose construction so id sí relinquo ac nón peto, omnes ílico me súspicentur (crédo) habere aurúm domi.

nam véri simile nón est, hominem paúperem pauxíllum parvi fácere quin nummúm petat.
nam núnc quom celo sédulo omnis, né sciant, omnés videntur scíre et me benígnius omnés salutant quám salutabánt prius.
adeúnt consistunt, cópulantur déxteras, rogitánt me, ut valeam, quíd agam, quid rérum geram.
nunc quó profectus sum íbo: postideá domum me rúrsum quantum pótero tantum récipiam.

common in Plautus and Terence. For instances see the Index to my edition of Terence, s. v. infinitive, and note on Trin. 5. —nummus 'has a different sense in Plautus according as it means Greek or Roman money. As a Roman coin, it is equivalent to a sestertius (Epid. I 1, 52. Most. II 1, 10): in the other case to a drachma (Trin. 844) or didrachma (Truc. II 7, 10. Pseud. III 2, 20. Pers. I 1, 38. III 3, 33. V 2, 70). It is impossible to decide whether drachma or didrachma be meant in such passages as Aul. 445. Men. I 4, 1. II 2, 16. Epid. III 2, 36; nor is it clear whether drachma or sestertius should be understood Epid. V 2, 36. As drachma the word is taken by Bentley in Ter. Haut. tim. III 3, 45. Where aureus is added, the nummus Philippeus is meant.' Brix on Trin. 844.—in viros, κατ' ἄνδρας, viritim ; see Public School Latin Gramm. § 93, C, 1, 5.

109. For id see my note on Trin. 405. ilico is the legitimate spelling, not illico: see Ritschl, proll. Trin. CII.

114. benignius salutant 'they are more profuse in their compliments.' Comp. Hor. Ep. I 5, 11 sermone benigno 'copious, plentiful talk.' See also Od. I 17, 15. II 18, 10. In most cases, where we are generally inclined to translate benignus by 'kind,' the original sense of the word 'generous, profuse' will give a more distinct and impressive idea of the meaning of the passage.

116. copulantur 'shake hands together:' this verb occurs as deponent only in this passage. See also Brix on Mil. gl. 172.

118. profectus sum 'where I've set out to go.' Ter. Eun. II 2, 49 fortasse tu profectus alio fueras, on which passage Westerhov rightly observes 'profectus dicitur etiam de eo qui incipit proficisci.' This explains such a phrase as profectu's ire Rud. III 6, 9.

119. quantum potero tantum recipiam 'I shall come back as quick as possible.' Ter. Ad. III 2, 52 tu quantum potes abi, where Fleckeisen adopts Guyet's emendation potest. It is true that in this phrase either the best or at least good mss. give potest as an impersonal in Ter. Ad. v 7, 11. Phorm. v 8, 3. IV 3, 69. Ad. IV 5, 66; but Andr. v 2, 20 and Ad. III 2, 52 potes alone is recorded as the reading of the mss. It should therefore not have been changed into potest; moreover, this line of the Aulularia proves that in this phrase the verb could be personal as well as impersonal: a fact which appears also from Capt. II 3, 88 ut quam primum possis redeas, where Brix compares Ter. Andr. III 3, 45 quantum queam and Eun. v 2, 5 quantum queo. See also Brix on Men. 432, and both Lorenz and Brix on Mil. gl. 115.

ACTVS II.

EVNOMIA. MEGADORVS. II 1

EVN. Velím te arbitrári, med haéc verba, fráter, meáï fidéï tuáïque réi causá facere, ut aéquomst germánam sorórem.
quamquam haúd falsa súm, nos odiósas habéri:
nam múltum loquáces merito ómnes habémur, nec mútam profécto repértam ullam esse hódie dicúnt ullo in saéclo.
verum hóc, frater, únum tamén cogitáto, tibí proxumám me mihíque esse itém te.
ita aéquomst, quod ín rem esse utríque arbitrémur, et míhi te et tibí me consúlere et monére,

120. The forms med and ted are used by Plautus both in the accus. and abl. sing.

122. ut aequomst sc. facere. The infinitive in such constructions is sometimes omitted and aequomst seemingly assumes the same construction as decet. Comp. Rud. 47 is leno, ut se aequomst, flocci non fecit fidem. See below v. 721.

124. multum has here an adverbial sense, comp. Stich. 206 multum miseri. Examples of this use from Horace are generally known: Ep. I 10, 3 multum dissimiles. Serm. II 5, 92 multum similis, and others. multiloquaces, the word proposed for this line by Passerat, has for itself the authority of an old glossary, but cannot be admitted on account of the metre. Plautus employs the word multilocus Cistell. I 3, 1 and Pseud. 794.

125. Lambinus' note on this line is well worth preserving. 'Ego tamen,' he says, 'qui cum haec scriberem, annum aetatis agebam LVI, duas mutas mulieres vidi.' This provokes old Taubmann's fun, who for his part assures Lambinus, that at the age of 29 he knew already more than two dumb women.— Ben Jonson (Silent Woman I 5) calls a woman's silence 'a wealthy dowry.'

126. Adelphasium uses almost the same words Poen. I 2, 28 itást: verum hoc únum tamén cogitáto.

130. A construction monere alicui does not exist. It is therefore clear that in this line the datives depend on consulere, and monere follows its analogy by way of zeugma.

neque óccultum habéri id neque pér metum mussári, quin párticipem páriter ego te ét tu me ut fácias.
eo núnc ego secréto forás te huc sedúxi, utí tuam rem ego técum hic loquerér familiárem.
MEG. da mi, óptuma feminá, manum. EVN. ubi eást? et quis east nam óptuma?
MEG. tu. EVN. túne ais? MEG. si negás, nego.
EVN. decet te équidem vera próloqui.
nam optúma nulla eligí potest: alia ália peior, fráter, est.

131. mussare is explained by Nonius 427, 15 'hominum occulte quid et pressa voce loquentium.' The frequentative mussitare (e.g. metu mussitant Cas. III 5, 33) is explained by Donatus on Ter. Ad. II 1, 53 'proprie est dissimulandi causa tacere, dictum vel a muto vel ab M, quae littera est nimium pressae vocis ac paene nullius, adeo ut sola omnium, cum inter vocales inciderit, atteratur atque subsidat.' Comp. the English to mutter and see Munro on Lucr. VI 1179.

133. Though it appears to us strange that a confidential conversation should purposely take place in a public street, we should not forget that the constant habit of the Roman comedy compelled the poets to let all such things pass in the streets as would otherwise require a more appropriate scenery. Comp. Pompon. 142 ss. Ribb. ego dedita opera te, pater solum foras Seduxi, ut ne quis esset testis tertius Praeter nos.

135. feminā] For the long quantity of the voc. -a see Introd. p. 12.—quis east] quis is more frequently found in Plautus as the feminine than quae, see the copious collection of passages in Brix's note on Mil. gl. 361. See v. 168. Instances of this usage are collected by Nonius 197, 30 ss.—For the separation of nam from quis, see note on v. 42.

136. ais and ait are generally monosyllables in Plautus, aio and aiunt never. See Ritschl, proll. Trin. CLXII.—For the pronunciation of decet = dece see Introd. p. 34.—We should not write quidem instead of equidem, which is the reading of the mss., as it has been shown that equidem is merely a strengthened, and as it were emphatic, form instead of quidem, comp. hem ehem, heu eheu, nam enim. The common opinion, according to which equidem is a contraction of ego quidem, should be given up now. See Ribbeck's valuable treatise, on Latin particles (Leipzig, 1869), p. 36—42, and my note on Trin. 352.

137. The accentuation optúma would be startling to those who believe in a general tendency of Plautine prosody to preserve the common accentuation of daily life. There are, however, many instances of such metrical paroxytona as optúma to be found in Plautus and the

MEG. ídem ego arbitror, néc tibi advorsári certumst me de istác re umquám, soror.
EVN. da mi óperam, amabo.
MEG. tuást: utere átque imperá si quid mé vis.
EVN. íd quod in rém tuam óptumum esse árbitror, te id mónitum advento.
MEG. soror, móre tuo facis. EVN. fácta volo.
MEG. quid ést id, sorór? EVN. quod tibí sempitérnum salútare sít, liberís procreándis—MEG. (ita dí faxint) EVN. volo te úxorem domum dúcere. MEG. heia, occidís. EVN. quid ita?
MEG. quia mí misero cerebrum éxcutiunt tua dícta, soror: lapidés loqueris.
EVN. heia, hóc face, quod te iúbet soror. MEG. si lúbeat, faciam.
EVN. in rem hóc tuamst. MEG. ut quidem ego émoriar, priúsquam ducam.

other comic poets. Comp. desíne (Naev. 60. Caec. 60. Ribb.). piscíbus Rud. II 6, 29. omnibus Trin. 54. consúlit Pseud. 1092. moríbus Aul. 500. unícus Poen. prol. 65. altéra ibid. 85. filius Cas. prol. p. 55. See Ritschl, proll. Trin. p. CCXXIV.

140. amabo 'pray:' see my note on Ter. Eun. 130. It is ordinarily used parenthetically without influencing the construction of the sentence.

141. Comp. Capt. V 3, 1 Hegio, adsum: si quid me vis, imperа.

144. facta volo 'est non comica magis formula quam translaticiae humanitatis, quod est: cupio tibi fieri quod vis, et quantum in me est, ut fiat, operam dabo. Bacch. 495. Asin. 685.' J. F. Gronovius ad Gell. VII 3. Compare Ter. Ad. V 7, 21. Phorm. V 3, 4.

148. occidis] The present stands in this phrase Pseud. 931 and Men. 922, the perfect occidisti Aul. 712 and Ter. Phorm. IV 3, 67.

150. lapides loqueris 'you speak stones.' (Aristoph. Eq. 628, κρημνοὺς ἐρεῖδων.) Compare Shakespeare, Hamlet III 7 'I will speak daggers to her, but use none.' Much Ado about Nothing II 4 'She speaks poniards, and every word stabs.' The contrary is expressed by Aristophanes Nub. 910 ῥᾴδα μ' εἰρηκας.

[sed his legibus, quam dare vis, ducam:]
quae crás veniat, peréndie foras *éc*feratur.
soror, hís legibus si quám dare vis, cedo, núptias adorna.
EVN. cum máxuma possúm tibi, fratér, dare dote:
sed grándior es: múlieris est aétas media.
eam sí iubes, fratér, tibi me póscere, poscam.
MEG. núm nevis me intérrogare te? EVN. ímmo si quid vís, roga.
MEG. póst mediam aetatém qui media dúcit uxorém domum, si éam senex anúm praegnantem fórtuitu fécerit,

154. perendie 'the day after:' this is the original meaning of this word which will thus be constantly met with in Plautus. Comp. the phrase used in the legis actiones 'in diem tertium sive perendinum' (see Bergk, Rhein. Mus. XIX 606) and Merc. 378 cras agito, perendie agito. Megadorus seems to have the same opinion of married life which Hipponax expresses in the following lines δύ' ἡμέραι γυναικός εἰσιν ἥδισται, Ὅταν γαμῇ τις κἀκφέρῃ τεθνηκυῖαν. Another sentence of the same kind is reported of Chaeremon γυναῖκα θάπτειν κρεῖσσόν ἐστιν ἢ γαμεῖν.

157. The reading of this line is very uncertain. In the reading adopted in our text we have the final syllable in grandior long (see Introd. p. 14), and the last syllable in mulieris as anceps, which in the caesura may be excused.—aetas media, i.e. inter senem iuvenemque, sed propior seni, as Seneca expresses it Oed. 776. aetatis mediae mulier Phaedr. II 2, 3, the same person being subsequently styled anus (10). Cicero has media aetas de sen. 17, 60 and 20, 76.

159. nevis is a reading not absolutely certain in this place, and it is possible that Plautus wrote the common non vis. See Ritschl, Opusc. II 249. But in support of our reading we may quote the analogous passage, Poen. V 2, 119, at te moneri num nevis? See, however, also Most. 336.

161. Megadorus contemptuously calls a wife of somewhat maturer years anus, to express that she is nearly old enough to deserve this title. The epithets senex and anus are, however, not to be taken as expressive of a very old age, as they are sometimes applied to persons of about 45 to 50 years. E. g. Amphitruo is styled senex in the comedy bearing his name V 1, 20, and IV 2, 12, though he seems a newly-married man in the prime of his years.

quíd dubitas, quin sít paratum nómen puero Póstumus?
núnc ego istum, sorór, laborem démam et deminuám tibi.
égo virtute déum et maiorum nóstrum dives súm satis:
ístas magnas fáctiones ánimos dotis dápsilis 45 clámores impéria eburna véhicla pallas púrpuram níl moror, quae in sérvitutem súmptibus redigúnt viros.
EVN. díc mihi quaeso, quís east quam vis dúcere uxorem? MEG. éloquar.
nóstin hunc senem Eúclionem ex próxumo paupérculum?
EVN. nóvi hominem haud malúm mecastor. MEG. eíus cupio fíliam 50

162. postumus is a formation of the same kind as infumus intumus extumus. It generally means a son born after his father's death, but sometimes even sons born when their fathers were very old were called so. See Virgil, Aen. VI 763 Silvius, Albanum nomen, tua postuma proles, Quem tibi longaevo serum Lavinia coniunx Educet silvis. Gellius gives us the note of an ancient grammarian, Caesellius, on this passage 'postuma proles non eum significat qui patre mortuo, sed qui postremo loco natus est. sicuti Silvius qui Aenea iam sene tardo seroque partu est editus.' Noct. att. II 16 with Gronovius' note.—For the nominative, see note on Trin. 8, and E. Becker in Studemund's 'Studien' I p. 170.

164. The same expressions are used Trin. 346 and the whole line appears again Capt. 321, where it is however considered spurious by Fleckeisen and Brix. See also Ritschl's conclusive remarks Opusc. II 284.

165. For factio we may compare such passages as Trin. 452. 464. 497. Cistell. II 1, 17. The adjective factiosus (v. 225) means therefore 'multis innixus et florens clientelis.'—dotis: the gen. plur. dotium occurs Digest XXIII 3 'de iure dotium.' dapsilis = δαψιλής. dapsilus is no Latin form: the passage generally quoted, Pseud. 396, is too corrupt to prove anything. The adverb dapsile is read in a fragment of Pomponius (v. 161. Com. Ribb. p. 210).

168. For quis east see note on v. 135.

169. pauperculum 'rather poor.' The diminutive expresses commiseration.

vírginem mihi désponderi. vérba ne faciás, soror:
scío quid dicturá's, hanc esse paúperem. haec pauper placet.
EVN. dí bene vortant. MEG. ídem ego spero.
EVN. quíd? me numquid vís? MEG. vale.
EVN. ét tu, frater. MEG. égo conveniam Eúclionem, sí domist.
séd eccum video. néscio unde sése homo recipít domum. 55

EVCLIO. MEGADORVS.

Ev. praésagibat mi ánimus, frustra me íre, quom exibám domo: II 2 ítaque abibam invítus. nam neque quísquam curiálium vénit neque magíster, quem divídere argentum opórtuit.
núnc domum properáre propero: nam égomet sum hic, animús domist.

172. quid dictura 's, i.e. dictura es, though we should expect either sis or quod es dictura. But in Plautine language the difference between the subjunctive and indicative in constructions like the present is not yet accurately developed. We may compare Bacch. 78 scio ego quid ago : : at ego pol scio quid metuo with Aul. 106 sed quid agam scio.

173. Seeing her brother determined on his choice, Eunomia gives her assent with the words generally used on such occasions di bene vortant: see Trin. 573.—'Abituri, ne id dure facerent, numquid vis dicebant iis quibuscum constitissent.' Donatus on Ter. Eun. II 3, 49. Comp. Hor. Serm. I 9, 6.

174. For the hiatus convéniam | Eúclionem see Introd. p. 66.

175. nescio unde should be joined: 'from some place or other.'

179. properare propero is a comical exaggeration frequently met with in Plautus: see v. 242. Comp. Curc. 637 propere propero.—animus domist: comp. Persa 709 animus iam in navist mihi. Merc. 589 si domi sum, foris est animus: sin foris sum, animus domist. Similar expressions are found Pseud. 32. Men. 584; Ter. Eun. IV 7, 46 and Cic. ad Att. XII 12. Hence we should explain Cas. III 3, 9 s. Thus also Aristoph. Acharn. 398 sq., ὁ νοῦς μὲν ἔξω ξυλλέγων

MEG. sálvos atque fórtunatus, Eúclio, sempér sies.
EV. dí te ament, Megadóre. MEG. quid tu? récten atque ut vís vales?
EV. nón temerariúmst, ubi dives blánde adpellat paúperem.
iam íllic homo aurum mé scit habere: eo mé salutat blándius.
MEG. aín tu te valére? EV. pol ego haud pérbene a pecúnia.
MEG. pól si est animus aéquos tibi, sat hábes qui bene vitám colas.
EV. ánus hercle huic indícium fecit de aúro: perspicué palamst:
quoí ego iam linguám praecidam atque óculos ecfodiám domi.
MEG. quíd tu solus técum loquere? EV. meám pauperiem cónqueror.
vírginem habeo grándem, dote cássam atque inlocábilem:

ἐπύλλια, οὐκ ἔνδον. We may compare even such a passage as in Shakspere's Henry V. 1.2: subjects, whose hearts have left their bodies here in England, And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

182. non temerariumst 'it's not for nothing' (Thorn.), comp. v. 616.

183. eo has here a monosyllabic pronunciation: see Introd. p. 62.—blandius 'very kindly,' i.e. more kindly than he usually does. In this way the comparative is sometimes equal to a strengthened positive, comp. Amph. prol. 56 sed ego stultior, i.e. 'I'm very stupid.' The same expression occurs Merc. 919.

184. a pecunia 'as to my pecuniary circumstances,' comp. ab ingenio improbust Truc. IV 3, 59.

185. For habĕ(s) see Introd. p. 40.

186. Euclio misunderstands the philosophic sentence with which Megadorus tries to comfort him, viz. that a contented mind is the best foundation of happiness, and at once jumps to the conclusion that Megadorus' expression sat habes alludes to his treasure.—perspicue palamst: the two synonyms express together only one idea 'it is quite clear.' Here, as in properare propero (v. 179), alliteration helps to strengthen the expression.

187. For the hiatus quoi ego see Introd. p. 68.

189. virgo grandis 'a full-

190 néque eam queo locáre quoiquam. MEG. táce, bonum habe animum, Eúclio.
dábitur: adiuvábere a me: díc si quid opust: ímpera.
EV. núnc petit, quom póllicetur: ínhiat aurum, ut dévoret.
áltera manú fert lapidem, pánem ostentat áltera.
némini credó qui large blándust dives paúperi.
195 úbi manum inicít benigne, ibi ónerat aliquam zámiam.
égo istos novi pólypos qui ubi quídquid tetigerúnt tenent.

grown girl.' grandis is idiomatically used of growth, see note on Trin. 374. cassus is, as Priscian justly observes, of the same root as carere, and therefore governs the same case as the verb.

190. The words neque eam queo locare quoiquam are no superfluous addition after inlocabilis in the preceding line, as some commentators say. The sense is 'I've an unmarriageable daughter, and indeed I can't dispose of her.' These two expressions together exhaust, so to say, the whole of the idea, such fulness as this being one of the characteristic features of popular speech. Comp. Mil. gl. 452 neque vos qui homines sitis novi neque scio. Amph. v 1, 8 nec me miserior feminast nec ulla videatur magis. Trin. 130 quid secus est aut quid interest?—See v. 211.

191. dabitur, sc. auxilium, pecunia.

192. inhiare c. acc. 'to gape for something,' ἐγχαίνειν τι in Alciphron, a phrase very frequent with Plautus: e.g. Aul. 265. Trin. 169. Mil. gl. 715. 1199. Truc. II 3, 18. Stich. 605: later writers use the dative after this verb. See Ritschl in Reifferscheid's Suetonius p. 490.

193. Erasmus suggests that the allusion is taken from enticing a dog by holding bread in one hand and a stone in the other, ready to throw as soon as the dog comes nearer. Comp. also St Matth. vii 9 ἢ τίς ἐστιν ἐξ ὑμῶν ἄνθρωπος ὃν αἰτήσει ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ ἄρτον, μὴ λίθον ἐπιδώσει αὐτῷ;

195. manum inicere = copulari manus v. 116.—onerare is sometimes synonymous with imponere, inferre, e.g. in Virgil's expressions vina onerare cadis (Aen. I 195) and dona Cereris canistris onerare (Aen. VIII 180). zamia, ζαμία (ζημία), i.e. damnum, detrimentum. The word seems a ἅπαξ λεγ.—Brutus (in Cicero's Ep. ad fam. II 13) expresses the same meaning by iniungere detrimentum.

196. According to the usual idiom, we ought to have quidque instead of quidquid. But it is unnecessary to correct the pre-

MEG. dá mi operam parúmper: paucis, Eúcliost, quod té volo dé communi re ádpellare méa et tua. EV. ei miseró mihi.
aúrum mihi intus hárpagatumst: núnc hic eam rem vólt, scio, mécum adire ad páctionem. vérum intervisám domum. 25
MEG. quó abis? EV. iam huc ad té revortar: nam ést quod visam ad mé domum.
MEG. crédo edepol, ubi méntionem ego fécero de fília míhi ut despondeát, sese a me dérideri rébitur.
* * * * * *
néque illo quisquamst álter hodie ex paúpertate párcior.

sent passage, as there are numerous other passages of the same kind to support it. Comp. Most. 831 ut quidquid magis contemplor, tanto magis placet, with Lorenz's note.

199. harpagare, a hybrid verb formed from the Greek ἁρπαγή, repeatedly occurs in Plautus: Bacch. 657. Pseud. 139. 957. Trin. 289.

200. adire ad pactionem = pacisci, and thus the construction should be explained. See a similar case v. 281.—intervisam: as vis- means 'go and see,' so intervis- means 'go and hunt up,' 'go and see thoroughly into.' Key, Transactions of the Phil. Soc. 1854 p. 67. This explanation accounts for the acc. domum here and in the next line, which some editors change into domi, but compare Merc. 555 interea tamen huc ad me intervisam domum.

202. The construction is most peculiar and, we suppose, unexampled by any other passage. Even mentionem facis ut filiam mihi despondeat would be strange, as mentionem facio would still be used in the sense of postulare, whence also the dependent sentence with ut.

203. After this line I have marked a gap, as there is no connexion between 203 and 204. I have formerly observed 'ea quae interciderunt ad hanc fere sententiam composita fuisse crediderim: etenim se meis opibus parem esse suasque fortunas ad meos sumptus aequandos sufficere negabit; cf. Trin. 467 ss., ubi similia leguntur.'

204. quisquam alter is read here and Asin. 492. Camerarius explains ex paupertate 'ex ordine seu numero pauperum ut ex nobilitate.' This use of paupertas is not, however, supported by other examples.

Ev. dí me servant, sálva res est. sálvomst, si quid cómperit. 30 nímis male timuí: priusquam intro rédii, exanimatús fui.
rédeo ad te, Megadóre, si quid mé vis. Meg. habeo grátiam.
quaéso, quod te pércontabor, ne íd te pigeat próloqui.
Ev. dúm quidem ne quid pérconteris quód mi haud lubeat próloqui.
Meg. díc mihi: quali me árbitrare génere prognatúm? Ev. bono. 35
Meg. quíd fide? Ev. boná. Meg. quid factis? Ev. néque malis neque ímprobis.
Meg. aétatem meam scís? Ev. scio esse grándem item ut pecúniam.
Meg. cérte edepol equidém te civem síne mala omni málitia sémper sum arbitrátus et nunc árbitror. Ev. aurum huíc olet.

205. The mss. read non perit, which is unintelligible, unless we assume perit to be a contracted form of the perfect—an assumption entirely unwarranted in Plautus, and especially at the close of a line. I have, therefore, admitted Vahlen's emendation, comperit. The sense is now 'The money is safe, if indeed Megadorus has heard anything of its existence.'

206. intro redii, 'went back into the house.'—exanimatus: see v. 179.

211. neque malis neque improbis: see note on v. 190.

213. For mala malitia see on v. 42. malitia is often used by the comic writers in the sense of cunning or shrewdness, e.g. Ter. Phorm. IV 3, 54. Plaut. Epid. in fine: hic is homost qui libertatem malitia invenit sua. Cicero too has the word in this sense, ad Att. XV 26.—Instead of omni, Cicero would have preferred ulla: see my note on Ter. Andr. 723 and on Trin. 338, sine omni malitiast.

214. For arbitrōr comp. Cas. II 4, 5 bónae frugi hominem té iam pridem esse arbitrōr : : intélligo, and see Introd. p. 17.—aurum huic olet: "A faint suspicion about anything language is apt to represent under a figure borrowed from the sense of smell. Thus subolet mihi is the favourite mode of expressing this idea with Plautus and Terence [oboluit huic marsuppium quíd nunc me vis? MEG. quóniam tu me et égo te qualis sís, scio:

quaé res recte vórtat mihique tíbique tuaeque fíliae, fíliam tuám mi uxorem pósco. promitte hóc fore.
EV. heía, Megadore, haú decorum fácinus tuis factís facis, út inopem atque innóxium abs te atque ábs tuis me inrídeas.
nám de te neque ré neque verbis mérui, ut faceres quód facis.
MEG. néque edepol ego té derisum vénio neque derídeo, néque dignum arbitrór. EV. cur igitur póscis meam gnatám tibi?
MEG. út propter me tíbi sit melius míhique propter te ét tuos.
EV. vénit hoc mi, Megadóre, in mentem, téd esse hominem dívitem, Men. 384]. The medium by which the scent is conveyed is of course the air, and thus we have the phrase 'to wind,' meaning 'to catch a scent of anything,' so also 'to get wind of,' or as the Germans say wind davon haben." KEY.

215. For the prolepsis see note on v. 440.

216. Formulas of this kind were usual on such occasions as this: see v. 780.

218. decorum tuis factis should be joined: 'a deed becoming your general behaviour.' We may, moreover, draw attention to the assillabation perceptible in dor and decorum. facinus facere is an instance of the so-called figura etymologica, of which Plautus makes frequent use, e.g. this very phrase occurs again Curc. I 1, 24. Cicero too has it, de fin. II 29, 95, most probably in consequence of a remembrance from some poet. Comp. Trin. 446. 599.

219. 'A poor man, who never gave offence to you or yours,' (Thornton). For abs see Draeger I § 285, 4 (p. 579 sq.).

220. For the construction mereri ut Brix on Capt. 419 quotes the following passages: Capt. 419. 740. Epid. v 2, 47. Ter. Andr. I 5, 46. Cic. de or. I 54, 232. Liv. XL 11.

221. Comp. Trin. 448 neque te derisum advenio neque dignum arbitror, where advenio is the reading of the Ambrosian palimpsest, and veni that of the other mss.

fáctiosum: me aútem esse hominem paúperum paupérrumum:
núnc si filiám locassim meám tibi, in mentém venit, té bovem esse et me ésse asellum: ubi técum coniunctús siem, úbi onus nequeam férre pariter, iáceam ego asinus ín luto, tú me bos magis haú respicias, gnátus quasi numquám siem;
ét te utar iníquiore et méus med ordo inrídeat:
neútrubi habeam stábile stabulum, sí quid devortí fuat.
ásini mordicús me scindant, bóves incursent córnibus:
hóc magnumst periclum ab asinis me ád boves transcéndere.

225. item never has the sense attributed to it by Hildyard 'on the other hand,' and the passage quoted by him (Aul. prol. 20) very well admits of the common sense of the word. I have therefore adopted Brix's emendation of this passage.—For factiosum see note on v. 165.

226. locassim arises from an original form locavesim (from which the common form locaverim is derived with the change of an s into an r); by a compression of the middle syllables we get locasim or locassim (comp. causa caussa and Introd. p. 44).—locare is frequently used by the comic poets where later writers would have said conlocare: see the examples given by Bentley in his note on Ter. Phorm. v 1, 32.

229. With the collocation of the words magis hau compare Trin. 233 de hac re mihi satis hau liquet.—quasi stands here in its original sense as the equivalent of its decomposition quam si (see Bentley on Ter. Ad. iv 1, 12). Comp. Trin. 265 peius perit quasi saxo saliat. Mil. gl. 481 s. neque erile hic negotium Plus curat quasi non servitutem serviat (quam si Bb and late mss). Curc. 51 tam a me pudicast quasi soror mea sit (quam si Jγ). See also Bücheler, On Latin declension p. 30.

230. For utār see Introd. p. 17.—iniquiore 'quite unequal.' See note on v. 183.

231. stabile stabulum: see note on v. 42.—For fuat see Key, L. G. § 725, and my note on Trin. 594.

232. For the adv. mordicus see Ritschl Opusc. II 248, who has collected all the Plautine examples of it.—For bovēs (or bous) see Introd. p. 39.

MEG. quam ád probos propínquitate próxume te adiúnxeris, tam óptumumst. tu cóndicionem hanc áccipe. auscultá mihi 60 átque eam mihi despónde. EV. at nihil est dótis quod dem. MEG. né duas.
dúm modo moráta recte véniat, dotatást satis.
EV. eó dico, ne mé thensauros répperisse cénseas.
MEG. nóvi: ne doceás. desponde. EV. fíat. sed pro Iúppiter, num égo disperii? MEG. quíd tibist? EV. quid crépuit quasi ferrúm modo? 65 ní mirum occidór, nisi ego intro huc própere propero cúrrere. II 8, 23
MEG. híc apud me hortúm confodere iússi. sed ubi hinc ést homo?

234 s. quam proxume, tam optumumst = quo propius, eo melius, a construction not unfrequently met with in the comic writers: e.g. Ter. Haut. tim. v 2, 44 quam minima in spe situs erit, tam facillime ... pacem ... conficiet. Ad. III 4, 56 s. quam vos facillume agitis, quam estis maxume, tam maxume vos aequo animo aequa noscere oportet. The same construction is found in Sallust, Iug. 31 ita quam quisque pessume fecit, tam maxime tutus est. See also Ruddimann,' Inst. gramm. lat. II p. 306 ed. Lips.

235. The right spelling of condicio is with a c; see Brambach, on Orthography p. 21. The word is often used in the sense of 'marriage-offer,' e.g. v. 472. See my note on Ter. Andr. 79.—Plautus often uses auscultare instead of auscultari.

236. For duas see note on v. 62. In another passage, Men. 267, it is doubtful whether duas or duis is the true reading.

237. The adjective mōratus is by no means confined to Plautine language; just as we have here recte mōrata, Cicero says vir bene moratus Or. I 43: see the lexica.

240. num disperii, 'let me hope I am not totally undone?' Comp. Most. v 1, 36. Trin. 1089. Ter. Ad. III 3, 1. Haut. tim. v 2, 17. Similar compounds are: discrucior Aul. 105. discupio, dispudet Bacch. 481. Most. 1166. Ter. Eun. v 2, 16. distaedet Amph. I 3, 5. Ter. Phorm. v 9, 22. All these expressions belong to every day life, which is always fond of exaggerations.

242. The infin. act. confodere should be explained by supábiit neque me cértiorem fécit: fastidít mei, quía videt me súam amicitiam vélle. more hominúm facit.

nám si opulentus ít petitum paúperioris grátiam, paúper metuit cóngredi*ri:* pér metum male rém gerit. 70 ídem quando occásio illaec périit, post seró cupit.
Ev. si hércle ego te non élinguandam dédero usque ab radícibus, ímpero, auctor sum, út me quoivis hómini castrandúm loces.
Meg. vídeo ego hercle, me árbitraris, Eúclio, hominem idóneum, quém senecta aetáte ludos fácias, haud meritó meo. 75

posing the ellipsis of an accus. like servos. Hildyard justly compares the following passages from Virgil: Aen. II 185—6. III 472. V 385. 773. This negligent construction is very frequent after iubeo: see the examples given by Zumpt § 617. —We should explain ubi hinc est by assuming a σύγχυσις of two constructions: quo hinc ivit et ubi est. It is, however, possible that we should write hic, comp. Ter. Andr. 965.

243. fastidit mei 'he scorns me:' see Key, L. G. § 939.

246. congredi, from the crude form con-gredi—, see Key, L. G. § 555. Comp. also 242.

247. post is redundant, but a similar instance of post at the beginning of the apodosis occurs Trin. 417.

248. For hercle see note on v. 48.—The verb elinguare occurs only in this passage and in the treatise de differentiis verborum by Cornelius Fronto (p. 2200 Putsch) 'elinguis habet linguam, sed usu eius caret: elinguatus amisit.' Comp. also elinguatio γλωσσοτομία and elinguo, as ἀπογλωττίζω gloss. Lab. p. 64.—usque ab is not so frequently met with as usque ad. Terence has it only once, Phorm. II 3, 48.

249. Comp. Poen. I 18 auctor sum, sino. For the omission of the copula que see Key, L. G. § 1436.

250. For the constr. idoneus qui (like dignus qui) comp. Ter. And. 492 s.

251. In senecta aetas the first word should be considered as an adjective, see on Trin. 43. aetate iuenta (i. e. iuu) occurs at the end of a hexameter in an ancient inscription: Ritschl, P. L. M. E. tab. 80, c. Terence has senecta alone Ad. V 8, 31; in all other passages he uses senectus.—ludos facere = ludere, ludificari, and hence we should explain the construction c. acc. (see an analogous case

Ev. néque edepol, Megadóre, facio, néque si cupiam, cópiast.
Meg. quíd nunc? etiam míhi despondes fíliam? Ev. illis légibus, cúm illa dote quám tibi dixi. Meg. spónden ergo? Ev. spóndeo.
dí bene vórtant. Meg. íta di faxint. Ev. íllud facito ut mémineris cónvenisse, ut né quid dotis méa ad te adferret fília. 80
Meg. mémini. Ev. at scio vos quó soleatis pácto perplexárier.

v. 194 s.). Plautus joins this phrase also with a dative (Merc. II 1, 1. Rud. III 1, 1. Truc. IV 2, 46. Most. II 1, 80. Cas. IV 1, 3), but the accusative appears to be more frequent. See Ritschl, Par. I 428, where a special essay on this phrase will be found showing that ludo facere aliquem, ludum facere aliquem, ludos dare aliquem are not Plautine expressions.

252. In cupiam copiast observe the alliteration together with assonance. Thornton remarks 'There is a poor conceit here. Megadorus had said ludos facias, which may signify you make sport of me, or you give a public show, play or spectacle; in which latter sense Euclio takes it and replies I could not, if I would, by reason of his poverty.' This play on the expression used by Megadorus is really so very poor that we cannot believe it to be intended by Plautus himself, but it seems rather due to the refinement of the commentators. Euclio very strongly expresses the idea 'how could so poor a man as I make sport of so rich a gentleman as you?' copia is not rarely equivalent to 'possibility, chance.'

254. It is of course equally correct whether we accent cúm illa or cum illa, but the first pronunciation seems to harmonize more with the habit of Plautus: see Introd. p. 68.—Comp. Trin. 571 nunc tuam sororem filio posco meo, Quae res bene vortat.—Le. di bene vortant: spondeo. Other instances of the same phrase are Pseud. 646. Trin. 302. Ter. Ad. 725. Eun. 390. Hec. 196. (O. Seyffert, Studia Plautina, p. 2.)

255. facito ut memineris is a phrase recurring in other passages: Bacch. 328. Curc. I 3, 54. Pseud. 515. Stich. 47. facito in memoria habeas occurs Poen. v 4, 108. Cas. III 1, 9. (O. Seyffert, l. c.)

257. The verb perplexari occurs only here in Plautus; Terence expresses the same by perplexe loqui Eun. v 1, 1. Comp. verbum perplexabile As. IV 1, 47.

páctum non pactúmst, non pactum páctumst, quod vobís lubet.

MEG. núlla controvórsia mihi técum erit. sed núptias hódie quin faciámus, numquae caúsast? EV. immo hercle óptuma.

MEG. íbo igitur, parábo. numquid mé vis? EV. istuc. MEG. síc: vale.

heús, Strobile, séquere propere me ád macellum strénue.

EV. íllic hinc abiit. di ínmortales, óbsecro, aurum quíd valet.

crédo ego illum iam inaúdivisse, míhi esse thensaurúm domi:

íd inhiat, ea affĭnitatem hanc óbstinavit grátia.

258. páctum non pactúmst 'hac (accentus) variatione boni poëtae saepissime utuntur in repetitione, ne idem vocabulum eodem accentu recurrat...Italis quoque haec perquam familiaria sunt nec nostris poëtis (i.e. Germanis) Anglisve aliena.' Lachmann on Propert. II 3, 43.—quod vobis lubet 'just as it pleases you.' quod=quoad: comp. Mil. gl. 1160 ímpetrabis, ímperator, quód ego potero, quódvoles 'thou shalt have anything, as far as it is in my power' (quot or quod the mss., quoad Ritschl's edition). In a tetrameter bacchiacus Men. 769 we have the same verúmst modus tamén, quod pati úxorem opórtet, 'still there is a measure whereto a wife must be patient' (quod CD, quo adpati B, quoad Ritschl after Lambinus). In Terence we find two instances of this meaning of quod: Eun. II 1, 7 s. munus nostrum ornato verbis quod poteris, et illum aemulum, Quod poteris ab eo pellito, and Haut. tim. III 1, 7, quod potero, adiutabo senem. In the construction quod eius it is generally known in this sense, see Key, L. G. § 922.

260. Translate: 'I hope there is no reason why we should not have the wedding even to-day.' For the construction compare Capt. II 2, 103 s. Amph. II 2, 222. Amph. fr. ap. Non. 327, 2. Cas. v 4, 24. Ter. Phorm. II 1, 42. Most. 434. Capt. III 4, 92 s. Hor. Serm. I 1, 20. Euclio answers immo edepol optima (causa est ut faciamus).

261. For the phrase numquid me vis see note on v. 173.—Euclio is going to say istuc de dote facito ut memineris (see v. 255), but Megadorus cuts him short by saying sic 'yes' (comp. Ter. Phorm. 813).

262. propere strenue express together only one notion 'directly.'

264. inaudire always means

* * * * * *

úbi tu es quae debláteravisti iám vicinis ómnibus meaé me filiaé daturum dótem? heus, Staphyla, té voco.
écquid audis? váscula intus púre propera atque élue.
fíliam despóndi ego, hodie núptum huic Megadoró dabo.
St. dí bene vortant. vérum ecastor nón potest, subitúmst nimis.
Ev. táce atque abi. curáta fac sint, quom á foro redeám domum, átque aedis occlúde. iam ego hic ádero. St. quid ego núnc agam?
núnc nobis prope adést exitium, míhi atque erili fíliae.
núnc probrum atque pártitudo própe adest ut fiát palam.

'to hear by chance,' see Brix on Mil. gl. 212.

265. id represents the general notion of the thing—'that's what he is after.' So we have eo in reference to quadraginta minae Trin. 405. Comp. As. I 1, 76 viginti iam usust filio argenti minis: Face id ut paratum iam sit. — obstinare is explained by Festus to be 'affirmato et perseveranti animo expetere.' It occurs thus only here in Plautus.

266. deblăterare is an intension of the simple verb blăterare used by Horace (Serm. II 7, 35) and some earlier poets, e. g. Afranius and Caecilius (Nonius p. 78, 30). Plautus has blătire Amph. II 1, 71. Epid. III 1, 13. Curc. III 82. See Gellius I 15, where a whole chapter is devoted to loquacity. The German plappern and the English to blab are derived from the medieval form blaberare.

267. The Future Infinitive is one of the cases in which the auxiliary may be omitted even in Plautus.—Comp. Curc. v 3, 8 heus tu, leno, te volo. It is not impossible that volo is likewise the true reading in this passage, although voco gives a good sense and is, moreover, the reading of the mss.

268. We should observe the hyperbaton in the words pure propera atque elue, instead of propera atque intus pure elue vascula; comp. Ter. Ad. 917 tu illas abi et traduce.

270. potest=pote est or in later latinity possibile est. So again v. 275. This usage is confined to the language of the earlier poets.

quód celatum atque óccultatumst úsque adhuc, nunc nón potest.
íbo intro, ut erus quae ímperavit, fácta quom veniét sient.
nam écastor malúm maerorem métuo ne inmixtím bibam.

277. We may comp. Most. 352 mali maeroris montem maximum. In the present passage, however, we may doubt the phrase, and perhaps we should correct malum et maerorem. There are two things necessary for a mixture. For the formation of the adverb inmixtim see Key, L. G. § 780. Munro on Lucr. 1 20. Bücheler, on Lat. declension p. 23. It is however a ἅπ. λεγ.—Comp. Cas. v 2, 52 ut senex hoc eodem poculo quo ego bibi biberet. In English we may say with the same simile to empty the cup of misfortune.

ACTVS III.

STROBILVS. ANTHRAX. CONGRIO. (PHRYGIA. ELEVSIVM.)

STR. Posquam óbsonavit érus et conduxít coquos II 4 tibícinasque hasce ápud forum, edixít mihi, 280 ut díspertirem obsónium hic bifáriam.
CON. me quídem hercle hic hodie tám palam non dívides:

STROBILUS returns from the market with two cooks and two music-girls whom Megadorus has hired for the celebration of his nuptials with Euclio's daughter. In the following dialogue between Strobilus and the cooks we have a lively, though comically exaggerated, picture of Euclio's meanness and avarice. Comp. Athen. XIV p. 659 b μάλιστα δὲ εἰσάγονται (sc. ἐν τῇ νέᾳ κωμῳδίᾳ) μάγειροι σκωπτικοί τινες, and Meineke, Men. et Philem. rell. 1823 p. 64, and see also my note on Ter. Eun. 776.

278. posquam instead of postquam is repeatedly attested by the best authorities (here the mss. B); see Ritschl, Opusc. II 548 sqq.—obsonare 'to get victuals,' 'to market,' e.g. Bacch. 97. 143. obsonari as deponent stands v. 293. Comp. Stich. 681 Stichus obsonatust 'has bought provisions.'

279. apud here drops its final d: see Introd. p. 34.—apud forum is the usual expression, not in foro.—forum: comp. Pseud. 790 s. forum coquinum qui vocant, stulte vocant: Nam non coquinumst, verum furinum forum.

281. Congrio plays upon his own name and the expression dispertire obsonium used by Strobilus. By obsonium and ὄψον especially fish was understood, whence ὀψάριον in the language of the New Testament simply means 'fish' (comp. the modern Greek ψάρι). Strobilus having signified his intention to divide the obsonium into two parts, Congrio replies that he shall certainly not divide him, just as if he was afraid of being comprehended under the category of fish, the conger being a kind of eel, which was cut into pieces before it was cooked (comp. v. 396). For dispertire he substitutes dividere, a word which is sometimes used in a dishonest sense: see Petron. 11 p. 13 Bücheler. Comp. also Cic. ad fam. IX 22, 4 non honestum verbum est divisio? at inest obscenum.

si quó tu totum me íre vis, operám dabo.
A. bellum ét pudicum véro prostibulúm popli.
pol, sí quis vellet, téd haud nolles dívidi?
CON. atque égo istuc, Anthrax, áliovorsum díxeram, non ístuc quo tu insímulas. STR. sed erus núptias meus hódie faciet. CON. quoíus ducit fíliam?
STR. vicíni huius Eucliónis hinc e próxumo.
ei ádeo obsoni hinc dímidium iussít dari, cocum álterum itidemque álteram tibícinam.
CON. nempe húc dimidium dícis, dimidiúm domum?
STR. nempe sícut dicis. CON. quíd hic non poterat dé suo senex óbsonari fíliai núptiis?

282. operam dabo 'I will hold myself ready for your service.'

283. popli instead of populi: comp. Lorenz on Most. 15, who shows that Plautus employs the shorter form only at the end of a line or before the principal caesura.

284. Anthrax, the other cook who seems more honest but less witty than Congrio, catches at Congrio's expression hic tam palam, and calls him therefore pudicum prostibulum, adding as his suspicion that Congrio would perhaps not refuse to yield to such a proposal, if made at a fitter time and place.—haud nolles, an intensifying λιτότης for velles 'you would be quite ready.' (See Ritschl Opusc. II 250.)

285. Congrio replies that he meant operam dare v. 282 in a different sense, not obscenely as Anthrax would insinuate.—aliovorsum dicere: comp. Ter. Eun. I 2, 2 aliorsum accipere.

286. istuc is here adverb = istoc, see Key, L. G. § 366.—Strobilus intends to avoid all further quarrel and says therefore sed erus &c. 'but to come to the point, my master is going to marry.' For this usage of sed see Zumpt § 739.

288. huius is here monosyllabic = huis, see Introd. p. 63, note 3.

291. 'Do you mean to say that you are going to send one half here, the other to your own house?'

292. nempe has its first syllable short: see Introd. p. 51.

293. The same expression filiai nuptiis occurs v. 370. 532. 790. In these three passages the mss. rightly omit in, which must be omitted, since the final i in filiai cannot be elided: comp. Lachmann, Lucr. p. 161. In this passage we are at liberty to take nuptiis either as a dative or an ablative (see Key, L. G. § 992. Zumpt § 475), but in others it must be ablative.

STR. vah. CON. quíd negotist? STR. quíd negoti sít, rogas?
puméx non aequest áridus atque hic ést senex.
CON. ain tándem? STR. ita esse ut díxi, tute exístima.
quin dívom atque hominum clámat continuó fidem, suam rém perisse séque eradicárier, de suó tigillo fúmus si qua exít foras.

295. This was a proverbial expression, comp. Persa I 1, 41 aquam e pumice postulas qui ipsus sitiat and Pseud. 73 pumicei oculi.—For aridus see the commentators on Ter. Haut. tim. III 2, 15 sed habet patrem quendam avidum miserum atque aridum. It is frequently used to denote the nature of the pumice-stone, e. g. Catull. 1, 2. Martial VIII 72. pumex is generally a masculine, but sometimes we have it also as a feminine, see Priscian VI 712 (P.). Servius on Aen. XII 587 'pumicem autem iste (Vergilius) masculino genere posuit, et hunc sequimur; nam et Plautus ita dixit' seems to allude to this passage in the Aulularia. We should probably pronounce ardus in the present passage, in order to avoid an incorrect anapaest in the fourth foot of the trimeter. ardus occurs in an inscription, C. I. L. I 577, 2, 21, and was used by Lucilius. See O. Seyffert Stud. Plaut. p. 6.

296. tandem expresses Congrio's unwillingness to believe what Strobilus tells him. See Zumpt § 237. The same indignant question ain tandem occurs Ter. Andr. 875. Phorm. 373.

297. quin here and v. 300 means 'even:' see Zumpt § 542. If found with an indicative, this particle is quite different in origin from quin c. coni. In the latter case, it is a compound of the relative pronoun qui and the original negation ne; in the first, it is the interrogative qui and ne. In translating it by 'why,' we may preserve its original meaning.

298. eradicari=usque ab radicibus (v. 248) perire: see the commentators on Ter. Andr. IV 4, 22. Haut. tim. III 3, 28.

299. tigillum is a diminutive of tignum, formed in the same way as sigillum from signum. Isidore's derivation from tegulae (Orig. XIX 10) is quite groundless. Most of the commentators take de suo tigillo in the sense of 'from his house,' or, as Hildyard says, 'through the rafters of his house.' As there is no other passage in any author, where tigillum would have the sense of domicilium breve, I prefer the explanation given by Pareus according to which we need not invent a new sense for this passage. Euclio thinks that he is undone, when the smallest piece of wood is burned in his house, and he therefore keeps no wood in the house: see v. 355.

quin quom ít dormitum, fóllem obstringit ób gulam.
CON. cur? STR. né quid animae fórte amittat dórmiens.
CON. etiámne opturat ínferiorem gútturem?
STR. cur? CON. né quid animae fórte amittat dórmiens.
STR. haec míhi te ut tibi me aequom ésse credo crédere.
CON. immo équidem credo. STR. át scin etiam quó modo?
aquam hércle plorat, quóm lavat, profúndere.
CON. censén talentum mágnum exorarí pote ab istóc sene ut det quí fiamus líberi?
STR. famem hércle utendam, sí roges, numquám dabit.

300. 'Some commentators suppose, by follem is meant a purse, but the plain and obvious sense of this word appears to be a kind of bag, which Strobilus supposes Euclio to fasten to his mouth and throat to catch his breath in, while he is asleep. The thought is extravagant, but humorous.' THORNTON.

302. guttur is masculine in two other Plautine passages, Mil. gl. 835, and Trin. 1014. Novius too has usque ad imum gutturem v. 118, Ribb.

304. 'Innuit neutri ab altero esse credendum.' ACIDALIUS. Comp. Poen. 494 an mi haec non credis?—Credo ut mi aequomst credier.

305. The words at scin etiam quomodo simply form a connexion between the preceding jokes and those that follow. This same phrase is generally used to express threats, and thus we have it v. 47: see Weise's note on Poen. I 2, 165; but it occurs in the same way as here in another passage, Poen. I 3, 29.—For the hiatus in this line see Introd. p. 67.

306. plorat 'he cries his eyes out;' for the infin. comp. Hor. Od. III 10, 4. Aristophanes has a similar joke about a mean Athenian, Patrocles, Plut. 84 ἐκ Πατροκλέους ἔρχομαι, ὃς οὐκ ἐλούσατ' ἐξ ὅτουπερ ἐγένετο. This however means that Patrocles never took a bath since his birth, because he was too mean to pay for it.

307. pote alone stands not only for potes (e. g. Trin. 353) and potest, but even for posse. See Ritschl, Proll. CXI.—For the so-called 'great' talent, see Smith's Dictionary of Antiquities s. v. Talentum.

308. For ab istóc see Introd. p. 46.—gui=ut inde, see Key, L. G. § 312, 2.

309. See note on v. 96.

quin ípsi pridem tónsor unguis démpserat, conlégit, omnia ábstulit praeségmina.
CON. edepól mortalem párce parcum praédicas.
censén vero adeo párce et misere vívere?
STR. pulméntum pridem erípuit ei míluos:
homo ád praetorem plórabundus dévenit, infít ibi postuláre plorans éiulans, ut síbi liceret míluom vadárier.
sescénta sunt, quae mémorem, si sit ótium.
sed utér vostrorumst célerior? memorá mihi.
CON. ego et múlto melior. STR. cócum ego, non furém rogo.

311. praesegmina, ἀπονυχίσματα, 'parings.'

312. parce parcus 'a most stingy wretch' (THORNTON). For the expression comp. Pseud. 11 misere miser or Cas. III 1, 8 scite scitus and similar passages: see also note on v. 42.

313. censen vero etc. 'do you indeed believe that he lives so economically and miserly?'. Perhaps this line should be attributed to Strobilus. It would then form a kind of prelude to the example related in v. 314—317.

314. miluos and larua are always trisyllabic in Plautine prosody.

317. The subj. liceret is conceived dependent upon the historical present infit. But liceat would not have been incorrect.—vadarier 'aliquem est accipere ab eo vades, h. e. fideiussores locupletes qui certa sponsione pecuniae illum, unde petebatur, vadimonium obiturum seu in ius venturum recipiant et promittant. dabantur autem vades, ne in carcere attinerentur usque in diem iudicii.' Gronovius, Lect. Plaut. p. 51. See Plaut. Curc. v 2, 23—27 and the commentators on Hor. Serm. I 9, 74—78. (Walter, röm. Rechtsgesch. § 728 ss.)

318. On sescenta see Donatus' note on Ter. Phorm. IV 3, 63 'perspicere hinc licet consuetudinem utriusque sermonis. nam Apollodorus μυρίας dixit pro multis, et ut apud Graecos μυρία, ita apud nos sescenta dicere pro multis usitatum est.' Hildyard observes that sescenta tanta, Pseud. II 2, 37, might be translated five hundred times.

319. 'vostrorum multifariam scriptum est pro vostrum' according to Gellius XX 6, 12. Plautus has also nostrorum instead of nostrum. See Lorenz on Most. 270, and Brix on Mil. gl. 174.

320. Cooks enjoyed a bad repute at Rome, as the whole scene in the Pseudolus III 2 between Ballio and the cook shows. Celeres manus are an attribute of thieves, e.g. in a line quoted from Plautus' Cornicularia (p. 1470 Taubm.) mihi, Laverna, in furtis cele-

CON. cocum érgo dico. STR. quíd tu ais? A. sic sum út vides.
CON. cocus ílle nundinálist: in nonúm diem solet íre coctum. A. tún trium litterárum homo me vítuperas? CON. fur? étiam fur trifúrcifer.
STR. tace núnciam tu atque ágnum hinc uter est pínguior... II 5
A. licét... STR. tu, Congrio, eúm sume actutúm tibi rassis manus. Congrio himself prays to Laverna, v. 442.

321. With sic sum ut vidēs comp. Theocr. Id. XXII 59 τοιόσδ' οἷον ὁρᾷς. The same phrase occurs Pl. Amph. II 1, 57.

322. The explanation of the expression cocus nundinalis is not quite settled, and we learn from Festus (p. 173 M.) that the ancient grammarians themselves were not quite agreed with regard to the explanation of this passage. nundinalis would come from nundinae (=novendinae) and would of course mean a very bad and worthless cook hired only on fair-days. I should however prefer the other reading, which is clearly indicated by Festus, but generally confounded with nundinalis, and this is nundialis. novendialia are explained in an old glossary ἔνατα ἐπὶ νεκροῦ ἀγόμενα (see e.g. Petron. 65): cocus nundialis would thus signify a cook hired for the so-called 'silicernium,' and for festivals of that nature not the best cooks seem to have been generally hired. The leno Ballio says of a very bad cook in this sense quin ob eam rem Orcus recipere ad se hunc noluit, Vt esset hic qui mortuis cenam coquat: Pseud. 795 s. It may be added that in the ms. B the third n in the word nundinalis is by the hand of a corrector; see Lorenz's progr. p. 9.

323. I have not adopted the spelling littrarum, though there is little doubt that we should actually pronounce so. It is not very probable that trium is capable of a monosyllabic pronunciation.

324. Congrio is not slow to understand Anthrax's meaning, and retort upon him. (Comp. Cas. II 2, 49 where fures are called litterati.) Anthrax gives him the title of thief (FVR), and he calls him fur trifurcifer. On furcifer I add the explanation given by Donatus on Andr. III 5, 12 'furciferi dicebantur qui ob leve delictum cogebantur a dominis ignominiae magis quam supplicii causa circa vicinos furcam in collo ferre, subligatis ad eam manibus, et praedicare peccatum suum simulque commonere ceteros ne quid simile admittant.' tri- adds to the strength of the expression, comp. trivenefica v. 86. The same word trifurcifer occurs twice Rud. III 2, 29 s. It is by no means the same with trifur v. 625.

325. For tacĕ see Introd. p. 26.

326. licet 'it shall be done:' for instances see Men. 158. 213.

atque íntro abi illuc, ét vos illum séquimini.
vos céteri illuc ád nos. A. hercle iniúria dispértivisti: pínguiorem agnum ísti habent.
330. STR. at núnc tibi dabitur pínguior tibícina.
i sáne cum illo, Phrúgia. tu autem, Eleúsium, huc íntro abi ad nos. CON. ó Strobile súbdole, hucíne detrusti me ád senem parcíssumum?
ubi sí quid poscam, usque ád ravim poscám prius 335 quam quícquam detur. STR. stúltus et sine grátia's.
tibi récte facere? quándo quod faciás, perit.
CON. qui véro? STR. rogitas? iám principio in aédibus turba ístic nulla tíbi erit. si qui utí voles, domo ábs te adferto, ne óperam perdas póscere.
340 hic ápud nos magna túrba ac magna fámiliast, supéllex aurum véstis vasa argéntea:
ibi sí perierit quíppiam (quod té scio

Most. 401. 930. 1153. Capt. v 1, 28. Bacch. 35.

330. Such proceleusmatics as -tibi dăbi- are not rarely found in the second foot of iambics, though they are more common in the first. See Ritschl, Proll. CCLXXXIX.

331. Phrygia, i. e. Φρυγία, was a very appropriate name for a music-girl, a peculiar kind of flutes being called tibiae Phrygiae. See the commentators on Tib. II 1, 86. Cat. 63, 23 and J. F. Gronovius' Obs. lat. I 17.

336. tibi recte facere 'how could I please you?' The use of the infinitive of indignation is very common in the third person, but very rare in the second and first. Of the first, Lachmann in his note on Lucr. II 16 gives only two instances: the present passage in the Aulularia and Ter. Andr. v 2, 29 tantum laborem capere ob talem filium? 'that I should have so much trouble for such a son.'

337. qui vero (mihi recte facis)? 'but how are you favouring me?' Congrio does not understand the gratia which Strobilus pretends to confer upon him.

338. qui is the old ablative instead of quo (=qua re).

339. The infinitive poscere is here negligently used instead of the regular construction poscendo. See Key, L. G. § 1255 and Lorenz on Most. 1159. Hildyard quotes Epid. II 2, 13 omnem per urbem sum defessus quaerere (=quaerendo): see also v 2, 54 s. Catullus expresses the same, defessus . . essem te mihi, amice, quaeritando: c. 55 in Haupt's edition.

340. For the pronunciation of apud see Introd. p. 34.

342. For quod abstinere ('to abstain from which') see Key, L. G. § 909. The Plautine facile ábstinere pósse, si nihil óbviamst) dicánt 'coqui abstulérunt, comprehéndite, vincíte verberáte, in puteum cóndite.' horúm tibi istic níhil eveniet, quíppe qui ubi quód subrupias níhil est. sequere hac mé. CON. sequor.

STROBILVS. STAPHYLA. CONGRIO. II 6

STR. heus, Stáphyla, prodi atque óstium aperi. ST. quí vocat?
STR. Strobílus. ST. quid vis? STR. hósce ut accipiás coquos tibícinamque obsóniumque in núptias.
Megadórus iussit Eúclioni haec míttere.
ST. Cererín, Strobile, hi súnt facturi núptias?

passages, in which this construction occurs, have been collected by Brix in his note on Men. 985.

345. For puteus comp. v. 363. I do not find any other passages where this kind of punishment for slaves is mentioned. In Greek the corresponding word λάκκος means also a kind of cellar.

346. The construction of the words is quippe qui ubi nihil est quod subrupias. For quippe qui with a following indicative see Key, L. G. § 1194 note. qui in this connexion is an archaic asseverative particle, which in later language is only known in the compound atqui. For instances see Rud. 384. Truc. I 1, 49. Bacch. 368. Pseud. 1274. Ter. Haut. tim. 538. In the same way we have ut qui in several instances which have perversely been corrected by the editors: As. 505. Trin. 637. Capt. 553. Bacch. 283. See Fleckeisen, Krit. Miscellen. p. 32 s.

347. For subrupias see note on v. 39.

348. For qui as a direct interrogative see Madvig, § 88, 1.

351. The active infinitive mittere is defended in note on v. 242.

352. In the festivals called Cereris nuptiae the use of wine was not permitted: see Servius on Verg. Georg. I 344 and Macrobius, Saturn. III 11. The original significance of these festivals is not quite evident; Preller (röm. Myth. p. 439) thinks that they commemorated the wedding of Pluto and Proserpina, at which Ceres was conceived in the character of hostess.

STR. qui? ST. quía temeti níhil adlatum intéllego.
STR. at iam ádferetur, si á foro ipsus rédierit.
ST. ligna híc apud nos núlla sunt. CON. sunt ásseres?
ST. sunt pól. CON. sunt igitur lígna: ne quaerás foris.
ST. quid, ímpurate, quámquam Volcanó studes, cenaéne causa aut tuaé mercedis grátia nos nóstras aedis póstulas combúrere?
CON. hau póstulo. STR. duc ístos intro. ST. séquimini.

PYTHODICVS. II 7

curáte: ego intervísam quid faciánt coqui, quos pól ut ego hodie sérvem cura máxumast:
nisi únum hoc faciam ut ín puteo cenám coquant:
inde cóctam sursum súbducemus córbulis.
si illi aútem deorsum cómedent, si quid cóxerint,

353. 'vinum temetum prisca lingua adpellatur' Gellius, x 23: the word is very rare in the language of prose-writers (only Plin. xiv 90 and Cic. de. rep. iv ap. Non. p. 5): see Riese, Rhein. Mus. xxi 119.

354. ipsus, i.e. erus, Megadorus, 'the governor.' This use of ipsus is probably an imitation of the Greek αὐτός, for thus disciples and slaves called their masters: e.g. αὐτὸς ἔφα ipse dixit, where αὐτός means the all-revered master Pythagoras. See also Aristoph. Nubes 219. Comp. Aul. 806 and Cas. iv 2, 11 ego eo quo me ipsa misit, i. e. era. Verg. Ecl. ix 66.

359. postulare is in the language of the comic poets frequently an equivalent for velle or cupere; thus we may translate here 'would you have us burn our house?' Hence we should explain the infinitive which follows. For instances see v. 581. Capt. iii 5, 59. 81. Cas. i 53. Truc. i 2, 39; with the whole sentence comp. Capt. iv 2, 64 s. quid me, volturi, Tuan causa aedis incensurum censes?

361. intervisam 'I'll go and see;' see on v. 200.

364. For inde see Introd. p. 45.

365. According to the invariable practice of Plautus, deorsum is disyllabic: see Introd. p. 59.—The word does here apparently not mean 'downwards,' but 'down.' Forcellini gives one instance for this sense, Varro de re rust. iii 5 deorsum in terram est aqua quam bibere superi íncenati súnt et cenati ínferi.

sed vérba hic fácio, quási negoti níl siet, rapácidarum ubi tántum sit in aédibus.

Evclio. II 8

volui ánimum tandem cónfirmare hodié meum, ut béne me haberem fíliai núptiis.
venio ád macellum, rógito piscis: índicant carós—agninam cáram—caram búbulam—vitulínam cetum pórcinam, cara ómnia.
atque eó fuerunt cáriora—aes nón erat.
abeo íllim iratus, quóniam mihi nil ést qui emam.
ita illís impuris ómnibus adií manum.

possint. Another example is given by Douza: Varro de re rust. I 8 qui colunt deorsum, magis aestate laborant; qui sursum, magis hieme. Cicero too has sursum in the sense 'higher up:' de nat. deor. II 56, 141, nares...recte sursum sunt.

368. rapācida is a comical formation after the analogy of Pelopida Aeacida and other patronymics. Plautus has the similar words Saturides Most. III 1, 44, plagipatidae Capt. III 1, 12 and collicrepidae cruricrepidae Trin. 1022. sit appears here long; see Introd. p. 15.

369. Euclio had been to the market to make some trifling purchases for his daughter's nuptials, but found everything too expensive.—With animum confirmare comp. affirmare animum Merc. 81.

373. With pórcinám comp. pistillúm v. 95.

374. Thornton rightly translates 'what made them dearer still, I had no money.' In prose we should add quod before aes.

375. illim is an archaic form equivalent to illinc, see Ritschl Opusc. II 453 sqq. The mss. read iratus illinc and do not give mihi. It is, perhaps, possible that the line is due to an interpolator, though I have now ventured to make some alterations in order to reduce it into a metrical shape.

376. For ita illís see Introd. p. 42.—In ómnibús the final syllable is probably long: see Introd. p. 17. It is, however, also possible to read -mnibús ad- as a tribrach.—adire manum is not unfrequently found in Plautus (e.g. Poen II 11. Persa v 2, 18. Cas. v 2, 55) in the sense 'to deceive, to impose upon.' Acidalius justly observes that the phrase seems to have arisen from some artifice practised in wrestling.

deinde égomet mecum cógitare intér vias occépi 'festo dié si quid prodégeris, profésto egere líceat, nisi pepérceris.'
postquam hánc rationem véntri cordique édidi, accéssit animus ád meam sententiam, quam mínumo sumptu fíliam ut nuptúm darem.
nunc túsculum emi hoc ét coronas flóreas:
haec ímponentur ín foco nostró Lari, ut fórtunatas fáciat gnatae núptias.
sed quíd ego apertas aédis nostras cónspicor?
et strépitust intus. númnam ego compilór miser?
CON. aulám maiorem, sí pote, ex vicínia pete: haéc est parva, cápere non quit. EV. eí mihi.
perii hércle. aurum rápitur, aula quaéritur.

377. inter vias 'while I was walking home.' Comp. the German unterwegs.

378. Thornton translates 'feast to-day makes fast to-morrow.'—die is here a monosyllable: Introd. p. 58.

379. Comp. Hor. Serm. II 3, 143 s. qui Veientanum festis potare diebus, Campana solitus trulla vappamque profestis. Afranius 262 Ribb. aeque profesto ac festo concelebrat focum. Festus p. 229 with a doubtful etymology explains profesti dies dicti, quod sunt procul a religione numinis divini.—parcere in the sense 'to live sparingly,' comp. parcus.

380. ventri in the first place, as being mainly concerned in this deliberation: cor, because his common sense would advise him to venture on a small expense: animus (381) the domineering principle, 'will and inclination.' The whole sounds like the description of a transaction in the senate or some other powerful body.

383. See note on v. 24.

384. haec, sc. coronae. In Plautus the nom. plur. of the feminine is commonly haec, not hae.

387. The particle numnam occurs several times in Plautus and Terence; of numne Ritschl (Proll. LXXV) gives only one instance Poen. v 2, 119: see also Sueton. rell., ed. Reifferscheid, p. 524. Euclio hopes that his fear is groundless. Zumpt, § 351 note.

388. Congrio does not appear on the stage, but is merely heard to say these words within the house.—si pote, εἰ δυνατόν.—aula is the ancient form instead of olla. au was pronounced like o, and Plautus and his contemporaries did not employ double consonants. The name of the present play is derived from the dimin. aulula.

390. We should probably assume a hiatus after hercle, i.e. a pause should be made after Apóllo, quaeso súbveni mi, atque ádiuva, quia ín re tali iám subvenisti ántidhac:

confíge sagitis fúres thensaurários.
sed césso prius quam prórsus perii cúrrere?

ANTHRAX. II. 9

Dromó, desquama píscis: tu, Machaério, congrúm muraenam exdórsua, quantúm potest.
ego híne artoptam ex próxumo utendám peto a Cóngrione. tú istum gallum, sí sapis, glabriórem reddes míhi quam volsus lúdiust.
sed quíd hoc clamoris óritur hinc ex próxumo?

the exclamation. Various attempts have been made to fill up the hiatus by the addition of some syllable or other, but none appears to be satisfactory.

392. Euclio implores Apollo in his quality as ἀλεξίκακος. The line may possibly be an allusion to some event in which Apollo protected by his personal interference the treasures of some temple against thieves or hordes of barbarous invaders. This may possibly have been the aggression of the Gauls under Brennus who threatened Delphi: see Justin's account XXIV 6 sqq. It should, however, be confessed that this allusion (no doubt intelligible to a Greek audience at the time of the first performance of the Greek original of the Aulularia) reads somewhat obscurely in the Latin adaptation.—antidhac is archaic instead of antehac. The full form of the preposition ante was antid or anted (comp. postid prod red).

393. For ságitis see Introd. p. 47. This pronunciation had already been suggested by Hare in his ms. notes where he compares Trin. 725.—What is meant by fures thensaurarii, is clear enough; but thesaurarius appears to be a ἅπαξ λεγ.

396. With this line a passage from Ter. Ad. III 3, 23 ss. is generally compared. The word exdorsuare occurs only here and in Appuleius.

399. ludius is in Labbaeus' Glossaries p. 109 rightly explained ὑποκριτής. Thornton remarks 'The ludii were young lads employed in the public spectacles; our author adds volsus (plucked), because they used at the time of puberty to have the down or hairs plucked from their chins to keep their faces smooth.' The word is no doubt connected with ludere 'to play,' and the common spelling lydius due to the erroneous derivation from the Lydii, i. e. Etruscans: see Dionys. Halic. II 97. Comp. ludio.

coqui hércle, credo, fáciunt officiúm suom.
fugiam íntro, ne quid túrba*rum* hic itidém *fu*at.

CONGRIO. III. 1

óptati civés, populares, íncolae, accolae, ádvenae omnes, dáte viam qua fúgere liceat, fácite totae pláteae pateant.
tótus doleo atque óppido perii: íta me iste habuit sénex gymnasium.

401. faciunt officium suum is of course ironically meant: 'you could not expect cooks to do otherwise, they only do their duty, at least according to their own notions.' Hildyard compares Asin. II 2, 113 quin tu officium facis ergo ac fugis? and Pseud. 913 fuit meum officium (ut abirem).

402. ne should be conceived as dependent upon an omitted metuens or veritus, which appears to be implied in the general character of the sentence. Translate 'I will hasten into our house, lest any disturbance should take place there as well as here.'

403 ss. Congrio comes running out of Euclio's house and implores the assistance of the citizens against the old man's fury.

403. optati cives 'beloved, dear citizens:' comp. Cic. ad Quintum fr. II 8 vale, mi optime et optatissime frater. This sense is very familiar in the compound exoptatus. Similar scenes to this are frequent in the comic poets: see e.g. Rud. III 2 and Ter. Ad. II 1.

404. 'The Greek words which Plautus employs, are first naturalized and assume something of a Roman dress. πλατεῖα, for example, with its long penult becomes in Plautus, and indeed in Terence also, platĕa, and so easily passes through the Italian piazza into the French and Norman-English place. Similarly γυναικεῖον takes in Latin comedy the shape of gynaecĕum.' KEY, Trans. of the Phil. Soc. 1861 p. 177 s. See also Corssen, II 679, who enumerates platĕa, chorĕa, balinĕum, gynaecĕum, Seleucĭa alongside of πλατεῖα, χορεία, βαλανεῖον, γυναικεῖον, Σελεύκεια.

405. The same expression oppido perii recurs v. 793, comp. the similar oppido interii v. 721 and Amph. I 1, 43.—For the expression habuit me gymnasium comp. Asin. II 2, 31 where Leonidas greets his fellow-slave Libanus with the words gymnasium flagri, salveto.—In pronouncing the word senex the final x should be dropped: see Introd. p. 36.

néque ego umquam nisi hódie ad bacchas véni in bacchanál coquinatum: 3 íta me miserum et meós discipulos fústibus male cóntuderunt. 4 neque lígna ego usquam géntium praebéri vidi púlcrius: 8 itaque ómnis exegít foras, me atque hósce onustos fústibus. 9 atát ut perii hercle égo miser: a, périi, bacchanál adest: 6 sequitúr: scio quam rém geram: hoc ipsús magister mé docet. 7

406. I have spelt the words baccha and bacchanal with a small b, because they should rather be considered as general terms than as proper nouns. Plautus frequently mentions bacchae: see Cas. v 4, 9 ss. Merc. 469. (Vidular. fragm. p. 483 Ern.) Bacch. 371. 53. Amphitr. II 2, 70 ss. Mil. gl. 1016. Men. 834 ss. Pseud. 109 s. In Greek, βάκχαι in general means 'furious women,' and the word has the same sense in Plautus, where we should not always think of an allusion to the bacchanalia so severely punished by the Roman senate. It is not therefore admissible to use this passage to fix the time when Plautus wrote the Aulularia.—The verb coquĭnatum is attested by Nonius and given by our mss.: it is therefore quite preposterous to write coquitatum, as G. Hermann and Goeller do. The same verb occurs Pseud. 853 an tú coquĭnátum te ire quoquam postulas and ibid. 875 quanti istuc unum mé coquĭnáre perdoces? In the dictionaries we generally find it marked with the wrong quantity coquĭno; but coqu-ĭna- is derived from coqu- in the same way as car-ĭna- from căr- (Sanskr. skar laedere): carĭnare is used with this quantity by Ennius, Ann. 181 and 229; although Forcellini here again gives carĭno, while Freund rightly has carĭno. See also Sauppe's remarks on this point in the Ind. schol. Gott. 1858-59 p. 10, where he likewise defends the short quantity of the i in coquino.

407. Congrio calls the inferior cooks (quingentos coquos v. 545) his 'disciples,' because he has to direct them what to do. In using the plural contuderunt, Congrio continues the simile of the bacchae, just as if in Euclio all the Furies were represented together.

408. Instead of wood, which was of course a necessary article for cooks, Euclio most liberally provides them with fustes: onustus fustibus meaning 'thoroughly thrashed.'—ligna praebere is known from Hor. Serm. I 5, 46.

EVCLIO. CONGRIO. III 2

EV. redi: quó fugis nunc? téne tene. CON. quid, stólide, clamas?
EV. quia ad trís viros iam ego déferam nomén tuom. CON. quam obrem?
EV. quia cúltrum habes. CON. cocúm decet. EV. quid cómminatu's mihi? CON. ístuc male factum árbitror, quia nón latus fodi.
EV. homo núllust te sceléstior qui vívat hodie, neque quoi égo de industria ámplius male plús lubens faxim.
CON. pol etsí taceas, palam íd quidem est: res ípsa testist.

411. The magister is of course Euclio: see v. 405.

412. On seeing Euclio issuing from the house, Congrio had taken to his heels, and therefore Euclio shouts tene tene 'stop him, stop him:' cf. v. 705. For the quantity tĕnĕ tenē see Introd. p. 26.

413. The tresviri are the tresviri capitales who had charge of the prisons and awarded punishment to those whom they found trespassing against the security of the public; Amph. 1 1, 3 Sosia is afraid of being taken up by the tresviri: quid faciam nunc, si tresviri me in carcerem compegerint? and Asin. 1 2, 5 Argyrippus threatens the cruel mother of his mistress to lodge a charge against her with the tresviri: ĭbo ego ad trísviros, vóstraque ibi nómina Fáxo erunt: cápitis te pérdam ego et fíliam. Comp. also Persa 72 ut aequa parti prodeant ad trisviros. See Walter, röm. Rechtsgesch. § 141.—quam obrem is the spelling adopted by Fleckeisen throughout his edition of Terence, on the very practical purpose to show at once that in the comic poets quam should always be elided before ob.

416. vivere is frequently an equivalent of the simple esse: e. g. Amph. prol. 75 victores vivere. Trin. 390 lepidus vivis 'you are a jolly man.' Men. 202 vivis meis morigera moribus. ibid. 908 ego homo vivo miser. Catullus has the same use of vivere: 10, 34 sed tu insulsa male ac molesta vivis, and 111, 1 vivere contentas viro solo.

417. We should join plus male faxim 'I would ill-treat more.' But not improbably we should write plus mali, as has been done by Guyet and Weise. —In lubens the final letters ns should be entirely dropped: see Introd. p. 35.

ita fústibus sum móllior magis quam úllus cinaedus.
sed quíd tibi nos táctiost, mendíce homo, quae res?
Ev. etiám rogitas? an quía minus quam me aéquom erat feci?
Con. sine: at hércle cum magnó malo tuo, si hóc caput sentit.

419. mollior magis: to strengthen a comparative by adding magis or mage seems to have been quite familiar to the conventional language of the Romans: comp. Men. prol. 55 magis maiores nugas egerit. Stich. 698 hoc magis est dulcius. Capt. III 4, 111 nihil invenies magis hoc certo certius. Poen. II 15 contentiores mage erunt atque avidi minus. Among prose-writers, constructions of this kind occur only in Valerius Maximus, Justinus, Arnobius and Boëthius. In Greek μᾶλλον is frequently added to comparatives, even by the best writers: see Krüger, griechische Sprachlehre § 49, 7, 5. But it would be quite misleading to say that the Latin constructions were imitations of the Greek; the very fact that we find them only in the comics or in later and negligent writers, would speak against such a theory. The vulgar dialects of the English language are not free from the same pleonastic comparative, e.g. Dickens lets a carter say that his beer 'is more flatterer than it might be:' Old Curiosity Shop, chap. XXVI (p. 121 people's edition). In magis the final s should be dropped.—cinaedus (κίναιδος) means a public dancer of a rather loose character: see Mil. gl. 668 tum ad saltandum non cinaedus malacus aequest atque ego. For the expression mollis fustibus Hare justly compares Mil. gl. 1424 mitis sum equidem fustibus.

420. The construction tibi nos tactiost is explained by Key, L. G. §§ 907 and 1302. We have the same v. 737. Curc. v 2, 27 (=626 Fl.). Cas. II 6, 54. Poen. v. 5, 29. Men. 1016, and in the same way we read quid tibi huc receptio ad test meum virum? Asin. v 2, 70 (=920), and quíd tibi huc véntiost? quíd tibi hanc áditiost? quíd tibi hanc nótiost, ínquam, amicám meam? Truc. II 7, 62 ss. (=611 s. Geppert).—quae res is a phrase expressing indignation and surprise=quae ista tandem res est. Thus we have Asin. II 4, 71 (=477) quae res? tun libero homini male servos loquere? For other instances see Poen. v 4, 29. Cas. II 8, 18. III 6, 8.

421. With rogitas comp. v. 337.—For the construction of the words quam me aequom erat see note on v. 122.—In erat the final t should be dropped: in the same way we should pronounce capu in the following line.

422. sine appears almost as a threatening interjection in several passages in Plautus and Terence: e.g. Hec. IV 4, 85 where Donatus observes 'sine separatim accipe, quia vim habet conminantis.' See also Eun. I 1, 20. Plaut. As. v 2, Ev. pol ego haúscio quid póst fuat: tuom núnc caput sentit.

sed in aédibus quid tíbi meis nam erát negoti me absénte, nisi ego iússeram? volo scíre. Con. tace ergo.
quia vénimus coctum ad núptias... Ev. quid tú malum curas, utrúm crudumne an cóctum edim, nisi tú mihi es tutor?
Con. volo scíre, sinis an nón sinis nos cóquere hic cenam?
Ev. volo scíre ego item meaé domi mea sálva futura.
Con. utinám mea mihi modo aúferam quae ad te ádtuli salva.

48.—Ussing on Pl. Asin. 893 aptly renders it by the Greek εἶεν.—The commentators observe that the ancients used to direct their blows against the head: see Hor. Serm. I 5, 22. Amph. I 1, 162 Mercurius says of his fist that it exossat os hominibus. Comp. also v. 437 non fissile hoc haberes caput and 451. Congrio means si hoc (i.e. meum) caput sentit in the sense of 'si quid ego sapio, si quid in me sensus est,' as Lambinus justly explains it; for caput frequently signifies the entire person, e.g. Ter. Andr. II 2, 35. Ad. II 3, 8. Verg. Aen. IV 435, and instances of sentio in the sense of 'sapere' are given by the dictionaries. Euclio ironically replies 'tuom nunc caput sentit' by which he alludes to the blows inflicted upon Congrio's head.

423. hauscio is in Plautus one word formed in the same way as the common nescio: see Key, L. G. § 1401, 1.

424. nam should be joined with quid: see note on v. 42.

426. In venimus and malum the final consonants should be dropped.—malum is here an interjection apparently belonging to conversational language and frequently met with in the comic writers. Even Cicero uses it occasionally, e.g. Off. II 15, 13 quae te malum ratio in istam spem induxit? 'what the deuce could lead you to such a hope?' Verr. I 20, 54 quae malum est ista tanta audacia atque amentia? It always expresses a strong degree of indignation and anger.

427. The disjunctive question utrum—ne—an is explained by Key, L.G. § 1425 (with note), Zumpt, § 554, Madvig, § 452, 1: examples will be found Trin. 306. Capt. II 2, 18. Bacch. 75. 500. Poen. supp. 32. Pseud. 709. Enn. frag. 38, ed. Vahlen: see also my note on Ter. Eun. IV 4, 54.

me hau paénitet, tua ne éxpetam. Ev. scio, né doce, novi.
CON. quid est quá nunc prohibes grátia nos cóquere hic cenam?
quid fécimus, quid díximus tibi sécus quam velles?
Ev. etiám rogitas, sceléste homo? quine ánglos omnis mearum aédium et conclávium mihi pérturbatis?
id úbi tibi erat negótium, ad focúm si adesses, non físsile hoc haberés caput: merito íd tibi factumst.
at út tu meam sententiam iam nóscere possis, si ad iánuam huc accésseris, nisi iússo, propius, ego té faciam, miserrumus mortális ut sis.
scis iám meam sententiam? quo abís? redi rursum.
CON. ita mé bene amet Lavérna, te iamiám nisi reddi

431. me hau paenitet 'I am very well satisfied:' see my note on Ter. Eun. v 6, 12. Zumpt, § 441. Translate 'I am content enough, so do not suppose that I should steal your property.' ne expetam tua is a brief expression instead of ne existumes me tua expetere: see Key, L. G. § 1228. Zumpt, § 573. For docĕ see Introd. p. 26.

434. For the syncopated form anglos comp. Probus, p. 197, 22 'baculus non baclus, angulus non anglus,' whence anglus appears to have been a vulgar or popular contraction.

435. For the pronunciation of mearum see Introd. p. 62.—The mss. read pervium or perviam facitis, but perviam is no Latin word, though one might support it with the analogous obviam. I have, therefore, written perturbatis 'you upset,' though I do not think this conjecture absolutely certain.

437. fissile caput 'a broken head.' The adjective fissilis is of rare occurrence, and is in no other passage added to caput or any other part of the human body.

438. Comp. Ter. Phorm. v 8, 54 immo ut tu iam scias meam sententiam.

439. iusso = iussero, which is here given by the mss., though inadmissible on prosodiacal grounds. nisi iusso 'contrary to my orders.'

440. The prolepsis te faciam ut sis miserrumus needs no further explanation: comp. v. 790. Examples of this kind of construction are given by Gronovius in his note on Gellius II 1.

442. For ita comp. v. 754. Key, L. G. § 1451 e.—Laverna was originally a goddess of darkness and hence naturally mihi vasa iubes, pipulo hic differam ante aedis. quíd ego nunc agám? ne ego edepol véni huc auspició malo:

445 númmo sum condúctus: plus iam médico mercedíst opus.
Ev. hóc quidem hercle quóquo ego ibo, mécum erit, mecúm feram, III. 3 néque istíc in tantís periclis úmquam committam út siet.
íte sane intro ómnes nunciam ét coqui et tibícinae:
étiam huc intro dúce, si vis, vél gregem venálium.
450 cóquite facite féstinate núnciam, quantúm lubet. 5
Con. témperi, postquam ímplevisti fústi fissorúm caput.

became the patroness and protectress of thieves. In a fragment of Plautus' Cornicularia a thief prays to Laverna: comp. Hor. Ep. I 16, 60 pulcra Laverna, Da mihi fallere, da iusto sanctoque videri: Noctem peccatis et fraudibus obice nubem, on which passage Porphyrio observes 'larvearum dea, quae furibus praeest.' See Preller, röm. Myth. p. 218. 459. Comp. also Webster ed. Dyce (1866) p. 294 a: Success then, sweet Laverna! I have heard That thieves adore thee for a deity. From Paulus we learn 'laverniones fures antiqui dicebant, quod sub tutela deae Lavernae essent, in cuius luco obscuro abditoque solitos furta praedamque inter se luere:' another derivation of the name ἀπὸ τοῦ λαβεῖν is of course only a mauvais jeu d'esprit. By praying to Laverna, Congrio himself proves that Strobilus (v. 320) was not mistaken in his character.

443. The reading and the scansion of this line are anything but certain. pipulus is said to mean convicium. Comp. Mil. gl. 584 nam nunc satis pipulo impio merui mali, where the reading is, however, not quite settled. To a scene similar to the present may have belonged the lines quoted from Matius' Mimiambi by Gellius XX 9: deín coquenti vása cuncta déiéctat, Nequámve scitaménta pipuló póscit. Except these passages, the word is quoted from no other author but Appuleius.

445. For nummus see note on v. 108.

449. grex venalium 'a gang of slaves:' comp. Cist. IV 2, 67 mirum quin grex venalium in cistella infuerit una. The same expression occurs in the Pseudo-Ciceronian speech cum senatui gratias egit 6, 14 Cappadocem modo abreptum de grege venalium diceres.

451. temperi occurs nineteen times in Plautus, but never in

Ev. íntro abi*te*: opera húc conductast vóstra, non orátio.
Con. heús, senex, pro vápulando hercle égo abs te mercedém petam.
cóctum ego, non vápulatum, dúdum conductús fui.
Ev. lége agito mecúm: molestus né sis: i, cenárn coque, aút abi in malúm cruciatum ab aédibus. Con. abi tú modo.
Ev. íllic hinc abiit. di ímmortales, fácinus audax íncipit III. 4 quí cum opulento paúper coepit rém habere aut negótium.
véluti me Megadórus temptat ómnibus miserúm modis:
quí simulavit meí se honoris míttere huc causá coquos, ís ea causa mísit hoc qui súbruperent miseró mihi.
cóndigne etiam méus me*d* intus gállus gallinácius

Terence. In all the Plautine passages, temperi is the reading of the best authorities, not tempori, except Capt. 183 where the best ms. reads tempori. The comparative temperius is used by Cicero, Ovid, Columella, Appuleius and Palladius: temporius is found only in inferior mss. See Ritschl in Reifferscheid's Suetonius p. 507 ss.— With the whole sentence comp. Cas. II 7, 60 temperi, postquam oppugnatumst os. — fissum as subst. is reported from only one other passage, in Celsus. Weise compares fissa volnera Val. Flacc. I 479. For the genitive see Key, L. G. § 941. In Cas. I 1, 35 ego te implebo flagris we have the same way of speaking with a different construction.

453. For the shortened quantity of abs see Introd p. 57.

454. The long final o in ego may be defended, nor do we deem it necessary to write cóctum ego [huc] after the example of v. 452.

455. lege agito 'go to law, if you want any further expostulation,' i. e. you won't get anything out of me by talking on ever so much. The same phrase occurs with this sense Ter. Phorm. v 7, 91.

456. in malam rem abire, in malam crucem or in malum cruciatum abire are all expressions of the same kind 'to go to the d—.'

458. For the hiatus rém habere see Introd. p. 68.

462. In all the passages where condigne occurs, it gives the expression a sarcastic or ironical colouring: e. g. Poen. II 17 condigne haruspex, non qui ánui erat pecúliaris pérdidit paenissume.

úbi erat haec defóssa, occepit íbi scalpurrire úngulis círcumcirca. quíd opust verbis? íta mi pectus pér-acuit:
cápio fustem, optrúnco gallum, fúrem manufestá-rium.
crédo edepol ego illí mercedem gállo pollicitós coquos, si íd palam fecísset. exemi éx manu istis mánubrium.

homo trioboli—aiebat portendi mihi i.e. what else could I have expected? Cas. I 1, 43 noctu ut condigne te cubes (i.e. very badly) curabitur. See also Bacch. 392. Men. 906; only Capt. I 2, 22 the adverb has not an ironical sense.—gallināceus is the quantity of this word in Plautus, Lucilius, Titinius (126 Ribb.) and Phaedrus: see Lachmann on Lucr. p. 36.—Bücheler (rhein. Mus. XX 441) quotes the spelling gallinacius (instead of the common gallinaceus) from the best authorities in Varro Ὄνος λ. II, Cicero Mur. § 61, Phaedrus III 12, 1, Petron. 86 and an inscription Orelli 4330. In the same way we have the otherwise unexampled formation viracius in a fragment of Varro's Meleager (see Riese, rhein. Mus. XXI 121).

463. The adverb paenissume recurs v. 660. That the first syllable should be spelt with a diphthong, appears from Priscian who in two passages declares paenissime to be the superlative of paene: see Ritschl's note on Most. 656. This derivation is also borne out by the meaning 'very nearly.'

464. scalpurrire appears to be a ἅπ. λεγ.: it is by no means a desiderative, in which case the u would be short and we ought to have scalpturire (as indeed most editors perversely read: conf. also scalpturio κατακνάω Gloss. Labb. p. 165), but it is of the same formation as ligurrire and scaturrire (Zumpt § 222): for ligurrire (not ligurire) see Bentley's note on Ter. Eun. v 4, 14.

465. peracuit 'became exasperated,' comp. Bacch. 1099 hoc hoc est quo pectus peracescit. The word does not occur elsewhere.

466. The adjective manufestarius recurs Trin. 895. Mil. gl. 444. Bacch. 918: in allusion to the last passage the word is used by Gellius I 7. All other writers say manifestus.—'manifestus fur est qui in faciendo [ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ] deprehensus est' Paullus, Sent. II 31, 2.

468. The u in manŭbrium cannot be lengthened by the following letters br, since muta cum liquida never has that effect in Plautus. manubrium properly means a hilt or a handle, but here it assumes a figurative sense 'occasion, opportunity.' Plautus has the word in only one other passage, Epid. 516 (Bothe) málleum sapiéntiorem vídi excusso mánŭbrio, a line which is omitted in all our séd Megadorus, méus adfinis, éccum incedit á foro.

iam húnc non ausim praéterire, quín consistam et cónloquar.

MEGADORVS. EVCLIO. III. 5

MEG. narrávi amicis múltis consiliúm meum de cóndicione hac: Eúclionis fíliam laudánt: sapienter fáctum et consilió bono.
nam meó quidem animo, si ídem faciant céteri opuléntiores, paúperiorum fílias ut índotatas dúcant uxorés domum:
et múlto fiat cívitas concórdior et invídia nos minóre utamur quam útimur, mss. except the Ambrosian palimpsest.

469. incedit: see note on v. 47.

470. For ausim see Key, L. G. § 482.

471 ss. Megadorus, who as a worthy old man is naturally inclined and entitled to criticise social nuisances and complaints, supports in the following scene the reforming views entertained by Cato and his political friends. There are besides the present passage so many allusions in the comedies of Plautus to the great luxury of the Roman ladies, that it would be preposterous to rely on them for the chronology of the plays themselves: but only two scenes are found in the nineteen plays extant, where a considerable number of lines is exclusively devoted to this subject, and surely such long passages cannot be treated like occasional allusions, as their tendency and purpose are openly avowed (comp. here v. 474 ss.). The one of these passages, Epid. II 2, 38—51, cannot originally have formed part of the scene in which it stands now, as I have shown elsewhere, and should therefore be left out of the question; but the other, i.e. the present scene in the Aulularia, we are entitled to use for placing the Aulularia after the year 560, nay we may even go further and range it among the later plays of the poet.

472. condicio 'match:' see on v. 235.

473. laudant or rather a more general notion which we may infer from this verb, e.g. dicunt, governs the construction of the words sapienter factum.

478. For the short quantity of the first syllable in invidia see Introd. p. 48.—In this line, v. 479, 480 and 489 we et illaé malam rem métuant quam metuónt magis, et nós minore súmptu simus quám sumus.

in máxumam illuc pópuli partemst óptumum:
in paúciores ávidos altercátiost, quorum ánimis avidis átque insatietátibus neque léx neque tutor cápere est qui possít modum.
nanique hóc qui dicat: quó illae nubent dívites dotátae, si istuc iús pauperibus pónitur?
quo lúbeat nubant, dúm dos ne fiát comes.
hoc sí ita fiat, móres meliorés sibi parént pro dote quós ferant quam núnc ferunt.

may briefly draw the attention of the student to a peculiarity of Latin: in comparisons the same verb is repeated, while in modern languages, e.g. English and French, the most general verb in the language 'to do' 'faire' is substituted.

479. mala res frequently denotes 'punishment' in the language of the comic writers.

481 ss. This line seems the sole instance of the construction bonum est in aliquem 'it is good for.' in would however admit of the same explanation as in such phrases as pessume in te atque in illum consulis Ter. Haut. tim. III 1, 28. The next line contains another difficulty first pointed out by Linge de hiatu p. 8: 'altercationem facimus cum aliquo, non in aliquem;' but in seems here to denote the object against which the altercatio (i.e. political contention) is directed: see Zumpt § 314. This very meaning of altercatio is, however, only assumed for this passage.

483. insatietas 'a greedy disposition,' ἅπ. λεγ. Ammianus Marcellinus has insatiabilitas.

484. Very probably we should suppose that Plautus found in the Greek original of his play a passage treating of the unprotected position of wealthy ἐπίκληροι, orphan heiresses. Though they have a tutor (guardian), they are nevertheless exposed to the aggressions of those who are on the look out for rich matches. The expression is, however, somewhat peculiar, as the common phrase appears to be capere modum legis alicuius (in legal phraseology), but not lex capit modum alicuius rei. Possibly, we should have to write facere instead of capere, or we should take capere modum in the sense of ponere (imponere), statuere (constituere) modum alicui rei. We may also say that capere modum = moderari.

488. For the hiatus sí ita see Introd. p. 68.

489. pro 'instead of:' see Key, L. G. § 1361 c. The phrase mores ferre is to be explained on the analogy of the usual expression dotem ferre.

ego fáxim muli, prétio qui superánt equos, 20
sint víliores Gállicis canthériis.
Ev. ita mé di amabunt, út ego hunc auscultó lubens:
nimis lépide fecit vérba ad parsimóniam.
Meg. nulla ígitur dicat 'équidem dotem ad te ádtuli maiórem multo quám tibi erat pecúnia. 25 enim míhi quidem aequomst púrpuram atque aurúm dari, ancíllas mulos múliones pédisequos salútigerulos púeros, vehicla quí vehar.'
Ev. ut mátronarum hic fácta pernovít probe:

490. For faxim see Key, L. G. § 566.—'It was the custom for ladies of rank to have their carriages drawn by mules.' Thornton. Martial says in one of his epigrams (III 62) that mules were sometimes sold at a higher price than whole houses. Hildyard quotes Juv. VII 181.

491. viliores has here its original meaning 'cheaper.'—'cantherius = κανθήλιος (with the interchange of l and r) 'geldings.' They were not highly valued and generally considered to be lazy and sleepy, comp. Men. 395 canterino astans ritu somniat.

493. The syllables nimis lépi- form a proceleusmatic, the s in nimis being dropped: Introd. p. 31.—lepidus is very difficult to translate by one word in its different shades, though the schoolboy's English furnishes us with the equally flexible term jolly. The word is very frequent in the comic writers, we find it afterwards in Catullus (1, 1. 6, 17. 36, 10) and even in Horace, ars poët. 273.—ad 'for:' see Key, L. G. § 1305 e.

496. enim frequently has the sense of enimvero: see Key, L. G. § 1449. Ruhnken on Ter. Phorm. IV 4, 13 justly observes 'solis comicis quos Appuleius imitatur, usitatum est hanc particulam adversativam ab initio ponere.'

498. salutigerulus is a ἅπ. λεγ. The editors quote 'salutigerulus ἐπισκέπτης' from the glosses collected by Labbaeus p. 163; we may compare the analogous formations sandaligerula Trin. 252, and nugigerulus, as our mss. read Aul. 518. salutiger occurs in Ausonius (salutiger Iuppiter and salutigeri libelli), Prudentius (salutigeri ortus) and Appuleius speaks of demons as salutigeri 'qui ultro citroque portant hinc petitiones, inde suppetias.' The meaning is rightly explained by a French translator 'petits laquais qu'on envoye de côté et d'autre pour savoir des nouvelles de ses amis, leur faire des compliments de notre part'—in short tigers.—For qui see Key, L. G. § 312.

moríbus praefectum múlierum hunc factúm velim.
MEG. nunc quóquo venias, plús plaustrorum in aédibus videás quam ruri quándo ad villam véneris.
sed hoc étiam pulcrumst praéquam sumptus úbi petunt.
stat fúllo phyrgio aúrifex linárius caupónes patagiárii indusiárii

500. For the accentuation moríbus see note on v. 137. For the whole passage we may compare a fragment from Cic. de republ. IV nec vero mulieribus praefectus praeponatur qui apud Graecos creari solet: sed sit censor qui viros doceat n o derari uxoribus. It would be somewhat gratuitous to conjecture that there actually was a scheme on foot to propose the institution of γυναικονόμοι or γυναικοκόσμοι in Rome such as there were in several Greek republics, and that Plautus ventured to hint at this.

503. pulcrumst is of course ironical.—Of the particle praequam there are five instances in Plautus: this line, Merc. 23. Most. 982. 1146 and Amph. II 2, 3; it does not occur in Terence and the fragments of the other comic writers, but in later times Gellius uses it again XVI 1. In the same way Plautus has the particle praeut: Amph. I 1, 218. Men. 376. 935. Mil. gl. 20. Bacch. 929. Merc. 470. Ritschl and Fleckeisen write prae quam in two words, and should consequently also write prae ut which they do not.

504. The word linarius occurs only here in Plautus, but is also quoted from an inscription, Gruter p. 649, 3.

505. caupones 'retail dealers.' 'patagium' est quod ad summam tunicam assui solet, quae et patagiata (Epid. II 2, 47) dicitur, et 'patagiarii' qui eiusmodi opera faciunt. Festus: the word patagiarius is however a ἅπ. λεγ.—Our mss. give here indusiarii, and indusiatam Epid. II 2, 47: but Varro derives the word from intus de l. l. V 131 p. 51 M. and accordingly writes intusium, and from this source Nonius derives his information p. 539, 31 'indusium est vestimentum quod corpori intra plurimas vestes adhaeret, quasi intusium. Plautus in Epidico' etc. p. 542, 22 he quotes from Varro de vita pop. Rom. I (=p. 237 ed. Bip.) 'posteaquam binas tunicas habere coeperunt, instituerunt vocare subuculam et indussam (thus the mss.). The adjective indusiatus occurs in Appuleius and the verb indusiare in Martianus Capella. On the indusium itself, Böttiger (Sabina 2, 113 sec. ed.) has the following remarks. 'The shirt was a kind of under-tunic (interula) made either of linen (linea, Salm. ad scr. h. a. I 972) or of cotton (byssinae). It was worn flammárii violárii carárii propólae linteónes calceolárii sedentárii sutóres diabathrárii—soleárii astant, ástant molocinárii, 40 [strophiarii astant, astant semisonarii] 510 petúnt fullones, sárcinatorés petunt pro illís crocotis stróphiis sumptu uxório.

iam hosce ábsolutos cénseas : cedúnt petunt trecénti : *cir*cumstánt phylacistae in átriis, by both sexes: for men it was called subucula, for women intusium (Ferrar. de re vest. 3, 1 p. 175), precisely as the English distinguish between shirt and shift. The negligé or morning-dress of ladies indoors consisted, as we see from many passages in Ovid and Propertius, in nothing but such a shirt which when fitting very tightly, did not even require to be fastened by a belt...but as it might easily become very troublesome on account of its length, it was generally kept together by a semizona, at least until the proper tunic was thrown over it.'

506. *carariu*s occurs only here: ceraria stands in the mss. Mil. gl. 694, where the reading seems however very uncertain. Comp. Ov. ars am. III 184 et sua velleribus nomina cera dedit.

507. linteo 'a linen-weaver' occurs here, in Servius on Aen. VII 14, and an inscription Gruter p. 38, 15.—calceolarius 'a shoemaker,' ἅπ. λεγ.

508. diabathrarius 'a maker of slippers,' occurs only here, diabathrum (i.e. the Greek διάβαθρον) is quoted from Naevius by Varro.

509. solearius occurs only here and Gruter 648, 13; molocinarius (or moloch.) here and in an inscription Muratori 939, 6. I am inclined to consider this line as spurious: for, first of all, why should the solearii be named after the diabathrarii? and then, how could the poet name solearii and molocinarii, members of very different professions, in one and the same breath?

510. In this line the two professions which mend old garments are appropriately mentioned together.

511. The strophium or mammillare and fascia was a kind of belt worn to keep the female bosom straight: see Smith's Dictionary of Antiquities s. v.

512. cedunt=incedunt, comp. colere=incolere v. 4.

513. trecenti denotes here a great number or multitude, much in the same way as sescenta v. 318. Hildyard quotes the following examples of this use: Cat. 9, 2. 11, 18. 12, 10. Hor. od. III 4, 79. See also Plaut. Mil. gl. 250.—phylacistae: the importunate creditors waiting for their money are compared with jailers. The word only here. Comp., however, phylaca Capt. 747. The textóres limbulárii arculárii:

aut áliqua mala crux sémper est quae aliquíd petat.
Ev. compéllem ego illum, ní metuam ne désinat memoráre mores múlierum: nunc síc sinam.
MEG. ubi núgigerulis rés solutast ómnibus, ibi ád postremum cédit miles, aés petit.
itúr, putatur rátio cum argentário:
milés impransus ástat, aes censét dari.
ubi dísputatast rátio cum argentário, [etiam plus ipsus ultro debet argentario] spes prórogatur míliti in aliúm diem.
haec súnt atque aliae múltae in magnis dótibus incómmoditates súmptusque intolerábiles.
nam quae índotatast, éa in potestateést viri:

reading of this line and the following is however not quite certain.

514. arcularii 'cabinet-makers.' Hildyard quotes Cic. Off. II 7, 25 scrutari arculas muliebres, and Varro de l. l. VIII 45 (?) ut lectus et lectulus, arca et arcula, sic alia.

518. For ubi—ibi Brix on Trin. 417 quotes Curc. I 2, 7 and Epid. II 1, 1.

519. 'The public expenses, of which the payment of the army formed a considerable part, fell of course mostly on the shoulders of the richer classes which possessed more landed property: and accordingly the husband of a rich wife had to bear all the taxes laid on her property.' KOEPKE. The military tax was called aes militare, an expression also found Poen. V 5, 7, though in a different sense.

520. 'Disputatio et computatio cum praepositione a putando quod valet purum facere. ideo antiqui purum putum adpellarunt, ideo putator quod arbores puras facit: ideo ratio putari dicitur in qua summa sit pura.' Varro de l. l. VI 63 p. 97. M. Scaliger in his note on the passage observes that Plutarch uses the analogous expression ἐκκαθᾶραι λογισμόν; we may also compare the English phrase to clear one's debts and the German eine rechnung in 's reine bringen. For examples see Trin. 417. Most. 299. Cas. III 2, 25.

521. The last syllable of miles is used long by Plautus here and Curc. 728; in the same manner, we read divēs Asin. 330. See C. F. W. Müller, Plaut. Pros. p. 49.

524. haec is frequently found as the fem. plur. in the best mss. of Plautus, Terence and Cicero, nay Lucretius never uses hae: see Munro on III 601 and VI 456.

dotátae mactant ét malo et damnó viros.
sed éccum adfinem ante aédis. quid agis, Eúclio?
Ev. nimiúm lubenter édi sermoném tuom. III. 6
MEG. ain, aúdivisti? Ev. úsque a principio ómnia.
MEG. tamen meó quidem animo aliquánto facias réctius si nítidior sis fíliaï núptiis.
Ev. pro ré nitorem et glóriam pro cópia.
qui habént, meminerint sése unde oriundí sient.
neque pól, Megadore, míhi nec quoiquam paúperi opínione melius rés structást domi.
MEG. immoést et ita di fáciant ut sempér siet plus plúsque istuc tibi sóspitent quod núnc habes.

527. On mactare and the use of this word in Plautus and Terence it suffices to refer to the commentators on Ter. Phorm. v 8, 39. mac-tus is derived with the suffix tu from mag-, the root of mag-nus: see Corssen, krit. Beitr. p. 423.—malum wretched life, damnum unnecessary expense.

529. edi 'I have devoured.' Thornton compares Shakespeare, Othello I 3 'She'd come again and with a greedy ear Devour up my discourse.' Plautus uses a similar expression, Cist. IV 2, 54 mihi cibus est quod fabulare and Most. 1062 gustare ego eius sermonem volo, and in the Asinaria we read the exact expression devorare dicta. In Greek we have similar phrases: φαγεῖν ῥήματα in Aristophanes, and εὐωχεῖσθαι λόγους in Plato.

530. For the hiatus in this line see Introd. p. 67.—usque a: note on v. 248.

531. This line might be metrically, though awkwardly, explained: tam mó | quid áni|mo aliquán|to faci|as réc|tius, but there are important reasons to suspect the genuineness of the reading.

532. nitidus is here synonymous with lautus or splendidus: thus Plautus says Pseud. 774 curari nitidiuscule and Cist. I 1, 10 lepide atque nitide accipere. In Hor. Ep. I 4, 15 me pinguem et nitidum, bene curata cute vises the word has its original sense.

533. pro 'in proportion to, in accordance with:' see Key, L. G. § 1361 g. Gronovius appropriately compares Hor. Serm. I 2, 19 pro quaestu sumptum facit 'he lives up to his income.'—gloria show, pomp, parade: comp. Hor. Ep. I 18, 22 gloria...supra vires et vestit et ungit. The gloire of the French nation is very frequently gloria in this sense of the Latin word. Thornton uses in his translation the proverb to cut one's coat according to the cloth.

534. habere absolutely used 'to possess, to be rich:' comp. Truc. IV 2, 3.

Ev. illúd mihi verbum nón placet 'quod núnc habes.'
tam hic scít me habere quam égomet: anus fecít palam.
Meg. quid tú te solus é senatu sévocas?
Ev. pol ego út te accusem, mécum meditabár. Meg. quid est?
Ev. quid sít me rogitas, quí mihi omnis ángulos furum ímplevisti in aédibus, miseró mihi qui intró misisti in aédis quingentós coquos cum sénis manibus, génere Geryonáceo.
quos si 'Argus servet, qui óculeus totús fuit, (quem quóndam Ioni Iúno custodem áddidit) is númquam servet. praéterea tibícinam quae mi ínterbibere sóla, si vinó scatat, Coríuthiensem fóntem Pirenám potest.

541. senatus 'a consultation,' comp. Mil. gl. 592 and 594. This expression is foreign to Terence.

542. For the apparent violation of the usual rules of the consecutio temporum in meditabar ut accusem, see the examples collected by Draeger I p. 298.

544. For the genitive furum see Key, L. G. § 941. See above v. 451. In the same way complere has the genitive after it Amph. I 2, 8 s. Men. 901. replere Poen. III 3, 88.

545. quingentos denotes here a great number, in the same way as we have sescenta v. 318 and trecenti v. 513. Mercklin (ind. schol. Dorpat. 1862 p. XIII) compares Mil. gl. 52 and Curc. 587.

547. Appuleius Metam. II p. 40 ed. Bip. manifestly imitates this passage in describing a restless, suspicious fellow who pries into everything: vides hominem insomnem, certe perspicaciorem ipso Lynceo vel Argo, et oculeum totum.

548. For custodem addere comp. Mil. gl. 146. 298. 305 (where the mss. read tradidit, but Ritschl rightly gives addidit from Douza's conjecture) and Capt. III 5, 50. The same expression occurs Hor. Od. III 4, 78.

550. For interbibere see Key, L. G. § 1342, 1 d.—scatat, not from scatĕre, but scatēre: this infinitive occurs in a fragment of an anonymous tragic poet quoted by Cic. Tusc. I 28, 69 (Ribb. trag. 217) and three times in Lucretius, who has also scatit, see Munro on v 40.

551. The earlier Roman poets always turn Greek names and words into the appearance of Latin forms, and accordingly give them Latin terminations. The forms Oresten Echion Salamina as found in Ennius and Pacuvius are solitary excep-tum obsónium autem pól vel le*gioni* sat est.

MEG. etiam ágnum misi. EV. quó quidem agno sát scio magis cúrionem núsquam esse ullam béluam.
MEG. volo ego éx te scire quí sit agnus cúrio.
EV. quia óssa ac pellis tótust: ita curá macet.
quin éxta inspicere in sóle e*i* vivó licet:
ita ís pellucet quási lanterna Púnica.
MEG. caedúndum illum ego condúxi. EV. tum tu idem óptumumst tions. The introduction of pure Greek forms is one of the characteristic features of the Augustan period. Hence we have in the present passage Pirenam, not Pirenen.

552. Hildyard appropriately compares Massinger, City Madam I 1 provision enough to serve a garrison.

554. Appuleius imitates this passage in calling a fat lamb agnus incuriosus Flor. 2. p. 113 ed. Bp., whence it appears that he found in his text the gloss curiosam which has superseded the genuine reading curionem in all mss. The peculiar meaning of curio is of course coined on purpose for the present passage. Euclio, too, imparts to curio the sense of careworn.

556. Comp. ossa atque pellis sum miser aegritudine 'only skin and bones' Capt. I 2, 32. The expression appears to be proverbial: comp. Theoc. II 89 αὐτὰ δὲ λοιπὰ ὅστι' ἔτ' ἦς καὶ δέρμα. Horace has a similar expression ossa pelle amicta lurida Epod. 17, 22.

558. I have kept the form lanterna as given by the ms. B: in the only other two passages where this word occurs in Plautus, Amph. prol. 149 and ib. I 1, 249, B has laterna, and in J the lines in question are illegible. In the line from the prologue to the Amphitruo I should propose to read Illúc a portu nunc cum laterna ádvenit. For lanterna see also Bücheler, rhein. Mus. XVIII 393 and W. Schmitz ibid. XIX 301. Compare the French lanterne and the Italian lanterna. The laterna Punica is only here mentioned; Weise says 'forte e vitro facta:' and this opinion seems not quite without foundation, when we consider that the invention of glass is generally ascribed to the Phoenicians.—Beaumont and Fletcher, poets who like to show off their learning, manifestly imitate this passage in 'The Scornful Lady' II 3 p. 301 ed. Lond. 1750: 'Serv. Yonder's a cast of coachmares of the gentlewoman's, the strangest cattle. Wel. Why? Serv. Why, they are transparent, sir, you may see through them.'

559. 'Qui opus aliquod, hoc est materiam aliquam efformandam effingendam elaborandam alicui tradit, is locare: condu- loces écferendum. nám iam credo mórtuost.

MEG. potáre ego hoc die, Eúclio, tecúm volo.
EV. non quód potem ego quidem hábeo hercle.
MEG. at ego iússero
cadum únum vini véteris a me adférrier.
EV. nolo hércle: nam mihi bíbere decretúmst aquam.
MEG. ego te hódie reddam mádidum, si vivó, probe, tibi quoí decretumst bíbere aquam. EV. scio quám rem agat.
ut mé deponat víno, eam adfectát viam.:

cere vero qui illud opus suscipiat, dicitur.' Lindemann on Capt. IV 2, 39. conducere is here simply to buy, locare in the next line to put out. Euclio plays upon the word locare which would remind any one of the phrase funus locare 'to contract with an undertaker about a funeral.' This becomes the more pungent, as Euclio advises Megadorus to bespeak the lamb's funeral while it is still alive.

562. The future perf. iussero stands here, as it often does in the comic writers, in the sense of the simple future iubebo or rather the subj. perf. iusserim: see Key, L. G. § 476.

563. Translate cadum unum 'just one bottle.'— a me=a mea domo: in the same way we have a nobis 'from our house' Mil. gl. 339, and both together a nobis domost Cist. IV 1. 6.

565. madidus and the Greek βεβρεγμένος often mean 'drunk,' e.g. Amph. III 4, 18. As. V 2, 9. madide madere Pseud. 1297. Hildyard compares the English expression to moisten one's clay. See also Heindorf's note on Hor. Sat. II 1, 9.—si vivo 'by my life' ('so wahr ich lebe' in German) is frequently found in Plautus and Terence. Pareus gives the following examples: Cas. I 1, 28. Most. 1067. Men. 903. Bacch. 766. Ter. Andr. V 2, 25. Eun. V 6, 19. Haut. tim. V 1, 45.

566. tibi quoi stands for te quoi in consequence of a kind of attraction or assimilation, of which I find two other instances: Epid. III 1, 8 tibi quoi divitiae domi maxumae Sunt is nummum nullum habes and Curc. II 2, 17 namque incubare satius te fuerat Iovi, Tibi quoi auxilium in iure iurando fuit.

567. deponere vino is used in precisely the same way by Aurelius Victor, de vir. inl. 71 Caepio cum aliter vincere non posset, duos satellites pecunia corrupit qui Viriathum vino (others humi) depositum peremerunt.—adfectare viam is 'to try, to attempt,' Men. 686 ut me defrudes, ad eam rem adfectas viam. Terence has the same phrase Haut. tim. I 3, 60 and Phorm. V 7, 71, where Donatus observes 'adfectant viam, plenum, quod nos ἐλλειπτικῶς.' Cicero has iter adfectare pro Roscio Am. 48, 140.

post hóc quod habeo ut cómmutet colóniam.
ego íd cavebo: nam álicubi abstrudám foris.
ego fáxo et operam et vínum perdiderít simul.
MEG. ego nísi quid me vis, éo lavatum ut sácrificem.
EV. edepól ne tu, aula, múltos inimicós habes, atque ístuc aurum quód tibi concréditumst.
nunc hóc mihi factust óptumum, ut ted aúferam, aula, ín Fidei fánum: ibi abstrudám probe.
Fidés, novisti me ét ego te: cave sís tibi ne tu ímmutassis nómen, si hoc concréduo.
ibo ád te, fretus tuá, Fides, fidúcia.

568. colonia appears here in its original sense (from colo = incolo), 'a dwelling-place:' see Epid. III 2, 7 and Pseud. 1100. In the Asin. II 2, 32 catenarum colonus means a familiar inmate of the prison.—For cónmutét see note on pistillúm v. 95.

571. Servius on Aen. III 136 observes apud veteres neque uxor duci neque ager arari sine sacrificiis peractis poterat.—It is not at all improbable that a line has dropped out after v. 571, in which the leave-taking of the two affines was contained.

573. For tibī see Introd. p. 23.

574. With the construction optimum factu we may comp. Mil. gl. 101, qui est amor cultu optumus.

575. Fidēi: Introd. p. 14. Key, L. G. § 147.

577. For the form immutassis = inmutaveris see note on v. 226. The verb immutare occurs three times in Plautus.—concreduo: see on v. 62.—The sense is 'Do not allow yourself to be called infida, though your name is Fides:' comp. 607. 659 s.

ACTVS IV.

STROBILVS (II) IV. 1

Hóc est servi fácinus frugi, fácere quod ego pér-sequor :
né morae moléstiaeque impérium erile habeát sibi.
nám qui ero ex senténtia servíre servos póstulat, ín erum matura, ín se sera cóndecet capéssere.
sín dormitet, íta dormitet, sérvom sese ut cógitet : 5 [nám qui amanti ero sérvitutem sérvit, quasi ego sérvio, 6

One of the greatest difficulties in the Aulularia consists in the name and character of the slave Strobilus who makes his appearance in the first scene of this act. That the Strobilus of the first scene of the third act cannot be the same person with this, may be readily perceived ; nor is it easy to believe that Plautus would have designated two different characters by one and the same name. The most probable assumption is that the two characters, that of the slave of Megaronides and that of Lyconides' servant, were acted by one and the same performer, whence they were subsequently thrown together under one name. It is idle to speculate what may have been the original name of the second Strobilus, but it is certain that he is a very different person from the Strobilus of the first three acts of our play. We should observe that, like his slave, Megadorus has now disappeared from the scene of action, and that Lyconides now steps forward.

579. facinus would in prose be generally omitted ; translate 'it behoves a good servant.'—From Cicero Tusc. III 8, 16 we learn that the Greek for frugi would be χρήσιμος, and the same writer informs us that hominem frugi omnia recte facere, iam proverbi locum obtinet ib. IV 16, 36.

581. ex sententia 'to his satisfaction'; for the phrase see note on Ter. Haut. tim. IV 3, 5.—postulat = volt, ἀξιοῖ, see on 359.

582. Comp. Verg. Aen. I 80 iussa capessere fas est. Plaut. Trin. 299 capesses mea imperia.

584—590. After I had first observed (de Aul. p. 29) that the reading of these lines could not be genuine, and had thought of transposing 591—594 after si érum videt superáre amorem, hoc sérvi esse officiúm reor, rétinere ad salútem, non enim quo íncumbat eo impéllere.

quási pueris qui náre discunt scírpea induitúr ratis, quí laborent mínus, facilius út nent et moveánt manus:
eódem modo servóm ratem esse amánti ero aequom cénseo, út eum toleret né pessum abeat támquam * * *] éri ille imperium ediscat ut quod fróns velit oculí sciant,
quód iubeat citís quadrigis cítius properet pérsequi.

583, Brix (jahrb. 1865 p. 56) pointed out that the lines which I have now included in brackets, were but a parallel passage originally added in the margin of the archetype of our mss. and did not therefore belong to the Aulularia. For, as he judiciously says, we can only understand them of an amor meretricius, in which case it would indeed be the duty of a faithful servant to restrain his master: but in the present case Lyconides is bent on lawful marriage without being very deeply in love, and as he does not doubt of Euclio's consent (which appears from IV 10), it would be a superfluous presumption of his slave to attempt to keep him back (retinere ad salutem). Such parallel passages have sometimes been added in the mss. of the Plautine comedies, e.g. Men. 984 a passage from the commencement of the fourth act of the Mostellaria.

584. For erŏ see Introd. p. 27.—servitutem servire occurs several times in Plautus, once even in Cicero Mur. 29, 61. Comp. note on facinus facere 218.

586. For non enim we should probably write noenum; see note on 67.—For incumbăt see Introd. p. 15.

589. For modŏ see Introd. p. 21.

590. tolerare has here the sense of sublevare, as Trin. 338. 358. 371.—pessum abire 'go to the bottom;' comp. Cist. II 1, 11 sq.

591. frons eri, oculi servi: an attentive slave should understand how to read his master's looks. The expression was no doubt proverbial like the German 'er sieht dir deine wünsche am gesichte ab.'

592. citis quadrigis citius: comp. Poen. I 2, 156 quadrigis cursim ad carnuficem rapi, and Asin. II 2, 13 numquam edepol quadrigis albis indipisces postea.—Plautus has persequor here and 579: Ter. Haut. tim. IV 1, 22 says imperium exequi.

qui éa curabit, ábstinebit cénsione búbula néc sua opera rédiget umquam ín splendorem cómpedes.
nam érus meus amat fíliam huius Eúclionis paúperis:
éam ero nunc renúntiatumst nuptum huic Megadoró dari.
ís speculatum huc mísit me ut quae fierent fieret párticeps.
núnc sine omni suspítione in ára hic adsidám sacra:
hínc ego et huc et ílluc potero quíd agant arbitrárier.

593. What censio bubula means, should be clear without further explanation: comp. however Trin. 1011 where the slave Stasimus exhorts himself cave sis tibi ne bubuli in te cottabi crebri crepent, and Stich. 63 Antipho threatens his servants vos monimentis commonefaciam bubulis. Slaves are therefore called bucaedae Most. 884: ibid. 882 we read (erus) male castigabit eos exuviis bubulis.

594. The hiatus únquam ín is legitimate in the caesura: see Introd. p. 66.

595. nam indicates here no internal, but only an external connexion of the following sentence with the preceding speech: or, to speak more clearly, we should supply such a sentence as 'I make all these observations not in vain, for my master etc.' nam is in this way very frequently used by the comic writers. See also on v. 27.—huius, i.e. who lives here, in this house. In the same way we have huic Megadoro in the next line. He points towards the house.

598. sine omni=sine ulla, see note on v. 213.—suspitio is the spelling frequently found in the best mss. of Plautus, Terence, Caesar, Cicero, Curtius and Tacitus: the word is a contraction from suspicitio, an etymology which at the same time accounts for the different quantity of suspītio (noun) and suspĭcio (verb) suspĭcor. Another theory is propounded by Corssen, Beitr. p. 15 s.

599. arbitrarier is here=inspicere, comp. arbiter=spectator Capt. 208 and Poen. III 3, 50. Milton has ventured to introduce this sense of the word into the English language, Par. Lost I 785 'while over-head the moon sits arbitress.'

EVCLIO. STROBILVS. IV 2

Ev. tú modo cave quoiquam índicassis, aúrum meum esse istíc, Fides.
nón metuo ne quísquam inveniat: íta probe in latebrís situmst.
édepol ne illic púlcram praedam agát, si quis illam invénerit aúlam onustam aurí. verum id te quaéso ut prohibessís, Fides.
núnc lavabo, ut rém divinam fáciam, ne adfiném morer, quín ubi accersát meam extemplo fíliam ducát domum.
víde, Fides, etiam átque etiam nunc, sálvam ut aulam abs te aúferam:

600. indicassis: see note on v. 226.

602. praedam agere is originally a military phrase like the Greek λεηλατεῖν.

603. The genitive auri after onustam should be explained after the analogy of implere (see note on v. 544) and aula auri plena 813. We might, however, join aulam auri and consider onustam as additional attribute. But comp. v. 609. The ablative onustam auro v. 804.—prohibessis = prohibevesis = prohibueris: for the formation comp. note on v. 226 and the perfects delevi nevi flevi. prohibessit Pseud. 14. Lucretius has avessis IV 823.

605. accersere is so frequently found in the best mss. (for Plautus see the examples collected by Gruter on Cas. III 4, 10; for Caesar, Dinter's note on B. G. I 31, 4) that it would be very arbitrary to condemn this form, because it is difficult to explain. There certainly can be no doubt that arcessere is a genuine form: ar being another form of the preposition ad and cesso the intensive of cio. Charisius III (p. 227 P., 256 K.) states 'accerso sicut arcesso. sed interest quod arcessere est accusare, accersere autem vocare.' See also Diomedes I p. 375 P. 379 K. Prisc. XVIII p. 1164 P. This distinction between the two forms does not hold good. The form accersere was perhaps peculiar to the sermo plebeius, in which case its frequent occurrence in Plautus should not surprise us. Ritschl gives accersere in many passages, e.g. Men. 729. 763. 770. 776. 875. Most. 1044. 1093. See also an able article on arcesso and accerso by Mr A. S. Wilkins, in the New Journal of Philology VI 278—285.

tuaé fide concrédidi aurum, in tuó luco et fanó situmst.
STR. di ínmortales, quód ego hunc hominem fácinus audió loqui:
se aúlam onustam auri ábstrusisse hic íntus in fanó Fide.
cáve tu illi fidélis quaeso pótius fueris quám mihi.
átque hic pater est, út ego opinor, huíus erus quam méus amat.
íbo hinc intro, pérscrutabor fánum, si inveniam úspiam aúrum, dum hic est óccupatus. séd si repperero, ó Fides, múlsi congiálem plenam fáciam tibi fidéliam.
íd adeo tibi fáciam, verum ego míhi bibam, ubi ita fécero.
IV 3
EV. nón temere est, quod córvos cantat míhi nunc ab laevá manu:
sémul radebat pédibus terram et vóce crocibát sua.

607. For fide = fidei see Key, L. G. § 88. Lucretius has facie, Horace (Serm. I 3, 95) and Terence (Andr. I 5, 61) have fide, Livy (v 13, 5) pernicie as datives.

609. The mss. read fidei, whence fide should be written at the end of the verse. This is of course to be considered as a contracted form of the genitive; comp. Hor. Od. III 7, 4 constantis iuvenem fide with Mr Wickham's note.

614. fidelia here 'a wine-pot:' comp. Pers. v 183 tumet alba fidelia vino. Plautus chooses this word on account of the paronomasia with Fides.

616. The fears of the ever-suspicious Euclio have been awakened by an unlucky omen. non temere est is justly explained by Calphurnius on Ter. Haut. tim. IV 1, 7 as 'non sine causa;' the same expression occurs in Terence Eun. II 2, 60. Phorm. v 8, 8. Comp. Pl. Bacch. 85. 920 ss. We learn from Cic. de div. I 39, 85 that a dextrâ corvos, a sinistra cornix facit ratum, and this is confirmed by a Plautine passage Asin. II 1, 12 picus et cornix est ab laeva, corvos porro ab dextera: consuadent. A raven on the left was consequently an unlucky omen. This should not be confounded with the expression avi sinistra, Pseud. 762 and Epid. I 2, 2, which means a lucky omen.

617. In semul (for the form see Ritschl Proll. XCVII) the final cóntinuo meúm cor coepit ártem facere lúdicram átque in pectus émicare: séd ego cesso cúrrere IV 4 620 fóras foras, lumbríce, qui sub térra erepsistí modo, quí modo nusquam cómparebas: núnc, quom comparés, peris.

égo hercle te, praestrígiator, míseris iam accipiám modis.
STR. quaé te mala crux ágitat? quid tibi mécumst conmercí, senex?
quíd me adflictas, quíd me raptas, quá me causa vérberas? 5

l should be dropped: see Introd. p. 36.—crōcire occurs only here; the long quantity of the o has been unjustly suspected on account of an erroneous reading in the late poem de Philomela, where Burmann and Reifferscheid rightly read crōcitat ōt corvus v. 28 (Suet. rell. p. 309), while former editors give ēt crōcitat corvus. From old glossaries I may mention corvi crocciunt (Reiff. p. 249), corvus crocit and corvos craxare (coaxare?) vel crocitare ibid. p. 250, and to Suetonius' Pratum Reifferscheid refers the notice corvorum crocitare p. 250 (crocant croccant crocciunt grahant several mss.). Comp. the Greek κρώζειν, German krächzen and krähen, English to crow and croak.

618. artem facere ludicram 'to dance,' comp. note on ludius v. 399. Plautus has similar expressions Cist. II 3, 9 cor salit. Cas. II 6, 9 corculum adsultascit metu. ibid. 62 cor lienosum habeo: iam dudum salit. Capt. III 4, 104 tu (cor) sussultas. In Greek we have the phrases καρδία χορεύει (Soph.), ὀρχεῖται καρδία φόβῳ (Aeschyl.), ἡ πήδησις τῆς καρδίας (Plato and Plut.).

620. On fórās forās see Introd. p. 38.

621. Brix conjectures peri. But the present peris stands emphatically in the sense of the future peribis.

622. praestrigiator is the Plautine form of the word registered in our dictionaries as praestigiator, as has been pointed out by A. Spengel on Truc. I 2, 32. The word is derived from praestringere.—te miseris accipiam modis 'I shall treat you miserably.' Comp. Ter. Ad. II 1, 12 indignis quom egomet sim acceptus modis.

623. For the expression mala crux see Brix on Men. 707. Comp. Bacch. 117 quid tibi conmercist cum dis damnosissumis? and Rud. III 4, 20 nihil cum vestris legibus mi est conmerci. Terence says in the same sense quid tibi cum illa rei est? Eun. IV 7, 34. The other phrase occurs only in Plautus.

Ev. vérberabilíssume, etiam rógitas? non fur, séd trifur.
Str. quíd tibi subrupuí? Ev. redde huc sis. Str. quíd tibi vis reddám? Ev. rogas?
Str. níl equidem tibi ábstuli. Ev. at illud quód tibi abstulerás cedo.
écquid agis tu? Str. quíd agam? Ev. auferre nón potes. Str. quid vís tibi?
Ev. póne. Str. id quidem pol té datare crédo consuetúm, senex.
Ev. póne hoc sis: auférr cavillam: nón ego nunc nugás ago.
Str. quíd ego ponam? quín tu eloquere, quídquid est, suo nómine.
nón hercle equidem quícquam sumpsi néc tetigi. Ev. ostende húc manus.
Str. ém tibi. Ev. ostende. Str. éccas. Ev. video. age óstende etiam tértiam.

625. verberabilissumus (μαστιγωσιμώτατος) is a comic superlative like ipsissumus Trin. 988, which is itself an imitation of αὐτότατος Arist. Plut. 83. Another superlative of the same kind is oculissumus Curc. I 2, 28. exclusissumus Men. 695. occisissumus Cas. III 5, 52.

627. Euclio avoids the direct mention of the real object of his search, lest he should betray himself, in case Strobilus should not be in possession of the secret. There is a quibble in the Latin here, which is however easily understood. Euclio takes tibi as dat. eth., a turn which cannot be rendered in English. Similar jokes occur Men. 645 and Capt. 862.

628. The phrase ecquid agis, which is expressive of impatience, occurs also Cist. III 12 in the same manner as here.

629. Euclio bids Strobilus lay the pot down (pone), but the slave purposely misunderstands him in construing an obscenity upon the word pone which may also be an adverb. datare has here an obscene sense in the same way as dare Cas. II 6, 10.

630. 'Scribitur fere in Plautinis libris promiscue hoc et huc.' Gulielmius, quaest. in Aul. c. 4. The form hoc = huc is well attested by grammarians and mss. alike.—aufer cavillam: comp. Capt. 960 tandem ista aufer and Truc. IV 4, 8 aufer nugas. So Pers. 797, iurgium hinc auferas. Comp. also Ter. Phorm. 857, and Phaedr. III 6, 8.—nugas ago recurs v. 643 below.

633. 'The archaic particle

STR. láruae hunc atque íntemperiae insániaeque agitánt senem.
fácisne iniuriám mihi an non? EV. quía non pendes, máxumam. 16 átque id quoque iam fíet, nisi fatére. STR. quid fateár tibi?

em which in former editions was usually replaced by the more recent form en, is in Plautus strongly recommended by the best mss. and very frequently required by the metre, e.g. Merc. II 2, 82. Pseud. III 2, 100. Poen. I 1, 79. Bacch. II 3, 40. IV 8, 29. Charisius quotes em from an oration of C. Gracchus and Poen. III 4, 16. hem, which in older mss. is but rarely, in later ones frequently, confounded with it, is of a thoroughly pathetic nature and serves for expressing joy, grief, surprise and bewilderment.' BRIX on Trin. 3.—On the words ostende etiam tertiam Thornton has the following note: 'This has been censured as being too extravagant and entirely out of nature; but considering the very ridiculous humour of the Miser as drawn by our author, it will not perhaps appear out of character. Euclio talks in the same strain of the cooks being all of Geryon's race and having six hands a piece. Molière, however, who has imitated this scene, has not ventured this seemingly absurd joke, as undoubtedly he thought it would appear too outré to a modern audience; and our own countrymen, Shadwell and Fielding, have copied his example, probably for the same reason. But there is a direct imitation of this whole passage in the old play of Albumazar, Act III Scene 8, where Trincalo (who is made to fancy himself Antonio) questions Ronca about his purse which the latter had stolen from him:

Trin. O my purse; Dear master Ronca.
Ronc. What's your pleasure, sir?
Trin. Show me your hand.
Ronc. Here 'tis.
Trin. But where's the other?
Ronc. Why here.
Trin. But I mean where's your other hand?
Ronc. Think you me the giant with an hundred hands?
Trin. Give me your right.
Ronc. My right?
Trin. Your left.
Ronc. My left?
Trin. Now both.
Ronc. There's both, my dear Antonio.

634. laruae hunc agitant 'the Furies are upon him.' Comp. Capt. III 4, 66 iam deliramenta loquitur, laruae stimulant virum. Hence, the physician in the Menaechmi V 4, 2 puts the question: num laruatu's aut cerritus?—For intemperiae we may refer to v. 71 above.—The plural insaniae is, in all probability, confined to the present passage.

635. facisne should be pronounced as facin, see Introd. p. 31, 36. It appears to be gratuitous to write facin.

Ev. quíd abstulisti hinc? Str. dí me perdant, si égo tui quicquam ábstuli, níve adeo abstulísse vellem. Ev. ágedum, excutedum pállium.
Str. túo arbitratu. Ev. ne ínter tunicas hábeas.
Str. tempta quá lubet.
Ev. váh, scelestus quám benigne, ut ne ábstulisse intellégam.
nóvi sucophántias. age rúrsum ostende huc déxteram.
Str. ém tibi. Ev. nunc laévam ostende. Str. quín equidem ambas prófero.
Ev. iám scrutari mítto: redde huc. Str. quíd reddam? Ev. a, nugás agis:
cérte habes. Str. habeo égo? quid habeo? Ev. nón dico: audire éxpetis.
íd meum quidquíd habes, redde. Str. insánis. perscrutátus es tuó arbitratu néque tui me quícquam invenistí penes.

637. For quíd ăbstulísti see Introd. p. 57.

638. Strobilus mutters these words to himself. The sense is et di me perdant, si non vellem me abstulisse. Euclio is not supposed to hear this.

639. tunica is the Latin for the Greek χιτών. The plural stands much in the same way as Amph. I 1, 212. Men. 736. 803.—temptare has here its original sense 'to take hold of —,' i.e. to search through —.

640. How liberally (benigne) you allow me to feel everywhere!

643. a is the genuine spelling of the interjection, not ah, as we learn from the best mss. and the grammarian Probus. See also Priscian p. 1024 P. Marius Victorinus I p. 2475.

645. How little constant the language in Plautus' time was with regard to the deponent and active forms, we see here in a striking instance: 643 we have scrutari, 645 perscrutatus es, but 649 perscrutavi.

646. penes is rarely placed after the word which it governs: see Key, L. G. § 1349 where Ter. Hec. IV 1, 20 is quoted. The same collocation occurs also Trin. 1146. Corssen connects this preposition with penu penus penitus, and says that it originally meant 'in the store-room.'

Ev. máne mane: quis illést qui hic intus álter tecum símul erat?
périi hercle. ille intús nunc turbat: húnc si amitto, hinc ábierit.
póstremo hunc iam pérscrutavi. hic níhil habet: abi quó lubet. 30
650 Str. Iúppiter te díque perdant. Ev. haúd male egit grátias.
íbo intro atque illí socienno tuó iam interstringám gulam.
fúgin hinc ab oculís? abin an non? Str. ábeo.
Ev. cave sis *te videam.
Str. emórtuom ego me mávelim letó malo IV 5
quam nón ego illi dém hodie insidiás seni.
655 nam hic íntus non audébit aurum abstrúdere:
credo écferet iam sécum et mutabít locum.
atát, foris crepuit. sénex eccum aurum ecfért foras. 5 tantísper huc ego ad iánuam concéssero.
Ev. Fidé censebam máxumam multó fidem: IV 6 660 sed éa sublevit ós mihi paenissume.

648. amittere, as Brix on Capt. 36 rightly observes, has in the latinity before Cicero frequently the sense of dimittere.

650. The words haud male egit gratias are addressed to the audience. (There is a confusion in the mss. as to the distribution of these words between the two characters, but I have now followed the ms. B.)

651. The form sociennus=socius is attested by Nonius 172, 21.—interstringam: see Key, L. G. § 1342, 1 e.

652. Hare compares a similar passage Cas. II 4, 23 abin hinc ab oculis?—The termination of the line is corrupt in the mss.: C. F. W. Müller conjectures cave sis mi obviam. I have thought of te intuam.

653. emortuos 'completely dead:' Key, L. G. § 1332 g.

654. For the hiatus dém ho— see Introd. p. 69.

657. The syllables foris crepu form a proceleusmatic: see Introd. p. 31. Comp. fores crepuerunt Mil. gl. 410, concrepuit ostium Men. 348, in Greek αἱ θύραι ψοφοῦσιν, e.g. Lys. 1, 14.

659. For Fide as a genitive see note on v. 609.

660. By way of explanation of the phrase os alicui sublinere ('to deceive, to cheat') Nonius p. 45, 21 says sublevit significat 'inlusit et pro ridiculo habuit,' tractum a genere ludi quo dor- ni súbvenisset córvos, periissém miser.

nimis hércle ego illum córvom ad me veniát velim qui indícium fecit, út ego illic aliquíd boni dicám—nam quod edit, tám duim quam pérduim.
nunc hóc ubi abstrudam, cógito solúm locum.
Silváni lucus éxtra murumst ávius crebró salicto opplétus: ibi sumám locum.
certúmst, Silvano pótius credam quám Fide.
STR. eugae eúgae, di me sálvom et servatúm volunt.
iam ego illúc praecurram atque ínscendam aliquam in árborem, et índe observabo, aúrum ubi abstrudát senex.
quamquam híc manere mé erus sese iússerat, certúmst malam rem pótius quaeram cúm lucro.

mientibus ora pinguntur. Gronovius observes that this ludicrous practice is mentioned by Virgil, Ecl. VI 22 (Aegle) sanguineis frontem moris et tempora pingit, and by Petronius Sat. 22 (p. 23 Büch.) cum Ascyltos... in somnum laberetur, illa...ancilla totam faciem eius fuligine longa perfricuit et non sentientis labra umerosque sopiti carbonibus pinxit. Gronovius quotes the following instances of this phrase in Plautus: Mil. gl. II 5, 47. Merc. II 4, 17. Capt. III 4, 123.—For paenissume see note on 463.

662. illum corvom ad me veniat velim is a proleptic construction instead of ille corvos ad me veniat velim.

663. illic = illice, see Men. 304. 828. 842 in Ritschl's edition.

664. edit: see Key, L. G. § 482.—tam—quam 'I might as well give him as lose,' i. e. to give and to lose would amount to the same in this case.

668. For the dative Fide see note on v. 607.

669. There are several Plautine passages where the two words fuge (fugae) and euge (eugae) have been erroneously interchanged, e. g. Asin. 555 (= III 2, 9) B has eugae, J euge, but Bücheler justly emends fugae (see Jahrb. für class. phil. 1863 p. 772). Again Most. 686 BCD have Fuge which Camerarius changed to euge: A gives EUGAE and this form Ritschl ought to have put into his text, it being supported by good mss. and evidenced by the metre, notwithstanding the Greek εὖγε. See e. g. Ter. And. II 2, 8 (= 345 Fl.) te ipsum quaero. eugae, Charine with Bentley's note. Fleckeisen has this spelling throughout his edition of Terence.

672. For the hiatus re mé er— see Introd. p. 69.

LYCONIDES. EVNOMIA. (VIRGO). IV 7

LY. dixí tibi, mater, iúxta rem mecúm tenes super Eúclionis fília: nunc te óbsecro resecróque, mater, quód dudum obsecráveram: 4 fac méntionem cum ávonculo, matér mea. 3
EVN. scis túte facta vélle me quae tú velis: 5 et istúc confido a frátre me impetrássere, et caúsa iustast, síquidem itast ut praédicas, te eam cómpressisse vínolentum vírginem.
LY. egone út te advorsum méntiar, matér mea?
VI. perií, mea nutrix, óbsecro te, uterúm dolet: 10
Iunó Lucina, tuám fidem. LY. em, matér mea,

674. iuxta mecum 'in the same manner with myself.' Comp. Mil. gl. 234 scias iuxta mecum mea consilia. Pseud. 1161 (nescio) iuxta cum ignarissumis. Sallust too says iuxta mecum omnes intellegitis Cat. 58.

675. super: Key, L. G. § 1380 c.

676. resecroque: 'I implore you again and again,' comp. Persa 47 obsecro resecroque te. In both passages this seems the simplest explanation; the words of Festus 'resecrare est resolvere religione,' which the editors since Pithoeus (Advers. I 10) connected with them, should not be applied to them.

677. The construction mentionem facere cum aliquo occurs again Cist. I 2, 15 and Persa 109.—For the pronunciation aunculo see p. 84.

679. impetrassere is an old infinit. fut. = impetraturam esse. Comp. reconciliassere Capt. I 1, 65. In the same way Lucilius has depeculassere et deargentassere. See Zumpt, § 161.

682. te advorsum 'in your face,' see Key, L. G. § 1307 b. Comp. Poen. I 2, 188 mendax me advorsum siet.

683. There are only two other passages besides this where the neuter uterum occurs instead of the masculine: Turpil. 179 (Ribb. Com. p. 92) dispérii misera: úterum cruciatúr mihi (for the hiatus see Introd. p. 67) a line which is undoubtedly spoken by a girl in the same situation as Euclio's daughter. The other passage is Afran. 346 sedit uterum (Ribb. Com. p. 178).

684. 'luna a lucendo nominata...eadem est enim Lucina. (see Max Müller's Lectures II p. 278) itaque, ut apud Graecos Dianam eamque Luciferam, sic apud nostros Iunonem Lucinam in pariendo invocant.' Cicero de nat. deor. II 27, 68. Comp. Ter. Andr. III 1, 15 and Ad. III 4, 41 Iuno Lucina, fer opem, serva me, obsecro with the commentators and Preller, Röm.

tibi rém potiorem vídeo: clamat párturit.
EVN. i hac íntro mecum, gnáte mi, ad fratrém meum, ut istúc quod me oras ímpetratum ab eo aúferam.
LY. i, iám sequor te, mater. sed servóm meum Strobílum miror, úbi sit, quem ego me iússeram hic ópperiri. quóm ego mecum cógito, si míhi dat operam, meílli irasci iniúriumst.
sed íbo intro, ubi de cápite meo sunt cómitia.

STROBILVS. IV 8

Picí divitiis qui aúreos montís colunt,

Myth. p. 243. Donatus observes on the line in the Andria 'nota hoc versu totidem verbis uti omnes puerperas in comoediis, nec alias [perhaps nec ullas] induci loqui in proscaenio: nam haec vox post scaenam tollitur.'—tuam fidem sc. rogo, imploro: comp. Curc. 196 and the title of Varro's satire Hercules, tuam fidem p. 283 in the Bipontine edition. For vostram fidem see Westerhov on Ter. Andr. IV 3, 1, where Donatus observes that in these elliptic expressions fidem means 'opem et auxilium.'

685. rem potiorem video verbis. Why shall I tell you of it any longer? my words are quite superfluous, since the fact speaks for itself.—For tibi see Key, L. G. § 978.

689. Strobilum miror ubi sit: prolepsis for miror ubi Strobilus sit.

691. iniurium is an archaic word, which was in later times replaced by the adj. iniustum or the subst. iniuria. It occurs Cist. I 1, 105. Ter. Ad. I 2, 26 and II 1, 51. Hec. II 1, 14. iniurius stands Andr. II 3, 3. Haut. tim. II 3, 79. Curc. 65. Epid. IV 1, 24. Rud. 1152.

692. The simile is easily understood. Comp. Pseud. 1232 and Truc. IV 3, 45 (=807 Geppert) where the word comitia is used in a similar way. See also v. 541.—meo should be pronounced as one syllable.

693. Ἔφη Ἀριστέης ... ὑπὲρ Ἀριμασπῶν ... οἰκεῖν τοὺς χρυσοφύλακας γρῦπας Her. IV 13, who mentions the same γρῦπας III 116 and IV 27. According to Nonius (152, 10) we should here recognise a translation of this Greek or rather Oriental (Preller, griech. Myth. 1, 158 first ed.) fable; but as the picus (i. e. the woodpecker) holds a marked position in old Italian mythology, and was believed to know of hidden treasures (Preller, Röm. Myth. p. 298), we are rather inclined to think that Plautus mixed the Greek grypes and the tales told of their golden treasures with the common eos sólus supero. nám istos reges céteros 695 memoráre nolo, hóminum mendicábula.

ego sum ílle rex Philíppus. o lepidúm diem.
nam ut dúdum hinc abii, múlto illo advení prior, multóque prius me cónlocavi in árborem, indeque óbservabam, ubi aúrum abstrudebát senex.
700 ubi ille ábiit, ego me deórsum duco de árbore:
exfódio aulam auri plénam. inde exeo. ílico

beliefs current among his own countrymen with regard to the woodpecker. The aurei montes of the pici appear only in this one passage. I may venture to draw the attention of my readers to another passage in Plautus, without myself deducing any hasty conclusion from it: Stich. 24 Persarum montis qui esse aurei perhibentur, a passage which may be compared with some lines from Varro's satire Ἀνθρωπουργία (p. 264 ed. Bip.) Persarum montes, non divitis atria Crassi.—For the form of attraction noticeable in the present line, comp. note on v. 566, and cf. also Ter. Eun. IV 3, 11 Eunuchum quem dedisti nobis, quas turbas dedit.—colunt 'inhabit:' see on v. 4.

694. The joy in which Strobilus is makes his words somewhat incoherent. He says reges ceteros, though he has not yet mentioned the name of any king whose wealth might be compared to his. This has already been pointed out by Lambinus.—We may not think here of king Picus (Preller, Röm. Myth. p. 331 ss.) because we have Pici in the plural.—istos 'those commonly admired.'

695. Nonius is undoubtedly wrong in using the word mendicatio for the explanation of mendicabulum: the passage itself shows that we should translate 'beggarly fellows.' Appuleius has the same expression in two passages, and in both he applies it to persons.—For the hiatus see Introd. p. 67. The emendation regum mendicabula ('beggarly kinglets'), which is found in Guyet's text, seems due to Scipio Gentilis (whoever that worthy may have been), as appears from Taubmann's note.

696. ille 'the renowned.' See note on v. 86.

698. The construction conlocare in aliquid is not classic, though by no means scarce. See the dictionaries s. v. Men. 986 in tabernam vasa et servos conlocavi. Plautus has also ponere in aliquid, e. g. Trin. 739. Rud. IV 7, 11.

699. For indeque see Introd. p. 48.

700. In deorsum the e is to be elided before the o: see Introd. p. 65.

701. The form exfodio occurs again in the best mss. in Mil. gl. 315. The common Plautine form is ecfodio (v. 63). EXFOCIONT (i. e. exfugiunt) occurs in the inscription on the so-called 'columna rostrata.' Comp. ex- videó recipere sé senem: ille me haú videt.

nam ego déclinavi paúlulum me extrá viam.
atát, eccum ipsum. íbo ut hoc condám domum.

EVCLIO. IV 9

perii ínterii occidi! quó curram? quo nón curram? tene téne: quem quis?
nesció, nil video: caécus eo atque equidém quo eam aut ubi sim aút qui sim, nequeó cum animo certum ínvestigare. óbsecro vos ego mi aúxilio oro óbtestor, sitís et hominem demónstretis, qui eam ábstulerit.
quid aís tu? tibi credére certumst: nam essé bonum e voltu cógnosco.
quid est quód ridetis? novi omnis: scio fúres esse hic cómpluris ducier (BC) Truc. v 5, 16, exmigrasti (B) Men. 822.

704. 'Atat pro poëtae lubitu variat suum tonum: nunc áttat, nunc atáttat, nunc atát: quod postremum hoc loco placet.' Bentley on Ter. Andr. I 1, 98. The hiatus is justified by the punctuation.

705 ss. Molière's masterly imitation of this scene should be compared with Plautus, though it is difficult to decide which deserves the preference, the original or the imitation.—For occidĭ see Introd. p. 27. This quantity would not however occur in iambics or trochaics. Comp. perdidĭ v. 716. —For tenĕ tenĕ see Introd. p. 26.

706. For the hiatus quo e— see Introd. p. 69.

707. With the expression cum animo investigare comp. Plaut. Most. 702 cogito cum meo animo.

709. One of the French translators of Plautus thinks it 'une malice très-fine' that Euclio is made to address the spectators as if the thief were among them. Tastes may of course differ on such points as this; but it is difficult to believe that a modern audience would patiently submit to be called thieves by an actor. But the broad humour which reigns in the Plautine plays could safely venture to do this, especially as the poet might be certain that the bulk of his audience did not consist of a select company of refined taste, but of a boisterous, noisy, and disorderly multitude. See the prologue to the Poenulus.

qui véstitu et creta óccultant sese átque sedent quasi sínt frugi. 6 hem, némon habet horum? óccidisti: díc igitur quis habét. nescis? 9 heu mé misere miserúm: perii: male pérditus pessume ornátus eo: 10 tantúm gemiti et malae maéstitiae hic dies mi óptulit et famem et paúperiem:
715 * perditissumus ego sum omnium ín terra: nam quíd mihi opust vitá qui perdidi tántum auri quod sédulo concustódivi: nunc égomet me de-fraúdavi animúmque meum geniúmque meum: nunc érgo alii laetíficantur 15

711. vestitu et creta=vestitu cretato (ἐν διὰ δυοῖν). There is here an allusion to the more elegant dress of wealthy citizens; it was common to cleanse a white toga with chalk, comp. Poen. 958; Plin. N. H. xxxv 17, 196 sq. We should also observe the words atque sedent. In Plautus' time ordinary spectators used to stand, and only 'gentlemen' of rank and wealth had their chairs brought into the theatre: see Ritschl, Par. 218 and xx. Mommsen, Röm. Gesch. 1^2 864. See Boltenstern de rebus scaen. rom. (Stralsund, 1875) p. 26 sq. For frugi see note on v. 579.

713. For ŏrnatus see Introd. p. 56 sq. ornare has here a more general sense 'badly furnished,' i. e. 'I'm in a sorry plight' (Hildy). Comp. a similar passage in Ter. Ad. II 1, 22 ornatus esses ex tuis virtutibus 'thou shouldst be dealt with according to thy merits.' See also Capt. v 3, 19, incedit huc ornatus haud ex suis virtutibus.

714. For gemiti see note on 83. malae should be considered as two short syllables: see Introd. p. 23. dies forms only one syllable, by way of synizesis, and the syllables fam' et pau form together an anapaest, et being pronounced as a mere e.

718. genium: comp. Ter. Phorm. I 1, 10 suom defrudans genium. Lucilius used the same expression, as we learn from Nonius p. 117, 31. The contrary is genio multa bona facere Persa 263.—laetificare occurs even in Cicero, de nat. deor. II 40, 102 sol...terram laetificat. Comp. the analogous formations magnificare (Men. 371. Rud. I 2, 43. Ter. Hec. II 2, 18), turpificare (Cic. de off. III 19), pacificare (Liv. Sall. Catullus), and the deponent causificor 748.

meo málo et damno: pati néqueo.

LYCONIDES. EVCLIO. IV 9 17

LY. quínam homo hic ante aédis nostras éiulans conquéritur maerens?
átque hic quidemst, ut opínor, Euclio. óppido ego interií: palamst res.
scít peperisse iam, út ego opinor, fíliam suam. núnc mi incertumst, ábeam an maneam, ádeam an fugiam—quíd ego agam, edepol néscio.
EV. quís homo hic loquitur? LY. égo sum miser.
EV. immo égo sum et miser et pérditus, IV. 10 quoí tanta mala maéstitudoque óptigit. LY. animó bono's.
EV. quo, óbsecro, pacto ésse possum? LY. quía istuc facinus quód tuom sóllicitat animum, íd ego feci et fáteor. EV. quid ego ex te aúdio?
LY. íd quod verumst. EV. quíd ego de te cónmerui, adulescéns, mali, quam óbrem ita faceres méque meosque pérditum ires líberos?
LY. déus impulsor míhi fuit: is me ád illam inlexit. EV. quó modo?
LY. fáteor me peccávisse et me cúlpam commeritúm scio:

719. For pati see Introd. p. 27.

720. The word eiulans describes Euclio's passionate and effeminate wailing. Comp. Hor. Epod. 10. 17 et illa non virilis eiulatio and Cic. Tusc. II 23, 55 ingemescere non numquam viro concessum est idque raro, eiulatus ne mulieri quidem.

728. Comp. Men. 490 quid de te merui qua me causa perderes?

730. Throughout the following passage the joke consists in the regular misunderstanding of the fem. pronouns, which Euclio refers to his aula, while Lyconides conceives him to be speaking of his daughter.—For fuit see Introd. p. 16.

731. The expression culpam

íd adeo te orátum advenio, ut ánimo aequo ignoscás mihi.
Ev. cúr id ausu's fácere, ut id quod nón tuom esset tángeres?
Ly. quíd vis fieri? fáctumst illud: fíeri infectum nón potest.
deós credo voluísse. nam ni véllent, non fierét, scio.
Ev. át ego deos credó voluisse, ut ápud me te in nervo énicem.
Ly. né istuc dixis. Ev. quíd tibi ergo meám me invito táctiost?
Ly. quía vini vitio átque amoris féci. Ev. homo audacíssume, cum ístacin te orátione huc ád me adire ausum, ímpudens.
nám si istuc ius sít, ut tu istuc éxcusare póssies, conmeritum justifies Brix's correction of v. 728. Comp. Capt. II 3, 43 (=400). Ter. Phorm. I 4, 29.

733. tangere is very frequently used in the sense of corrumpere filiam, e. g. Hor. Serm. I 2, 54 matronam nullam ego tango. Thus we have tactio v. 737 with the same ambiguity. Comp. a similar passage Pseud. 120 and 121 and the examples given by Westerhov on Ter. Eun. II 3, 81.

734. factum infectum fieri non potest is a principle of common sense, and was therefore received among the maxims of Roman law. Comp. Tryphonius l. 12 § 2 D. de captivis (49, 15) facti causae infactae nulla constitutione fieri possunt. Pomponius l. 2 D. de rescind. vend. (18, 5) potest, dum res integra est, conventione nostra infecta fieri emtio...post pretium solutum infectam emtionem facere non possumus. We have the same phrase Ter. Phorm. V 9, 44 s. and Plaut. Truc. IV 2, 17.

736. 'Nervum adpellamus ferreum vinculum quo pedes impediuntur.' Festus. Comp. Curc. V 3, 11. The instrument was about the same as the 'stocks' formerly in use in England.

738. Comp. Ter. Ad. III 4, 24 persuasit nox amor vinum adulescentia, where Westerhov quotes Ovid, Amor. I 6, 59 nox et amor vinumque nihil moderabile suadent. See 788.

740. Compare Merc. V 4, 24 s. (=985 R.) nam si istuc ius sit, senecta aetate scortari patres, Vbi loci siet res summa puplica? where all the mss. and old editions give est, but Ritschl justly writes sit.

lúci claro déripiamus aúrum matronís palam :
póstid, si *de*prénsi simus, éxcusemus ébrios nós fecisse, amóris causa. nímis vilest vinum átque amor, si ébrio atque amánti impune fácere quod lubeát licet.
LY. quín tibi ultro súpplicatum vénio ob stultitiám meam.
EV. nón mi homines placént qui quando mále fecerunt púrigant.
tu íllam scibas nón tuam esse: nón attactam opórtuit.

741. In this line we are indebted to Nonius for preserving the genuine phrase luci claro, which is generally obliterated in our mss. Comp. Ter. Ad. v 3, 55 cum primo luci, where the Bembinus has primo lucu, while prima luce is found in recent mss. (see Bentley's note): Donatus, whose notes are here interpolated, has however a genuine remark on this passage veteres masculino genere dicebant lucem.—Plaut. Cist. II 1, 48 B gives quom primo luci and the mss. of Nonius give the same phrase in a line of Atta 468, 32 = Ribb. Com. p. 138. But in Cic. de off. III 31, 112 all the mss. give cum prima luce.—In a fable of Ennius rendered in prose by Gellius II 29 (Enn. ed. Vahlen p. 160) we have primo luce, which is the reading of the cod. Reg. of Gronovius, recent mss. having prima luce.—The phrase luci claro is quoted from Varro's Synephebus by Nonius 210; see Varro, Bip. ed. p. 309.—In general comp. Charisius p. 203 ed. Keil. luci (e.g. Men. 1006) should be considered as an adverb like mani heri (mane here); see Key, L. G. § 784. It shows clearly that these adverbs are originally ablatives, being construed with adj. and prepositions. Comp., moreover, the phrase cum primo mane in the Bell. Afr. c. 62. cum luci simul Stich. 364.

743. 'Love and wine are indeed extremely cheap things, if a drunken hot-brained youth be allowed to do anything without fear of punishment.' This is the plain sense of the passage, though it was not understood by Lambinus and the other commentators. Heinsius even conjectured nimis utile, which is against the metre.

747. For the construction comp. Ter. Haut. tim. II 3, 6 non oportuit relictas, IV 1, 22 interemptam oportuit 'you should have killed her.' Amph. II 2, 108 comprecatam oportuit. In such phrases Plautus commonly omits esse: see Mil. gl. 1336. Cist. II 3, 41. Truc. II 6, 29. Stich. 354.

LY. érgo quia sum tángere ausus, haúd causificor quín eam égo habeam potíssumum. EV. tun hábeas me invitó meam?
LY. haú te invito póstulo: sed méam esse oportere árbitror.
quín tu iam inveniés, inquam, illam méam esse oportere, Eúclio.
EV. nísi refers. LY. quid tíbi ego referam? EV. quód subrupuistí meum.
iám quidem hercle te ád praetorem rápiam et tibi scribám dicam.
LY. súbrupui ego tuom? únde? aut quid id est? EV. íta te amabit Iúppiter, út tu nescis. LY. nísi quidem tu míhi quid quaeras díxeris.
EV. aúlam auri, inquam, té reposco, quám tu confessú's mihi te ábstulisse. LY. néque edepol ego díxi neque fecí. EV. negas?
LY. pérnego immo. nám neque ego aurum néque istaec aula quaé siet, scío nec novi. EV. illam éx Silvani lúco quam abstulerás, cedo.
í, refer: dimídiam tecum pótius partem dívidam.
tam étsi fur mihi és, molestus nón ero: i veró, refer.

750. oportere: according to the laws of Athens. See 786 and Ter. Andr. IV 4, 41. Ad. III 4, 44. Phorm. II 3, 68 ss.

752. Euclio speaks ironically 'Of course you will be legitimate possessor, unless you restore the object.' Thus we need not transpose the lines 752 and 753, as Acidalius was inclined to do.

753. Comp. Hor. Serm. I 9, 77 rapit in ius. Plautus Persa 745 s. Do. quid me in ius vocas? Sa. illi apud praetorem dicam, sed ego in ius voco.—scribam dicam: γράψομαι δίκην. Comp. Ter. Phorm. I 2, 77. II 2, 15. IV 3, 63. Plaut. Poen. III 6, 5 has subscribam dicam.

758. immo: 'I don't only deny it, but I obstinately deny it.' The only other passage where immo stands in the second place is Capt. II 2, 104.

759. For neque scio nec novi see n. on v. 190.

LY. sánus tu non és qui furem mé voces. ego te, Eúclio, dé alia re réscivisse censuí, quod ad me áttinet.
námst res, quam ego tecum ótiose, si ótiumst, cupió loqui.
765 EV. díc bona fidé, tu id aurum nón subrupuistí? LY. bona.
EV. néque scis quis id abstúlerit? LY. istuc quóque bona. EV. atqui sí scies, quís id abstulerit, mi índicabis? LY. faciam. EV. neque partém tibi áb eo quoi sit índipisces, neque furem excipiés? LY. ita.
EV. quíd si fallis? LY. túm me faciat quód volt magnus Iúppiter.

763. For the hiatus dé a— see Introd. p. 69.

ib. quod should not be altered, though the construction is somewhat loose and not in accordance with strict grammar. Comp. Amph. II 3, 11 ego rem divinam intus faciam, vota quae sunt. Men. 120 omnem rem, quicquid agi.

765. Hare compares Capt. IV 2, 110 dic bonan fide tu mi istaec verba dixisti? : : bona. In the present passage bona means 'I tell you true that your question would also be my answer' = bona fide dico me aurum non subrupuisse.' Comp. the next line where we should understand istuc quoque bona (fide dico me nescire).

768. The active form of the verb indipisces occurs here and Asin. II 2, 13, the deponent Trin. 224. Rud. V 2, 28. Epid. III 4, 15: see Brix on Trin. 224. In later writers we generally find adipiscor, though indipiscor occurs in Lucretius, Livy, Gellius and Appuleius.—furem excipere = f. recipere. Gronovius compares Cic. de imp. Cn. Pomp. 9, 23 hunc in illa fuga Tigranes rex excepit.—ita 'yes:' comp. Ter. Andr. V 2, 8. Key, L. G. § 1451 c. It is properly a curtailed sentence: ita aio.

769. The present fallis is here given by all our mss. Comp. however Amph. I 1, 235, So. quid si falles? ME. tum Mercurius Sosiae iratus siet. But in another passage we have the present, Amph. III 2, 52 id ego si fallo, tum te, summe Iuppiter, Quaeso Amphitruoni ut semper iratus sies. In this passage fallo means falsum dico ('to deceive'), and the same sense would explain the present line.—For the construction me faciat (abl.) see Key, L. G. § 1003.

Ev. sát habeo. age nunc, lóquere, quid vis. Ly. sí me novistí minus, génere quo sim gnátus, hic mihi ést Megadorus aúnculus.
méus fuit pater hínc Antimachus, égo vocor Lycónides:
máter est Eunómia. Ev. novi génus. nunc quid vis? íd volo nóscere. Ly. filiam éx te tu habes? Ev. ímmo eccillam meaé domi.
Ly. eám tu despondísti, opinor, Mégadoro. Ev. omnem rém tenes.
Ly. ís me nunc renúntiare répudium iussít tibi.
Ev. répudium rebús paratis, éxornatis núptiis?
út illum di inmortáles omnes deaéque quantumst pérduint, quém propter hodie aúri tantum pérdidi infelíx, miser.
Ly. bóno animo es, benedíce: nunc quae rés tibi et gnataé tuae béne felicitérque vortat: íta di faxint, ínquito.
Ev. íta di faciant. Ly. ét mihi ita di fáciant. audi núnciam.
quí homo culpam admísit in se, núllust tam parví preti,

770. Antiqui pro 'sufficit' 'sat habeo' dicebant. Donatus on Ter. Andr. II 1, 35. Westerhov in his note gives the following examples: Andr. IV 2, 22. Eun. II 2, 32. Haut. tim. IV 3, 70. Plaut. Most. III 1, 125.—For quid vis (=quid velis) see note on v. 63. It would also be possible to write loquere: quid vis?

771. For qui see Key, L. G. § 312.—For aúnculus see introductory note on the prologue.

776. repudium renuntiare 'vel remittere est cum desponsa pactaque futurum matrimonium dirimere.' Gronov. Comp. the commentators on Ter. Phorm. IV 3, 72 and V 7, 35.

778. Comp. Pseud. 37 at te di deaeque, quantumst : : servassint quidem.—For perduint see 664.

781. See v. 147.

783. For the hiatus quí ho— see Introd. p. 69. Translate: 'There is no evil-doer so bad quóm pudeat, quin púriget se. núnc te optestor, Eúclio, út si quid ego ergá te imprudens péccavi aut gnatám tuam, út mi ignoscas, eámque uxorem míhi des, ut legés iubent.

égo me iniuriám fecisse fíliae fateór tuae Céreris vigiliís, per vinum atque ímpulsu adulescéntiae.
Ev. eí mihi, quod ego fácinus ex te*d* aúdio. Ly. cur éiulas?
quém ego avom fecí iam ut esses fíliai núptiis.
nám tua gnata péperit decumo ménse post: numerúm cape.
eá re repudiúm remisit aúnculus causá mea.
í intro, exquaere, sítne ita ut ego praédico. Ev. perii óppido.
íta mihi ad malúm malae res plúrumae se adglútinant.

that, in case he should feel a sense of shame, he would not excuse himself.'

785. erga of unfriendly doing is very rare. See Key, L. G. § 1334 c. peccare in aliquem is the phrase used by Ter. Ad. IV 7, 7.

790. For the construction avom feci ut esses see note on v. 440.

791. Gellius has a whole chapter on the question πόσος ὁ τῆς τῶν ἀνθρώπων κυήσεως χρόνος III 16 where he says multa opinio est eaque iam pro vero recepta, postquam mulieris uterus conceperit semen, gigni hominem septimo rarenter, numquam octavo, saepe nono, saepius numero decimo mense. In the comic writers we generally find therefore the tenth month: see Westerhov on Ter. Ad. III 4, 29. The ten months are of course lunar months. So also Verg. Ecl. IV 61 matri longa decem tulerunt fastidia menses.

793. In intro the first syllable is shortened, see note on 448; we should therefore pronounce ĭ ĭntro (for the hiatus see Introd. p. 69), not ī ĭntro (compare Ritschl's and Fleckeisen's editions with regard to Stich. 396).—The form exquaere is here given by Priscian and the later mss., comp. Stich. 107 where all our mss. give exquaesitum, and Capt. II 2, 43 exquaesivero. Comp. also Merc. 633 requaereres, 795 íbo intro, ut quid huíus ver*um* sít sciam. LY. iam té sequor.

haec própemodum iam esse ín vado salútis res vidétur.
nunc sérvom esse ubi dicám meum Strobílum, non repério.
nisi étiam hic opperiár tamen paulísper, postea íntro hunc súbsequar. nunc ínterim spatium eí dabo exquiréndi 800 meum fáctum ex gnatae pédisequa nutríce anu : ea rem nóvit.

STROBILVS. LYCONIDES. V. 1

STR. di ínmortales, quíbus et quantis mé donatis gaúdiis.
quádrilibrem aulam onústam auro habeo : quís mest hominum dítior ?
quís me Athenis núnc magis quisquamst hómo quoi di sint própitii ?
LY. cérto enim ego vocem híc loquentis módo m*i* audire vísus sum. STR. hem, 795. For the expression quid huius sit see Ter. Eun. IV 3, 10. IV 7, 34. Haut. tim. II 2, 8. IV 4, 21.

796. in vado salutis 'in the haven of safety.' Comp. Ter. Andr. V 2, 4 omnis res est iam in vado, on which passage Donatus observes 'proverbiale, in vado, in tuto, in securitate. nam ut in profundo periculum est, ita in vado securitas est.'

801. The phrase donare gaudiis has its parallels in the expressions donare salute (Tibull.) and donare honoribus (Stat.).

802. For the transposition onustam auro comp. 603 and 609.

803. As far as the pleonastic construction is concerned, Brix justly compares Most. 256 vah, quid illa pote peius quicquam muliere memorarier ? as the line should be read according to the mss.

804. Comp. Ter. Eun. III 2, 1 audire vocem visa sum modo militis. Plaut. Cist. II 3, 1 audire vocem visa sum ante aedis modo. For the construction comp. Mil. gl. 389 arguere in ÉRumne ego aspició meum ?

LY. vídeo ego hunc servóm meum ?
STR. ípsus est. LY. haud álius est. STR. congrédiar. LY. contollám gradum.
crédo ego illum, út iussi, eampse adisse anum, huíus nutricem vírginis.
STR. quín ego illi me ínvenisse dícam hanc praedam atque éloquar.
* * * * * * *
ígitur orabo, út manu me emíttat: ibo atque éloquar.
répperi ... LY. quid répperisti? STR. nón quod pueri clámitant ín faba se répperisse. LY. iámne autem, ut solés, deludis ?
STR. ére, mane, eloquár: iam ausculta. LY. age érgo, loquere. STR. répperi hodie, ére, divitias nímias. LY. ubinam? STR. quádrilibrem, inquam, aulam aúri plenam.
LY. quód ego facinus aúdio ex te? STR. Eúclioni huic séni subrupui.
LY. úbi id est aurum? STR. in árca apud me. núnc volo me emittí manu.

somnis me meus mihi familiaris visust.

806. For ipsus see note on v. 354.

810. The right explanation of this passage was first given by Lambinus. Gronovius explains it as follows 'servus significans non parvam rem neque levem repperisse se, negat inventum sibi nihil maius quam quod pueri clamitant se repperisse in faba, nempe vermiculum quem Midam vocant: eum enim pueri in fabis quaerere solebant, quique inveniebat inde exultare ac velut triumphum agere.' He compares Curc. 586 in tritico facillume vel quingentos curculiones pro uno faxo reperies.

811. Comp. Bacch. 203 iamne ut soles, and Poen. v 7, 39 where Spengel ('T. Maccius Plautus,' p. 16) justly introduces the same phrase, as Acidalius had done before in Truc. III 2, 27 (=683 G.).

814. For the hiatus see Introd. p. 67.—The i in seni is shortened: see Introd. p. 23.

LY. égone te emittám manu, scélerum cumulatíssume?
STR. ábi, ere; scio quam rém geras:
lépide hercle animum tuóm temptavi: iám ut eriperes, ádparabas:
quíd faceres, si répperissem? LY. nón potes pro-básse nugas.
820 í, redde aurum. STR. réddam ego aurum? LY. rédde, ut huic reddátur. STR. unde? 20 LY. quód modo fassu's ésse in arca. STR. sóleo hercle ego garríre nugas.
íta loquor. * * * *
LY. át scin quo modó? STR. vel hercle me énica:
numquam hínc feres á me * * * *
LY. ut ádmemordi hominem .....
* * * * *

816. For the genitive scelerum see Key, L. G. §§ 931, 941. Caecilius has ineptitudinis cumulatus v. 61 (p. 37 Ribb.).

817. abi 'varium habet usum, estque vel formula laudandi, ut Ad. IV 2, 25 abi, virum te iudico [Eun. I 2, 74. Plaut. Asin. III 3, 114], vel contemnendi, uti Ad. II 2, 12. Eun. IV 3, 9.' Westerhov on Ad. II 2, 12. This expression is quite equivalent to the English 'get off.'

818. lepide 'cunningly,' v. 493.—For the hiatus iám ut see Introd. p. 69.

819. For the perfect infinitive probasse see Key, L. G. § 1256.

822. Comp. Amph. IV 2, 1. AM. ego sum. ME. quid, ego sum? AM. ita loquor.

823. vel is in the comic writers frequently employed to enforce an imperative; comp. Ter. Phorm. 140 sqq. And. 679 sq. Pl. Rud. 549 sq. 1401. Bacch. 902. Pseud. 120.

824. The perfect memordi occurs also in Laberius (28 and 50) and Atta (6). In Poen. V 2, 114 (=1062) Geppert has justly edited memordit on the authority of the mss. BC, while former editions give momordit. Cf. also Schuchardt on Vulgar Latin II 212.

ACTVS V.

* * * * *

825 Ev. néc noctu nec diú quietus úmquam *e*ram:
nunc dórmiam

* * * * *

ego écfodiebam ín die denós scrobes.

* * * * *

Ly. qui mi hólera cruda pónunt, etiam alléc duint.

* * * * *

825. These words were probably spoken by Euclio after he had bestowed his treasure upon his son-in-law (see Arg. II 9) and had thus divested himself of all future cares. Now he hopes to sleep quietly, while formerly he had no rest by day or night—very much like Mozart's Leporello!

826. This may possibly have been a proverbial expression denoting a care-worn and anxious life. If so, it would likewise seem to have occurred in that speech of Euclio's to which we have ascribed the preceding fragment.

827. Lyconides receives Euclio's daughter (holera cruda) and the dowry (allec, properly 'the sauce'). This is, however, a mere guess.

METRA HVIVS FABVLAE HAEC SVNT

v. 1 ad 119 iambici senarii
— 120 ad 125 bacchiaci tetrametri acatalecti
— 126 bacchiacus dimeter acatalectus
— 127 ad 134 bacchiaci tetrametri acatalecti
— 135 ad 137 iambici octonarii
— 138 trochaica tripodia catalectica
— 139 trochaicus septenarius
— 140 trochaica tripodia catalectica
— 141 bacchiacus tetrameter acatalectus
— 142 creticus tetrameter acatalectus
— 143 iambica tripodia catalectica
— 144 anapaesticus dimeter acatalectus
— 145 et 146 bacchiaci tetrametri acatalecti
— 147 ad 150 anapaestici dimetri acatalecti
— 151 iambicus dimeter acatalectus cum iambica tripodia catalectica
— 152 A anapaesticus dimeter acatalectus
— 152 B iambica tripodia catalectica
— 153 iambicus dimeter acatalectus cum iambica tripodia catalectica
— 154 A anapaesticus dimeter acatalectus
— 154 B iambica tetrapodia catalectica
— 155 ad 157 iambicus dimeter acatalectus cum iambica tripodia catalectica
— 159 ad 277 trochaici septenarii
— 278 ad 402 iambici senarii
— 403 ad 407 trochaici octonarii
— 408 ad 411 iambici octonarii
— 412 ad 442 iambici dimetri acatalecti cum iambicis tripodiis catalecticis
— 443 versus corruptus, ut videtur
— 444 ad 470 trochaici septenarii

— 471 ad 578 iambici senarii
— 579 ad 652 trochaici septenarii
— 653 ad 704 iambici senarii
— 705 ad 714 anapaestici octonarii
— 715 versus corruptus, ut videtur
— 716 ad 718 anapaestici octonarii
— 719 anapaesticus dimeter catalecticus
— 720 ad 722 trochaici octonarii
— 723 ad 795 trochaici septenarii
— 796 ad 800 iambici septenarii
— 801 ad 804 trochaici septenarii
— 805 A et 805 B trochaicae tetrapodiae catalecticae
— 806 ad 810 trochaici septenarii
— 811 ad 814 trochaici octonarii
— 815 trochaicus septenarius
— 816 ad 817 trochaicae tetrapodiae catalecticae
— 818 ad 821 trochaici octonarii
— 822 A versus trochaicus mutilus — 822 B trochaicus septenarius — 823 versus trochaicus mutilus
— 824 versus iambicus mutilus
— 825 trochaicus septenarius
— 826 aut iambicus senarius aut (versus initio deperdito) trochaicus septenarius
— 827 iambicus senarius

ADDENDA

Note on v. 353. Quintilian I 7, 9 derives abstemius from abstinentia temeti.

Note on v. 419. Even Cicero says magis malle Tusc. I 31, 76. Constructions of this kind occur also in Appuleius.

Note on v. 443. Pipulus occurs also in Fronto, ep. ad Anton. imp. 1, 3.

Note on v. 451. For fissum comp. also Cic. de n. deor. III 6, 14. de divin. II 13, 32. 14, 34.

Note on v. 505. Patagiarius occurs also Doni Inscript. cl. No. 78.

Note on v. 529 read λόγον instead of λόγους, and comp. also Theophrast., Char. 8 δοκῶ μοί σε εὐωχήσειν καινῶν λόγων.

CAMBRIDGE: PRINTED BY J. & C. F. CLAY, AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

MESSRS. BELL'S

Abridged Educational Catalogue

 Messrs. Bell's Complete Educational Catalogue may be had on application.

LATIN AND GREEK

Bell's Illustrated Classics

Edited by E. C. MARCHANT, M.A.

ELEMENTARY SERIES

Edited with Introductions, Notes and Vocabularies. Pott 8vo. With numerous illustrations, maps, and plans, 1s. 6d. each: except the GREEK PLAYS, which are 2s. each.

 The volumes may also be had without Vocabularies.

Caesar. Book I. By A. C. LIDDELL, M.A.
—— Book II. By A. C. LIDDELL, M.A.
—— Book III. By F. H. COLSON, M.A., and G. M. GWYTHER, M.A.
—— Book IV. By Rev. A. W. UPCOTT, M.A.
—— Book V. By A. REYNOLDS, M.A.
—— Book VI. By J. T. PHILLIPSON, M.A.
Cicero. Speeches against Catiline. I. and II. (1 vol.). By F. HERRING, M.A.
—— Selections. By J. F. CHARLES, B.A.
—— De Amicitia. By H. J. L. J. MASSÉ, M.A.
—— De Senectute. By A. S. WARMAN, B.A.
Cornelius Nepos. Epaminondas, Hannibal, Cato. By H. L. EARL, M.A.
Eutropius. Books I. and II. (1 vol.). By J. G. SPENCER, B.A.
Horace: Odes. Book I. By C. G. BOTTING, B.A.
—— Book II. By C. G. BOTTING, B.A. [Preparing
—— Book III. By H. LATTER, M.A.
—— Book IV. By H. LATTER, M.A.
Livy. Book IX., cc. i-xix. By W. C. FLAMSTEAD WALTERS, M.A.
—— Hannibal's First Campaign in Italy. (Selected from Book XXI.) By F. E. A. TRAYES, M.A.
Ovid: Metamorphoses. Book I. By G. H. WELLS, M.A.
—— Selection from the Metamorphoses. By J. W. E. PEARCE, M.A.
—— Elegiac Selections. By F. COVERLEY SMITH, B.A.
—— Tristia. Book III. By H. R. WOOLRYCH, M.A.
Phaedrus: A Selection. By Rev. R. H. CHAMBERS, M.A.
Stories of Great Men. By Rev. F. CONWAY, M.A.
Vergil: Aeneid. Book I. By Rev. E. H. S. ESCOTT, M.A.
—— Book II. By L. D. WAINWRIGHT, M.A.
—— Book III. By L. D. WAINWRIGHT, M.A.
—— Book IV. By A. S. WARMAN, B.A.
—— Book V. By J. T. PHILLIPSON, M.A. [Preparing
—— Book VI. By J. T. PHILLIPSON, M.A.
—— Selection from Books VII. to XII. By W. G. COAST, B.A.
Xenophon: Anabasis. Book I. By E. C. MARCHANT, M.A.
—— Book II. By E. C. MARCHANT, M.A.

GREEK PLAYS. (2s. each.)

Aeschylus: Prometheus Vinctus. By C. E. LAURENCE, M.A.
Euripides: Alcestis. By E. H. BLAKENEY, M.A.
—— Bacchae. By G. M. GWYTHER, M.A.
—— Hecuba. By Rev. A. W. UPCOTT, M.A.
—— Medea. By Rev. T. NICKLIN, M.A.

INTERMEDIATE SERIES

Edited for higher forms, without Vocabularies. Crown 8vo. With illustrations and maps.

Caesar: Seventh Campaign in Gaul, B.C. 52. De Bello Gallico. Lib. VII. Edited, with Notes, Excursus, and Tables of Idioms, by the Rev. W. COOKWORTHY COMPTON, M.A. 2s. 6d. net.
Livy. Book XXI. Edited by F. E. A. TRAYES, M.A. 2s. 6d. net.
Tacitus: Agricola. Edited by J. W. E. PEARCE, M.A. 2s.
Sophocles: Antigone. Edited by G. H. WELLS, M.A. 3s. 6d.
Homer: Odyssey. Book I. Edited by E. C. MARCHANT, M.A. 2s.
The Athenians in Sicily. Being portions of Thucydides, Books VI. and VII. Edited by the Rev. W. COOKWORTHY COMPTON, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Public School Series of Classical Authors

Aristophanes: The Peace. By F. A. PALEY, M.A., LL.D. 2s. 6d.
—— The Acharnians. By F. A. PALEY, M.A., LL.D. 2s. 6d.
—— The Frogs. By F. A. PALEY, M.A., LL.D. 2s. 6d.
—— The Plutus. By M. T. QUINN, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Cicero: The Letters of Cicero to Atticus. Book I. By A. Pretor, M.A. 2s. 6d.

Demosthenes: De Falsa Legatione. By the late R. Shilleto, M.A. 6s.

Livy. Book VI. Edited by E. S. Weymouth, M.A., and G. F. Hamilton, B.A. 2s. 6d.

Plato: The Protagoras. By W. Wayte, M.A. 4s. 6d.

—— The Apology of Socrates and Crito. By W. Wagner, Ph.D. 2s. 6d.

—— The Phaedo. By W. Wagner, Ph.D. 5s. 6d.

—— The Gorgias. By the late W. H. Thompson, D.D. 6s.

—— The Euthyphro. By G. H. Wells, M.A. 3s.

—— The Euthydemus. Edited by G. H. Wells, M.A. 4s.

—— The Republic. Books I. and II. Edited by G. H. Wells, M.A. 5s.

Plautus: Menaechmei. By Wilhelm Wagner, Ph.D. 4s. 6d.

—— Trinummus. By W. Wagner, Ph.D. 4s. 6d.

—— Aulularia. By W. Wagner, Ph.D. 4s. 6d.

—— The Mostellaria. By E. A. Sonnenschein, M.A. 5s.

Terence. By W. Wagner, Ph.D. 7s. 6d.

Grammar School Classics

Catullus, Tibullus, and Propertius. Selected Poems. By the Rev. A. H. Wratislaw and F. N. Sutton, B.A. 2s. 6d.

Horace. By A. J. Macleane, M.A. 3s. 6d. Or, Part I., Odes, 2s.; Part II., Satires and Epistles, 2s.

Juvenal. Sixteen Satires (expurgated). By Herman Prior, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Martial. Select Epigrams. By F. A. Paley, M.A., LL.D., and the late W. H. Stone. 4s. 6d.

Ovid. The Six Books of the Fasti. By F. A. Paley, M.A., LL.D. 3s. 6d. Or Book I. and II., 1s. 6d., Books III. and IV., 1s. 6d., Books V. and VI., 1s. 6d.

Sallust: Catilina and Jugurtha. By G. Long, M.A., and J. G. Frazer, M.A. 3s. 6d. Or separately, 2s. each.

Tacitus: Germania and Agricola. By P. Frost, M.A. 2s. 6d.

Virgil: Bucolics, Georgics, and Aeneid. Books I.-IV. By J. G. Sheppard, D.C.L. Abridged from Professor Conington's Edition. 4s. 6d.

—— Aeneid, Books V.-XII. Abridged from Professor Conington's Edition, by H. Nettleship, and W. Wagner, Ph.D. 4s. 6d. Or in 9 separate volumes, price 1s. 6d. each.

Xenophon: The Anabasis. With Life, Itinerary, Index, and Three Maps. By the late J. F. Macmichael. 3s. 6d. Or in 4 separate volumes, price 1s. 6d. each.

Xenophon: The Cyropaedia. By G. M. Gorham, M.A. 3s. 6d. Books I. and II., 1s. 6d. Books V. and VI., 1s. 6d.

—— The Memorabilia. By P. Frost, M.A. 3s.

Cambridge Texts with Notes

Price 1s. 6d. each, with exceptions.

Aeschylus. 6 Vols. Prometheus Vinctus —Septem contra Thebas—Agamemnon—Persae — Eumenides — Choephoroe. By F. A. Paley, M.A., LL.D.

Euripides. 13 Vols. Alcestis—Medea—Hippolytus — Hecuba — Bacchae — Ion (2s.) —Orestes—Phoenissae—Troades—Hercules Furens—Andromache—Iphigenia in Tauris —Supplices. By F. A. Paley, M.A., LL.D.

Sophocles. 5 Vols. Oedipus Tyrannus—Oedipus Coloneus — Antigone — Electra — Ajax. By F. A. Paley, M.A., LL.D.

Xenophon: Anabasis. 6 Vols. Macmichael's Edition, revised by J. E. Melhuish, M.A. In separate Books.
Book I.—Books II. and III.—Book IV. —Book V.—Book VI.—Book VII.

—— Hellenica. Book I. and Book II. By the Rev. L. D. Dowdall, M.A., B.D. 2s each.

Cicero. 3 Vols. De Amicitia—De Senectute —Epistolae Selectae. By George Long, M.A.

Ovid. Selections from the Amores, Tristia, Heroides, and Metamorphoses. By A. J. Macleane, M.A.

Terence. 4 Vols. Andria—Hauton-Timorumenos — Phormio — Adelphoe. By Prof. Wagner.

Virgil's Works. 12 Vols. Abridged from Prof. Conington's Edition by Professors Nettleship and Wagner and Rev. J. G. Sheppard.

Cambridge Texts

Aeschylus. By F. A. Paley, M.A., LL.D. 2s.

Caesar De Bello Gallico. By G. Long, M.A. 1s. 6d.

Cicero De Senetute et De Amicitia et Epistolae Selectae. By G. Long, M.A. 1s. 6d.

Ciceronis Orationes in Verrem. By G. Long, M.A. 2s. 6d.

Euripides. By F. A. Paley, M.A., LL.D. 3 vols. 2s. each.

Herodotus. By J. W. Blakesley, B.D. 2 vols. 2s. 6d. each.

Horatius. By A. J. Macleane, M.A. 1s. 6d.

Juvenalis et Persius. By A. J. Macleane, M.A. 1s. 6d.

Lucretius. By H. A. J. Munro, M.A. 2s.

Ovidius. By A. Palmer, M.A., G. M. Edwards, M.A., G. A. Davies, M.A., S. G. Owen, M.A., A. E. Housman, M.A., and J. P. Postgate, M.A., Litt.D. 3 Vols. 2s. each.

Sallusti Catilina et Jugurtha. By G. Long, M.A. 1s. 6d.

Sophocles. By F. A. Paley, M.A., LL.D. 2s. 6d.

Terentius. By W. Wagner, Ph.D. 2s.

Thucydides. By J. W. Donaldson, B.D. 2 vols. 2s. each.

Vergilius. By J. Conington, M.A. 2s.

Xenophontis Expeditio Cyri. By J. F. Macmichael, M.A. 1s. 6d.

Novum Testamentum Graece. Edited by F. H. Scrivener, M.A. 4s. 6d.

—— Editio Major. Containing the readings approved by Bp. Westcott and Dr. Hort, and those adopted by the revisers, etc. Small post 8vo. 7s. 6d.
An Edition with wide margins. Half-bound, price 12s.

Critical Editions and Texts

Catullus. Edited by J. P. Postgate, M.A., Litt.D. Fcap. 8vo. 3s.

Livy. The first five Books. Prendeville's edition revised by J. H. Freese, M.A. Books I., II., III., IV., V. 1s. 6d. each.

Lucan. The Pharsalia. By C. E. Haskins, M.A. With an Introduction by W. E. Heitland, M.A. Demy 8vo. 14s.

Lucretius. Titi Lucreti Cari de rerum natura libri sex. Edited with Notes, Introduction, and Translation, by the late H. A. J. Munro. 3 vols. 8vo. Vols. I. and II. Introduction, Text and Notes. 18s. Vol. III. Translation, 6s.

Ovid. The Metamorphoses. Book XIII. With Introduction and Notes by Prof. C. H. Keene, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—— The Metamorphoses. Book XIV. With Introduction and Notes by Prof. C. H. Keene, M.A. 2s. 6d.

 Books XIII. and XIV. together. 3s. 6d.

Plato. The Proem to the Republic of Plato. (Book I. and Book II. chaps. 1—10). Edited, with Introduction, Critical Notes, and Commentary, by Prof. T. G. Tucker, Litt.D. 6s.

Propertius. Sexti Propertii Carmina recognovit J. P. Postgate, Litt.D. 4to. 3s. net.

Theocritus. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by R. J. Cholmeley, M.A. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Thucydides. The History of the Peloponnesian War. With Notes and a Collation of the MSS. By the late R. Shilleto, M.A. Book I. 8vo. 6s. 6d. Book II. . 5s. 6d.

Corpus Poetarum Latinorum, a se aliisque denuo recognitorum et brevi lectionum varietate instructorum, edidit Johannes Percival Postgate, Litt.D. Tom. I. quo continentur Ennius, Lucretius, Catullus, Horatius, Vergilius, Tibullus, Propertius, Ovidius. Large post 4to. 21s. net. Or in Two Parts sewed, 9s. each net.
Part III. containing Grattius, Manilius, Phaedrus, Aetna, Persius, Lucan, Valerius Flaccus. 9s. net.
 To be completed in 2 volumes.

Corpus Poetarum Latinorum. Edited by Walker. 1 thick vol. 8vo. Cloth, 18s.

Latin and Greek Class Books

BELL'S ILLUSTRATED LATIN READERS

Edited by E. C. Marchant, M.A.

Scalae Primae. A Selection of Simple Stories for Translation into English. With Vocabulary. By J. G. Spencer, B.A. Pott 8vo. with 29 Illustrations. 1s.

Scalae Mediae. Short Extracts from Eutropius and Caesar. With Vocabulary. By Percy A. Underhill, M.A. Pott 8vo. with 20 Illustrations. 1s.

Scalae Tertiae. Selections in Prose and Verse from Phaedrus, Ovid, Nepos and Cicero. With Vocabulary. By E. C. Marchant, M.A. Pott 8vo. with 28 Illustrations. 1s.

BELL'S ILLUSTRATED LATIN COURSE

FOR THE FIRST YEAR IN THREE PARTS

By E. C. Marchant, M.A., & J. G. Spencer, B.A.

Crown 8vo., with Coloured Plates and numerous other Illustrations. Price 1s. 6d. each.

Latin Primer. By the Rev. A. C. Clapin, M.A. 1s.

Eclogæ Latinæ; or, First Latin Reading Book. With Notes and Vocabulary by the late Rev. P. Frost, M.A. 1s. 6d.

Latin Exercises and Grammar Papers. By T. Collins, M.A. 2s. 6d.

Unseen Papers in Latin Prose and Verse. By T. Collins, M.A. 2s. 6d.

First Exercises in Latin Prose Composition. By E. A. Wells, M.A. With Vocabulary. 1s.

Materials for Latin Prose Composition. By the late Rev. P. Frost, M.A. 2s. Key, 4s. net.

Passages for Translation into Latin Prose. By Professor H. Nettleship, M.A. 3s. A Key, 4s. 6d. net.

Latin Prose for London Students. By ARTHUR BAKER, M.A. 2s.

Easy Translations from Nepos, Caesar, Cicero, Livy, &c., for Retranslation into Latin. By T. COLLINS, M.A. 2s.

Latin Syntax Exercises. By L. D. WAINWRIGHT, M.A. In Five Parts. 8d. each.

Part I. The "Ut" Book, with Ne, Quominus, Quin.
Part II. Conditional Sentences with Dum and Dummodo.
Part III. The "Cum" Book.
Part IV. The Oratio Obliqua Book.
Part V. The "Qui" Book, with Utinam, Quasi, &c.

A Latin Verse Book. By the late Rev. P. FROST, M.A. 2s. Key, 5s. net.

Latin Elegiac Verse, Easy Exercises in. By the Rev. J. PENROSE. 2s. Key, 3s. 6d. net.

Foliorum Silvula. Part I. Passages for Translation into Latin Elegiac and Heroic Verse. By H. A. HOLDEN, LL.D. 7s. 6d.

Res Romanae, being brief Aids to the History, Geography, Literature and Antiquities of Ancient Rome for less advanced students. By E. P. COLERIDGE, B.A. With 3 maps. 2s. 6d.

Greek Verbs. By J. S. BAIRD, T.C.D. 2s. 6d.

Analecta Græca Minora. With Notes and Dictionary. By the late Rev. P. FROST, M.A. 2s.

Unseen Papers in Greek Prose and Verse. By T. COLLINS, M.A. 3s.

Notes on Greek Accents. By the Rt. Rev. A. BARRY, D.D. 1s.

Res Graecae. Being Aids to the study of the History, Geography, Archæology, and Literature of Ancient Athens. By E. P. COLERIDGE, B.A. With 5 Maps, 7 Plans, and 17 other illustrations. 5s.

Notabilia Quaedam: or the Principal Tenses of the Irregular Greek Verbs, and Elementary Greek, Latin, and French Constructions. 1s.

Anthologia Latina. A Selection of Latin Poetry, from Naevius to Boëthius, with Notes. By Rev. F. ST. JOHN THACKERAY. 4s. 6d.

Anthologia Graeca. A Selection of Greek Poetry, with Notes. By F. ST. JOHN THACKERAY. 4s. 6d.

MATHEMATICS AND SCIENCE

Cambridge Mathematical Series

Arithmetic, with 8000 Examples. By C. PENDLEBURY, M.A. With or without Answers. 4s. 6d.

In Two Parts. 2s. 6d. each. A Key to Part II., 7s. 6d. net.
The EXAMPLES, in a separate volume, 3s. Or in Two Parts, 1s. 6d. and 2s

Commercial Arithmetic. By C. PENDLEBURY, M.A., and W. S. BEARD, F.R.G.S. 2s. 6d. Part I separately, 1s.

Arithmetic for Indian Schools. By C. PENDLEBURY, M.A., and S. TAIT, M.A., B.Sc. 3s.

Elementary Algebra for use in Indian Schools. By J. T. HATHORNTHWAITE, M.A. 2s.

Choice and Chance. An Elementary Treatise on Permutations, Combinations, and Probability, with 640 Exercises. By W. A. WHITWORTH, M.A. 6s.

—— DCC Exercises, including Hints for the Solution of all the Questions in "Choice and Chance." 6s.

Euclid. Books I.—VI., and part of Book XI. By HORACE DEIGHTON, M.A. 4s. 6d., or Book I., 1s. Books I. and II., 1s. 6d. Books I.—III., 2s. 6d. Books I.—IV., 3s. Books III. and IV., 1s. 6d. Books V.—XII., 2s. 6d. Key, 5s. net.

Introduction to Euclid, including Euclid I., 1—26, with Explanations and numerous Easy Exercises. By HORACE DEIGHTON, M.A., and O. Emtage, B.A. 1s. 6d.

Euclid. Exercises on Euclid and in Modern Geometry. By J. MCDOWELL, M.A. 6s.

Elementary Trigonometry. By CHARLES PENDLEBURY, M.A., F.R.A.S. 4s. 6d.

Short Course of Elementary Plane Trigonometry. By CHARLES PENDLEBURY, M.A. 2s. 6d.

Elementary Trigonometry. By J. M. DYER, M.A., and the Rev. R. H. WHITCOMBE, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Trigonometry. Introduction to Plane Trigonometry. By the Rev. T. G. VYVYAN, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Elementary Mensuration. By B. T. MOORE, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Conic Sections, treated Geometrically. By W. H. BESANT, Sc.D., F.R.S. 4s. 6d. Key, 5s. net.

Elementary Conics, being the first 8 chapters of the above. 2s. 6d.

Examples in Analytical Conics for Beginners. By W. M. BAKER, M.A. 2s. 6d.

Conics, the Elementary Geometry of. By Rev. C. TAYLOR, D.D. 4s. 6d.

Roulettes and Glissettes. By W. H. BESANT, Sc D., F.R.S. 5s.

Solid Geometry, An Elementary Treatise on. By W. S. ALDIS, M.A. 6s.

Analytical Geometry for Beginners. By Rev. T. G. Vyvyan, M.A. Part I. The Straight Line and Circle. 2s. 6d.

Geometrical Optics. An Elementary Treatise by Prof. W. S. Aldis. 4s.

Hydromechanics. By W. H. Besant, Sc.D., F.R.S. Part I. Hydrostatics. 5s.

Elementary Hydrostatics. By W. H. Besant, Sc.D. 4s. 6d. Solutions, 5s. net.

The Elements of Applied Mathematics. Including Kinetics, Statics, and Hydrostatics. By C. M. Jessop, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Elementary Dynamics. By W. M. Baker, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Elementary Dynamics for the use of Colleges and Schools. By W. Garnett, M.A., D.C.L. 6s.

Dynamics, A Treatise on. By W. H. Besant, Sc.D., F.R.S. 10s. 6d.

Heat, An Elementary Treatise on. By W. Garnett, M.A., D.C.L. 4s. 6d.

Elementary Physics, Examples and Examination Papers in. By W. Gallatly, M.A. 4s.

Mechanics, A Collection of Problems in Elementary. By W. Walton, M.A. 6s.

Mathematical Examples. For Army and Indian Civil Service Candidates. By J. M. Dyer, M.A., and R. Prowde Smith, M.A. 6s.

Uniform Volume.

Geometrical Drawing. For Army and other Examinations. By R. Harris. 3s. 6d.

Other Mathematical Works

A Shilling Arithmetic. By Charles Pendlebury, M.A., and W. S. Beard, F.R.G.S. 1s. With Answers, 1s. 4d.

Elementary Arithmetic. By the same Authors. 1s. 6d. With or without Answers.

Graduated Arithmetic, for Junior and Private Schools. By the same Authors. In seven parts, in stiff canvas covers. Parts I., II., and III., 3d. each; Parts IV., V., and VI., 4d. each; Part VII., 6d. Answers to Parts I. and II., 4d.; Parts III.-VII., 4d. each.

Arithmetic, Examination Papers in. By C. Pendlebury, M.A. 2s. 6d. Key, 5s. net.

Graduated Exercises in Addition (Simple and Compound). By W. S. Beard, F.R.G.S. 1s.

Trigonometry, Examination Papers in. By G. H. Ward, M.A. 2s. 6d. Key, 5s. net.

Pure Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, A Compendium of Facts and Formulæ in. By G. R. Smalley, F.R.A.S. New Edition, revised by J. McDowell, M.A., F.R.A.S. 2s.

Euclid, The Elements of. The Enunciations and Figures. By the late J. Brasse, D.D. 1s. Without the Figures, 6d.

Hydrodynamics, A Treatise on. By A. B. Basset, M.A., F.R.S. Vol. I. 10s. 6d. Vol. II. 12s. 6d.

Hydrodynamics and Sound, An Elementary Treatise on. By A. B. Basset, M.A., F.R.S. 8s.

Physical Optics, A Treatise on. By A. B. Basset, M.A., F.R.S. 16s.

Analytical Geometry. By Rev. T. G. Vyvyan, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Book-keeping

Book-keeping by Double Entry, Theoretical and Practical, including a Society of Arts Examination Paper worked out. By J. T. Medhurst, A.K.C., F.S.S. 1s.

Book-keeping, Examination Papers in. Compiled by John T. Medhurst, A.K.C., F.S.S. 3s. Key, 2s. 6d. net.

Book-keeping, Graduated Exercises and Examination Papers in. Compiled by P. Murray, F.S.S.S., F.Sc.S. (Lond.) 2s. 6d.

Text-Book of the Principles and Practice of Book-keeping and Estate-Office Work. By Prof. A. W. Thomson, B.Sc. 5s.

Bell's Science Series

Edited by Percy Groom, M.A. (Cantab. et Oxon.), F.L.S., Lecturer on Botany, and G. M. Minchin, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Applied Mathematics in the Royal Indian Engineering College, Cooper's Hill.

Elementary Botany. By Percy Groom, M.A., F.L.S. Second Edition. With 275 Illustrations. 3s. 6d.

An Introduction to the Study of the Comparative Anatomy of Animals. By G. C. Bourne, M.A. With numerous Illustrations. Vol. I. 4s. 6d.
[Vol. II. in the Press

The Student's Dynamics: comprising Statics and Kinetics. By Professor G. M. Minchin, M.A., F.R.S. 3s. 6d.

Elementary General Science. By D. E. Jones, B.Sc., and D. S. McNair, Ph.D., B.Sc. [In the Press

Physiography. By H. N. Dickson, F.R.S.E., F.R.Met.Soc., F.R.G.S. [In the Press

Chemistry. By Professor James Walker, D.Sc. [In the Press

Mental and Moral Science

Psychology: An Introductory Manual for the use of University Students, designed chiefly for the London B.A. and B.Sc. By F. Ryland, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Ethics: An Introductory Manual for the use of University Students. By F. Ryland, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Logic. An Introductory Manual by F. Ryland, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Handbook of the History of Philosophy. By E. Belfort Bax. 5s.

History of Modern Philosophy. By R. Falckenberg. Trans. by Prof. A. C. Armstrong. Demy 8vo. 16s.

Music

Music. A complete Text-Book of Theoretical Music, with Glossary of Musical Terms, Exercises on Harmony, and an Appendix of Examination Papers. By Prof. H. C. Banister. 5s.

Music, A Concise History of, from the Commencement of the Christian Era to the present time. By Rev. H. G. Bonavia Hunt, Mus. Doc. 3s. 6d.

MODERN LANGUAGES

ENGLISH

GRAMMARS

By C. P. Mason, B.A., F.C.P.

First Notions of Grammar for Young Learners. 1s.

First Steps in English Grammar, for Junior Classes. 1s.

Outlines of English Grammar, for the Use of Junior Classes. 2s.

English Grammar; including the principles of Grammatical Analysis. 3s. 6d.

A Shorter English Grammar, with copious and carefully graduated Exercises, based upon the author's English Grammar. 3s. 6d.

Practice and Help in the Analysis of Sentences. 2s.

English Grammar Practice, consisting of the Exercises of the Shorter English Grammar in a separate form. 1s.

Remarks on the Subjunctive and the so-called Potential Mood. 6d.

Blank Sheets Ruled and headed for Analysis. 1s per dozen.

Preparatory English Grammar. By W. Benson, B.A. 8d.

Rudiments of English Grammar and Analysis. By Ernest Adams, Ph.D. 1s.

Examples for Analysis in Verse and Prose. Selected and arranged by F. Edwards. 1s.

Elements of the English Language. By Ernest Adams, Ph.D. Revised by J. F. Davis, D.Lit., M.A. 4s. 6d.

History of the English Language. By Prof. T. R. Lounsbury. 4s. 6d.

Handbooks of English Literature. Edited by Prof. Hales. 3s. 6d. each.

The Age of Chaucer. By F. J. Snell. With an Introduction by Professor Hales.

The Age of Shakespeare. By Thomas Seccombe and J. W. Allen. [Shortly

The Age of Milton. (1632—1660). By the Rev. J. H. B. Masterman, M.A., with Introduction, etc., by J. Bass Mullinger, M.A.

The Age of Dryden. (1660—1700). By R. Garnett, LL.D., C.B.

The Age of Pope. (1700—1744). By John Dennis.

The Age of Johnson. (1744—1798). By Thomas Seccombe.

The Age of Wordsworth. (1798—1832). By Prof. C. H. Herford, Litt.D.

The Age of Tennyson (1830—1870). By Prof. Hugh Walker.

Introduction to English Literature. By Henry S. Pancoast. 5s.

Ten Brink's Early English Literature. Translated from the German. 3 vols. 3s. 6d. each. Vol. I. (to Wiclif). Vol. II. (Wiclif, Chaucer, Earliest Drama. Renaissance). Vol. III. (to the Death of Surrey).

Essays and Essay-Writing, for Public Examinations. By A. W. Ready, B.A. 3s. 6d.

Précis and Précis-Writing. By A. W. Ready, B.A. 3s. 6d.

Smithson's Elocution and the Dramatic Art. New edition, revised by Charles Reeve Taylor, M.A., LL.B. 3s. 6d.

Notes on Shakespeare's Plays. With Introduction, Summary, Notes (Etymological and Explanatory), Prosody, Grammatical Peculiarities, etc. By T. Duff Barnett, B.A. 1s. each.

Midsummer Night's Dream. — Julius Cæsar. — The Tempest. — Macbeth.—Henry V.—Hamlet.—Merchant of Venice.—King Richard II.—King John.—King Richard III.—King Lear.—Coriolanus.—Twelfth Night.—As You Like It.—Much Ado About Nothing.

Bell's English Classics

Browning, Selections from. Edited by F. Ryland, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—— Strafford. Edited by E. H. Hickey. With Introduction by S. R. Gardiner. LL.D. 2s. 6d.

Burke's Letters on a Regicide Peace. I. and II. Edited by H. G. Keene, M.A., C.I.E. 3s.; sewed, 2s.

Byron's Childe Harold. Edited by H. G. KEENE, M.A., C.I.E. 3s. 6d. Also Cantos I. and II., sewed, 1s. 9d. Cantos III. and IV., sewed, 1s. 9d.

—— Siege of Corinth. Edited by P. HORDERN. 1s. 6d.; sewed, 1s.

Carlyle's "Hero as Man of Letters." Edited by MARK HUNTER, M.A. 2s.; sewed. 1s. 6d.

—— "Hero as Divinity." By MARK HUNTER, M.A. 2s.; sewed, 1s. 6d.

Chaucer's Minor Poems, Selections from. Edited by J. B. BILDERBECK, B.A., 2s. 6d.; sewed, 1s. 9d.

De Quincey's Revolt of the Tartars and the English Mail-Coach. Edited by CECIL M. BARROW, M.A., and MARK HUNTER, B.A., 3s.; sewed, 2s.

 Revolt of the Tartars, separately, sewed, 1s. 6d.

—— Opium Eater. Edited by MARK HUNTER, B.A. 4s. 6d.; sewed, 3s. 6d.

Goldsmith's Good-Natured Man and She Stoops to Conquer. Edited by K. DEIGHTON. Each, 2s. cloth; 1s. 6d. sewed. The two plays together, sewed, 2s. 6d.

—— Traveller and Deserted Village. Edited by the Rev. A. E. WOODWARD, M.A. Cloth, 2s., or separately, sewed, 10d. each.

Irving's Sketch Book. Edited by R. G. OXENHAM, M.A. Sewed, 1s. 6d.

Johnson's Life of Addison. Edited by F. RYLAND. 2s. 6d.

—— Life of Swift. Edited by F. RYLAND, M.A. 2s.

—— Life of Pope. Edited by F. RYLAND, M.A. 2s. 6d.

 The Lives of Swift and Pope, together, sewed, 2s. 6d.

Johnson's Life of Milton. Edited by F. RYLAND, M.A. 2s. 6d.

—— Life of Dryden. Edited by F. RYLAND, M.A. 2s. 6d.

 The Lives of Milton and Dryden, together, sewed, 2s. 6d.

—— Lives of Prior and Congreve. Edited by F. RYLAND, M.A. 2s.

Lamb's Essays. Selected and Edited by K. DEIGHTON. 3s.; sewed, 2s.

Longfellow, Selections from, including Evangeline. Edited by M. T. QUINN, M.A. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 1s. 9d.

 Evangeline, separately, sewed, 1s. 3d.

Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome. Edited by P. HORDERN. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 1s. 9d.

—— Essay on Clive. Edited by CECIL BARROW, M.A. 2s.; sewed, 1s. 6d.

Massinger's A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Edited by K. DEIGHTON. 3s.; sewed, 2s.

Milton's Paradise Lost. Books III. and IV. Edited by R. G. OXENHAM, M.A. 2s.; sewed, 1s. 6d., or separately, sewed, 10d. each —— Paradise Regained. Edited by K. DEIGHTON. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 1s. 9d.

Pope's Essay on Man. Edited by F. RYLAND, M.A. 1s. 6d.; sewed, 1s.

Pope, Selections from. Containing Essay on Criticism, Rape of the Lock, Temple of Fame, Windsor Forest. Edited by K. DEIGHTON. 2s. 6d.; sewed, 1s. 9d.

Scott's Lady of the Lake. Edited by the Rev. A. E. WOODWARD, M.A. 3s. 6d. The Six Cantos separately, sewed, 8d. each.

Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar. Edited by T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. (Lond.). 2s.

—— Merchant of Venice. Edited by T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. (Lond.). 2s.

—— Tempest. Edited by T. DUFF BARNETT, B.A. (Lond.). 2s.

Wordsworth's Excursion. Book I. Edited by M. T. QUINN, M.A. Sewed. 1s. 3d.

Readers

Books for Young Readers. Illustrated. 6d. each

For Infants.

Æsop's Fables
The Old Boat-House, etc.
Tot and the Cat, etc.
The Cat and the Hen, etc.
The New-Born Lamb, etc.

For Standards I. and II.

The Two Parrots
The Lost Pigs
The Story of Three Monkeys
The Story of a Cat. Told by Herself
The Blind Boy, etc.
Queen Bee and Busy Bee
Gull's Crag

Bell's Reading Books. Post 8vo. Cloth. Illustrated. 1s. each

Standard III.

Great Deeds in English History
Adventures of a Donkey
Grimm's Tales
Great Englishmen Great Irishmen
Andersen's Tales
Life of Columbus

Standard IV.

Uncle Tom's Cabin
Swiss Family Robinson
Great Englishwomen
Great Scotsmen
Edgeworth's Tales
Gatty's Parables from Nature
Scott's Talisman

Standard V.

Dickens' Oliver Twist Dickens' Little Nell Masterman Ready
Marryat's Poor Jack Arabian Nights
Gulliver's Travels Lyrical Poetry for Boys and Girls Vicar of Wakefield

Standards VI. and VII.

Scott's Ivanhoe
Lamb's Tales from Shakespeare Robinson Crusoe Tales of the Coast Settlers in Canada
Southey's Life of Nelson
Sir Roger de Coverley

Bell's Geographical Readers. By M. J. Barrington-Ward, M.A.

The Child's Geography Illustrated. Stiff paper cover. 6d.

The Map and the Compass. (Standard I.) Illustrated. 10d.

The Round World. (Standard II.) Illustrated. 1s.

About England. (Standard III.) With Illustrations and Coloured Map. 1s. 4d.

Bell's Animal Life Readers. A Series of Reading Books for the Standards, designed to inculcate the humane treatment of animals. Illustrated by Harrison Weir and others.

 Full Prospectus on application.

Bell's History Readers:

Early English History (to the Norman Conquest). Adapted for Standard III. With 30 Illustrations. 1s.

Stories from English History, 1066-1485. Adapted for Standard IV. With 31 Illustrations. 1s. 3d.

The Tudor Period. (1485—1603). Adapted for Standard V. With 43 Illustrations. 1s. 3d.

The Stuart Period. (1603-1714). Adapted for Standard VI. With 57 Illustrations. 1s. 6d.

The Hanoverian Period. Adapted for Standard VII. [In the Press

FRENCH AND GERMAN

Gasc's French Course

First French Book. 1s.

Second French Book. 1s. 6d.

Key to First and Second French Books. 3s. 6d. net.

French Fables for Beginners, in Prose. 1s. 6d.

Histoires Amusantes et Instructives. 2s.

Practical Guide to Modern French Conversation. 1s. 6d.

French Poetry for the Young. With Notes. 1s. 6d.

Materials for French Prose Composition. 3s. Key, 6s. net.

Prosateurs Contemporains. With Notes. 3s. 6d.

Le Petit Compagnon; a French Talk-Book for Little Children. 1s. 6d.

Gasc's French Dictionaries

An Improved Modern Pocket Dictionary of the French and English Languages. 16mo. 2s. 6d.

Concise Dictionary of the French and English Dictionaries. Medium 16mo. 3s. 6d.

French-English and English-French Dictionary. 8th Edition, reset and Enlarged. Large 8vo. 12s. 6d.

By the Rev. A. C. Clapin

French Grammar for Public Schools. 2s. 6d. Key, 3s. 6d. net.

French Primer. 1s.

Primer of French Philology, with Exercises, for Public Schools. 1s.

English Passages for Translation into French. 2s. 6d. Key, 4s. net.

A German Grammar for Public Schools. By the Rev. A. C. Clapin, and F. Holl-Müller. 2s. 6d.

German Primer. 1s.

Materials for German Prose Composition. By Dr. C. A. Buchheim. 4s. 6d. A Key to Pts. I. and II., 3s. net. Pts. III. and IV., 4s. net.

First Book of German Prose. Being Parts I. and II. of the above, with Vocabulary. 1s. 6d.

History of German Literature. By Professor Kuno Francke. 10s. net.

Handbook of German Literature, By Mary E. Phillips, L.L.A. With Introduction by Dr. A. Weiss. 3s. 6d.

Kluge's Etymological Dictionary of the German Language. Translated by J. F. Davis, D.Litt. (Lond.). 4to. 7s. 6d.

Foreign Classics

Charles XII. par Voltaire. By L. Direy. 1s. 6d.

German Ballads from Uhland, Goethe, and Schiller. By C. L. Bielefeld. 1s. 6d.

Aventures de Télémaque, par Fénelon. By C. J. Delille. 2s. 6d.

Select Fables of La Fontaine. By F. E. A. Gasc. 1s. 6d.

Picciola, by X. B. Saintine. By Dr. Dubuc. 1s. 6d.

Lamartine's Le Tailleur de Pierres de Saint-Point. By J. Boïelle, B.-ès-L. 1s. 6d.

Goethe's Hermann und Dorothea. By E. Bell, M.A., and E. Wolfel. 1s. 6d.

Schiller's Wallenstein. By Dr. Buchheim. 5s. Or the Lager and Piccolomini, 2s. 6d. Wallenstein's Tod, 2s. 6d.

Schiller's Maid of Orleans. By Dr. W. Wagner. 1s. 6d.

Schiller's Maria Stuart. By V. Kastner, 1s. 6d.

LONDON: GEORGE BELL & SONS, YORK STREET, COVENT GARDEN.

BENEDICTINE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
871P5AU.W C001
AULUARIA, WITH NOTES CRITICAL AND EXEGET

3 2811 00083 6388
T5-AGW-282